If it can, is it prepared to have United States interceptor squadrons take over the RCAF's air defence job in Canada?

If it can't, is it prepared to increase the defence budget to buy the Arrow and bring on the possibility of higher taxes?

UP TO GOVERNMENT

Only the government can answer these questions. A decision on the Arrow is expected by March, by which time more than $460,000,000 will have been poured into the program and six prototypes of the plane will have been flown by the builder, Avro Aircraft Limited of Malton, Ont.

Let's go back to 1946 when the government had to face the question whether Canada should develop and build its own military aircraft.

Air Marshal W. A. Curtis, then chief of the air staff, argued that Canada never again should have to depend on its allies in wartime for aircraft. He maintained that during the Second World War the RCAF was always the last to obtain the latest planes.

The government compromised. Avro designed and built the CF-100 jet interceptor while Canadair Limited of Montreal built the American Sabre fighter under licence.

Today, many armed forces officers say privately that the policy of Canada developing and building its own military planes was a sound one when adopted a decade ago.

POLICY OUTDATED

But they argue this policy has been overtaken by the swiftness of military technological advances and that this country now would find it better for both security and economic reasons to buy its planes from the U.S. or Britain.

The emphasis in Canadian military planning is on a short, violent war in which a country's ability to mass-produce military aircraft would be meaningless. The planes would have to be ready when hostilities broke out not less than three years or even two or three months later.

Politically, it would appear impossible for the government now to ditch the Arrow and at the same time order an interceptor out of U.S. production. All the expenditures would go to American industry.

Even before the CF-100 was in RCAF squadron service, Avro began working on designs for a supersonic interceptor. It conceived the development go-ahead from the government in 1953.

The project had cost $42,000,000 to deve...p and it was expected the Arrow's development would cost twice as much.

COST MOUNTED

But the estimate kept going up. By late 1956 it had reached $500,000,000 and the Arrow then was still 18 months away from its first flight. Avro had wanted to build a single-engined supersonic plane but the RCAF specified two engines and two seats for greater flexibility and safety over Canada's sub-Arctic.

Avro unveiled the Arrow at its plant Oct. 4, 1957. The chief speaker, Defence Minister Pearkes, said at the time that missiles and aircraft "will, in fact, become complementary — each can do things which the other cannot do and for some years to come both will be required in the inventory of any nation seeking to maintain an adequate deterrent to war."

Unfortunately for Avro, Oct. 4, 1957, was the day chosen by the Russians to launch the world's first earth satellite and put it in orbit.

The placing of Sputnik I in outer space showed that the Soviets had the knowledge and wherewithal to fire with fair accuracy intercontinental ballistic missiles.

Also the Arrow made its preliminary flights last spring and summer, Mr. Pearkes did not waver from his contention that manned interceptors were still important in the air defence system.

CONTINUING NEED

On July 4 he told the Commons estimates committee "There are important factors necessitating the continued use of manned interceptors in the air defence system for many years, indeed for as far as we can see into the future."

Three days later, Mr. Pearkes said before the same committee: "I am convinced, in my own mind, that an aircraft of the Arrow type will be required." The American Bomarc anti-aircraft missile "will not replace the manned interceptor," he said.

(The name Bomarc is derived from the names of the organizations that helped develop it — Boeing Airplane Company and University of Michigan Aeronautical Research Centre.)

This picture was taken the day the fourth and latest prototype was displayed to the public at the Avro plant in the Toronto suburb of Malton on October 4, 1957. But doubts about the wisdom of putting the Arrow into full production had already been raised.

Lt.-Gen. Guy Simonds, former chief of the general staff, argued that expenditure on the Arrow was "money down the drain" and that Canada should concentrate on defence against missiles.

Maj.-Gen. W. H. S. Macklin, former Army adjutant - general, contended the aircraft industry was leading the defence department around by the nose.

EXPENSIVE CONCEIT

On Aug. 6 the estimates committee in its final report expressed its concern in the growing investment entering into any subsequent weapons program of this major magnitude without first negotiating for some cost-sharing agreement with other NATO member countries or the United States.

Mr. Pearkes undertook a mission to Washington to try to persuade the U.S. defence department to buy some Arrows. He didn't expect success — the previous Liberal administration had been unable to sell the CF-100 in Washington—and didn't achieve any.

On Sept. 23, Prime Minister Diefenbaker announced at a press conference that two Bomarc guided missile stations would go into operation in Canada in 1961 at a cost of $340,000,000 and that the Arrow decision would be delayed until spring.

He said:

"The government has concluded that missiles should be introduced into the Canadian air defence system and that the number of supersonic interceptor aircraft required for the RCAF Air Defence Command will be substantially less than could have been foreseen a few years ago. If in fact such aircraft will be required at all in the 1960s in view of the rapid strides being made in missiles by both the U.S.S.R. and U.S.A."

LONG PROJECT

"The development of the Canadian supersonic interceptor aircraft, the CF-105 or Arrow, was commenced in 1953 and even under the best of circumstances it will not be available for effective use in squadrons until late in 1961.

"Since the project began, revolutionary changes have taken place which have made necessary a review of the program in the light of anticipated conditions when the aircraft comes into use. The preponderance of expert opinion is that by the 1960s manned aircraft, however outstanding, will be less effective in meeting the threat than previously expected."

The RCAF and Avro were stunned by the announcement. The air force could see its approaching end as a combat flying force.

But the government was appalled by the cost of Arrow production. Mr. Diefenbaker estimated the cost of 100 Arrows at $900,000,000—after substitution of an American armament control system and air-to-air missile for the Canadian Astra armament control and Canadian-produced Sparrow missile. Without this substitution, 100 Arrows would have cost $1,250,000,000, the prime minister estimated.

COMPLEX WEAPONS

The great disadvantage with modern weapons is their complexity. The Arrow, for instance, is not a complete weapon in itself but only part of a weapon system.

Besides its engines it needs a missile for armament, a complex electronics system to fire the missile at the right moment, a radar system to "lock on" the target, and ground control radar to put it within striking distance of a hostile bomber. And 27 Arrow prototypes had to be ordered just to work out the bugs before full production could begin.

Likewise, the Bomarc is not a complete weapon. It requires the robot SAGE (semi - automatic ground environment) to compute an interception point for it and fire it automatically. The SAGE required in Canada for two Bomarc sites will cost $100,000,000. In addition, new ground radars will be needed.

However, two Bomarc sites with a total of 112 launching platforms will still be much cheaper than 100 Arrows.

In any event, the official talk around Ottawa after Mr. Diefenbaker's Sept. 23 announcement was that the Arrow was doomed.

THREAT REDUCED

Mr. Pearkes made a speech in which he said the threat of the manned bomber was "materially reduced" and that the inland defence against this threat was consequently reduced. Both the Arrow and the Bomarc were a defence against the manned bomber.

This seemed to be the last official word until Nov. 8 when RCAF Air Marshal Roy Slemon, deputy commander of North American Air Defence Command told a press conference at his headquarters at Colorado Springs, Colo., that the manned interceptor is an "inescapable requirement for as long as we can see."

Air Marshal Slemon did not say the Canadian government should buy the Arrow. But he did say the Arrow would be the best interceptor available in North America until the U.S. F-108 is ready in five or six years.

He was supported by U.S. Gen. Earle Partridge, NORAD commander, who said manned interceptors are required for control of air space if for no other reason.

The point here is that the Bomarc cannot identify friend from foe and, of course, exercises no judgment. The Bomarc which the RCAF will get is designed for a range of more than 375 miles but it has not yet been fully tested. The RCAF says the Arrow will have a range of 600 miles and that it is needed especially for the vital task of identification and reconnaissance.

Air Marshal Slemon and Gen. Partridge appeared remarkably unimpressed by missiles.

Slemon said the advent of the 5,000-mile intercontinental ballistic missile has created "infantile disease" in some quarters.

Many persons have come to the view effective effort should be turned to missiles, he said. But as long as the potential enemy possessed manned bombers in any appreciable numbers, that threat could not be ignored.

Slemon added that if North America fails to maintain defences against the manned bomber, the bomber by then could be decisive if used against this continent.

MANNED JETS NEEDED

He said ground-to-air missiles would be useful in defence against the manned bombers but that manned interceptors were also needed.

Partridge said what worries NORAD about missile systems is that it has to be presumed they will function properly. Faults could be found in an aircraft by flying it and bringing it back to base for any needed repairs. But missiles could not be recovered and checked for faults.

Slemon said it was "unfortunate" that Mr. Diefenbaker on Sept. 23 statement had been taken to mean that the "interceptor is out and the missile is in."

"This is by no means the case," he said.

The number of manned interceptors required would probably diminish gradually as more missiles came into use. But the interceptors still would be necessary for the foreseeable future. Experience had shown long-range interceptors gave the best results in air defence.

Air Marshal Slemon's statement caused a flurry in Ottawa.

COST THE PROBLEM

Mr. Pearkes said that if the cost of the Arrow could be substantially reduced the government might buy the plane.

Later, he said Mr. Diefenbaker's Sept. 23 statement still stands.

Mr. Diefenbaker gave a unit cost of $9,000,000 for the Arrow. This figure included development costs as well as the cost for the Arrow's armament and spare engines.

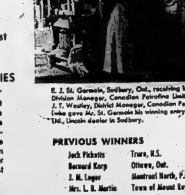
Avro recently quoted a price of $3,500,000. However, this figure does not include remaining development costs, armament or spare engines. Both Mr. Diefenbaker's and Avro's figures include the expensive armament control system.

Opposition Leader Pearson accused Mr. Pearkes of confusing the issue and demanded a full parliamentary investigation.

Behind the scenes, the RCAF added fuel to the controversy.

PRIVATE VIEWS

Some RCAF officers said privately that cancellation of the Arrow likely would jeopardize Canada's position in NORAD, that the U.S. would not welcome Canada as a full partner when this country was supplying only two Bomarc stations to the air defence system. They added that American squadrons might have to take over RCAF fighter bases.



The government does not relish the prospect of more American squadrons being based in Canada besides the two now at Harmon Field, Nfld., and Goose Bay, Labrador.

But it must balance this against the military requirement, cost and the economic and employment situation when it makes up its mind about the Arrow.

The RCAF has been such a strain on the defence budget—more than 10 per cent of this fiscal year's $1,600,000,000 — that no other major defence projects have been undertaken in the last few years. It has hamstrung the defence department in many ways and made the armed forces inflexible to a great extent.

Lake Huron Gale Warms Ontario Just Temporarily

Cold Air Mass Follows And Mercury Will Dip

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Canada was warming up today after being gripped in a deep freeze since the beginning of the month.

The mercury in cities from coast to coast registered temperatures considerably higher than those of the last two weeks.

In Toronto, the early morning temperature of 33 degrees was the highest recorded since Dec. 5 when it was 38. It was raining in Vancouver where the mercury was up to 46 degrees and warm chinook winds sent Calgary's morning temperature soaring to 42.

Regina, which registered a high temperature of 50 degrees and an overnight low of seven, had a morning reading of 30.

Winnipeg, usually one of the coldest Prairie centres, had an overnight low of one below and an early morning temperature of 20 degrees. Today was expected to warm up to 20 degrees during the day.

MAY WARM UP

It was snowing in Ottawa and Montreal where the morning temperatures were 20 and three degrees respectively and expected to rise somewhat.

Ontario morning temperatures included: Windsor 32, Muskoka 13, Sudbury 6 and North Bay 2.

But the weather forecast said the warm readings were not expected to last long.

"The warmer readings are due to an intense storm centred around Lake Huron and Georgian Bay," the forecaster in Toronto said.

"It is moving towards the east, spreading snow and giving higher than average but cold air is coming right back."

EXPECT COLDER

A cold air mass usually follows a storm and afternoon temperatures in Toronto, London and Windsor were expected to drop back to below freezing. The mercury in Toronto was expected to dip to around 10 and 15 degrees below zero.

The weather forecaster said another storm was expected from Ohio Valley Thursday and would shoot the mercury into the 40's. It would be cool and wet with 15 degrees in the north.

Precipitation ranged from three to four inches of snow in centres around Georgian Bay and Lake Huron, seven inches at Thessalon and six inches at Sault Ste. Marie.

Snow measured 44 inches and Southampton three inches.

Liberal Motion Crushed by Que. Legislature

QUEBEC (CP) — Premier Maurice Duplessis Tuesday crushed a Liberal motion to have a Montreal outdoors columnist hauled before the Quebec Legislative Assembly.

Mr. Teller ruled the motion, by Rene Hamel, Liberal member for St. Maurice, irregular and out of order.

The motion was appealed by the Liberals and voted down 68-16 by Premier Duplessis' Union National government members with three independents.

It sought to have part of an article written by George Carpenter, executive editor and columnist for the Montreal Gazette, declared a breach of the privileges of the assembly, and a motion by Mr. Carpenter arrested by the assembly's sergeant-at-arms and taken to the bar of the assembly.

Purpose was to have Mr. Carpenter say whom he meant when he referred to a "poacher-poet" writing MLA" in his column Rod and Gun under the nom-de-plume "Jean Nicolet."

Mr. Teller said Mr. Hamel was actually trying to do in one two-hour session what can be done in three distinct motions. Combining the various steps in the proper procedure into one motion was irregular, he said.

Long-Drawn Out Case Ready to Go to Jury

TORONTO (CP) — The case of two former officials of Aconic Mining Corporation, charged with fraud in connection with issue of wash-trading shares, was expected to go to the jury today as the fifty-week Ontario Supreme Court trial took a new turn.

Clifford J. Butler, former general manager of Aconic and Joseph Beaudry, former geologist, both of Montreal, are accused on four counts in connection with Aconic's stock market crash in August, 1957. Washtrading is an operation in which the same person buys and sells stock in an effort to stimulate market activity.

Mr. Justice George Walsh was expected to address the jury this day.

Butler, the only one of the accused to testify in his own defence, said he did not know he was involved in wash-trading and added he interpreted wash-trading as an "unnecessary sale."

He said he was interested only in accumulating and not in maintaining an orderly market.

Butler said with the help of associates he and Beaudry secured $1,759,735 into the treasury of the company, which he formed with Beaudry in 1952.

"After stock crashed I knew Butler was bankrupt," defence counsel G. Arthur Smith told the court, but that look at though he was trying to defraud the public."

The charges were laid after Aconic stock dropped about $18 a share in one day.

URGENT MATTERS FACE PARLIAMENT TO OPEN JAN. 15

Cabinet Discusses Extensive Program

OTTAWA (CP) — The cabinet was to meet again today to discuss matters including a "fairly extensive" legislative program that Prime Minister Diefenbaker says will be covered in the new parliamentary session beginning Jan. 15.

Mr. Diefenbaker announced the date Tuesday after a day-long cabinet meeting but provided no specific details of his program. He said it is "fairly elementary" — perhaps secretaries are being considered — and he will hold a press conference later this week.

Another long Cabinet session appeared in prospect in view of probable government legislation and still opposition criticism on unemployment and federal fiscal policies among other matters.

LATE JULY DEADLINE

With the last hot session ended, it was suggested in some quarters that the Queen's royal tour ending in late July may provide the maximum possible length for the coming session.

There are hopes that the Queen, who arrives in June to open the St. Lawrence Seaway, will be able to prorogue Parliament.

There are ample possibilities for government legislation.

The last budget was thrown open for discussion when the House of Commons adjourned it last September and it is expected to drop or be withdrawn to permit comment this time.

FREIGHT RATES TOPIC

Revision of the Bill of Rights, up for final production decision in March, is another prime topic, along with amendments to the Canada Grain Act.

There is the possibility, it is understood, of legislation to provide crop insurance, more money for farm credit and greater federal control over the gas and oil industry.

The Royal commission report on price spreads in food products is due to be laid on the table of the House of Commons, along with a special study on social security which was undertaken earlier this year.

Revision of unemployment insurance legislation to increase benefits and the numbers of those qualified is also anticipated.

The Commons now has 208 Conservatives, 49 Liberals and eight CCF.

He Was Duped Coya Come Home Pleader States

WASHINGTON (AP) — Andy Knutson testified under oath Tuesday that political opponents of his wife, representative Coya Knutson (Dem. Minn.), duped him into signing a celebrated "Coya come home" appeal.

Knutson, 52, was the only Democrat in Congress to lose to a Republican in the Nov. 4 election. He told the House of Representatives Tuesday her husband's appeal was conspiracy to defeat effectively against her during the campaign.

The husband and wife, still at odds maritally, appeared before a House administrative committee created to check 1958 campaign expenditures.

Knutson said he never would have signed the May 4 comeback appeal had he known what was behind it.

"Yes, I was sober," he told a questioner.

A handwriting expert has attributed the original version to political ally of Odin Langen, the Republican who defeated Mrs. Knutson, Langen has disclaimed any part in what the congressional committee was conspiracy to get her to quit politics.

Will Request $39,214,500 for New Schools

TORONTO (CP) — The Metropolitan Toronto school board will request a $39,214,500 capital works budget for new schools in 1959, it was reported Tuesday night.

The new tentative budget will be presented to Metro officials this month.

Meanwhile, a proposal for negotiating a common salary schedule for 11 school boards in Metropolitan Toronto has met opposition from the Ontario Secondary School Teachers' Federation.

S. G. B. Robinson, general secretary of the federation, said Tuesday: "We're opposed to it. The body that hires the teachers and the body appointed by the taxpayers is the one which should be responsible for negotiating salaries.

The joint salary schedule is being urged on the local boards by Metro area trustees.

U.S. Fires Its First Thor Under 'Combat Conditions'

VANDENBERG, AFB, Calif. (AP)—Somewhere in the Pacific Ocean lies the nose cone of the first U.S. I.R.B.M. missile launched at this week coast base.

Neither the air force nor the navy will make any attempt to recover the prize, hurled 1,500 miles across the Pacific missile range Tuesday.

The cone of the medium-range Thor missile, capable of carrying a nuclear warhead, marks the first U.S. firing of a ballistic missile under combat conditions, it shows the Thor is moving from its development stage to the operational.

Another Thor was fired Tuesday night from Cape Canaveral, Fla., giving the United States its first double-barreled rocket shoot from both coasts. The weapon appeared to perform perfectly. It was fired as part of the close-out phase of the air force IRBM research and development program.

Here at Vandenberg, a regular air force crew fired the Thor weapon some 300 miles up to the fringes of space.

Two-and-one-half minutes after the first sign of fire in its tail, the missile was racing toward at a speed of 9,000 miles an hour.

The nose cone sped on, reaching its maximum speed of 10,000 miles an hour before plunging back through the atmosphere to its impact area — 1,500 miles away.

Maj. Gen. David Wade, commander of the first missile division, said the shoot was a success.

RAF units are in training here, learning to handle Thor missiles, which already have been sent to British bases.

Company and Union Are Miles Apart As Inco Talks Are Resumed

TORONTO—(CP)—Talks aimed at settling the long international Nickel Company strike resumed today with an indication from the principals whether any new proposals were to be discussed.

Representatives of the company and the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers (Ind.) refused comment as they began talks in separate board rooms at the Ontario labor department offices.

Within minutes the union team was joined by Labor Minister Daley, who called the meetings in a bid to end the wage strike now in its 85th day, and chief conciliation officer Louis Fine.

The government officials spent 10 minutes with the union group before returning to Mr. Daley's office. Shortly afterwards Mr. Daley and Mr. Fine and company officials held joint discussions with the union.

Norstad Urges NATO Lands To Acquire Missiles Quickly

PARIS (AP)—NATO's supreme commander in Europe, U.S. Gen. Lauris Norstad, pleaded with the Atlantic Pact countries Tuesday to move quickly into missile rearmament.

Norstad outlined to the foreign ministers present strength and future needs in the face of Soviet military swaggering, primarily over Berlin.

Informed sources said Norstad told the secret gathering his military commanders want U.S. nuclear-armed guided missiles as soon as they can be placed on the European bases from which they could strike the Soviet Union.

Only Britain thus far has accepted these missiles, and the Italians are close to signing a similar agreement. French stalling on acceptance is the big stumbling block to getting what Norstad considers an adequate force of missiles in place of Europe.

Norstad is known to believe that the recent successful test of an intercontinental missile in the United States in no way lessens the need of the forces in Europe for intermediate missiles.

Norstad feels it may be years before the longer-range missiles are operational, and he wants effective military hardware on the spot now immediately.

Before Norstad spoke, many of the delegates displayed little or no sense of urgency toward the strengthening of land forces or acquiring the new nuclear weapons at a Soviet aggressor.

Norstad's appeals were backed by the other NATO commanders at the conference: U.S. Admiral Jerrauld Wright, commander of the Alliance's Atlantic forces; Admiral Sir Guy Grantham of Britain, commander of channel naval forces, and British Air Marshal Sir Bryan Y. Reynolds commander of channel air forces.

The NATO delegates took up the subject of military strength

CHINESE PEOPLE TOLD OF SWITCH IN MAO'S TITLE

Quits as President But Remains as Boss

TOKYO (AP)—Mao Tse-tung is stepping down as president of Red China, Peiping confirmed today, but it insisted he is still boss.

"After keeping it secret a week, Peiping let China's 600,000,000 people in on the news. The shift was reported last weekend on Formosa and foreign diplomats got confirmation Tuesday.

Despite Peiping's disclaimer, there is a feeling in Hong Kong, Seoul and Nationalist Formosa that Mao is being downgraded by the Communist apparatus and will eventually be stripped of power.

This opinion is based largely on the fact that Communist control in China over the commune system, which deprives Chinese of their individuality and puts them in live in communities where their movements are subject to strict orders from above.

Peiping's broadcast today gave no clue on Mao's successor as chief of government, but speculation has centered on Marshal Chu Teh, now vice-chairman of the government that at 72 is seven years older than Mao. They have long been comrades in arms.

Fearful of undermining the Red China regime by any hint that the seeds for a possible revolt, the Communist radio in Peiping has been emphasized that Mao is stepping down voluntarily.

Mao remains as the head of government expiries in January, but he will keep the powerful post as chairman of the Communist party. The people's congress will meet in the next month to elect the chief of government.

A communique from the central committee emphasized:

"Comrade Mao Tse-tung will be enabled all the better to concentrate his energy to deal with questions of the direction, policy and line of the party and the state."

"He will also be enabled to set aside more time for theoretical-theoretical work, without affecting his responsibility for the work of the state. This will be in the better interests of the people of all nationalities and the people of the country."

The communique, in a direct attack on U.S. "imperialists trying to hang on to Taiwan (Formosa)," declared:

"If the American aggressive forces do not withdraw of their own accord, then the day will eventually come when the Chinese people will unite with the people of the country."

The Chinese leaders used caution in their communique to avoid creating the impression by implication that Mao was forced, but because of any errors.

Death Sentences Of Two Cypriots Are Confirmed

NICOSIA, Cyprus (Reuters)—Cyprus Governor Sir Hugh Foot has confirmed the death sentences passed on two Cypriots convicted for murdering another Greek Cypriot last July.

The governor communicated the death sentence today to the two Cypriots convicted of other crimes to long terms of imprisonments.

The two Cypriots whose death sentences were confirmed are Costas Athanassiou, 23, and Costas Constantinides, 27, convicted Nov. 4 of murdering Pasdelis Bosyglie.

During their trial it was stated that both men were members of EOKA, the Greek Cypriot terrorist organization. EOKA claimed the murder was an Eoka murder.

82 Persons Die As Fire Sweeps Bogota Store

Most of Victims Women, Shoppers and Employees

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — Fire raged through a crowded department store in Bogota Tuesday night, killing 82 persons and injuring 50, according to the official count.

Most of the victims were women. Almost all were suffocated or trampled in the panic. The fire raged for two hours before being brought under control.

Most of the deaths occurred on a stairway which part of the crowd took in the belief they had found a way out. Instead they were trapped in an office mezzanine.

HALF EMPLOYEES

Seventy-five of the dead had been employees of the store.

The remainder were mostly women shoppers, some accompanied by children.

It was estimated 10 children died in the fire.

The fire was caused by a short circuit in a display of lights and bulbs.

Rescue work and recovery of the victims continued many hours amid confusion. The store is located in the downtown area of Bogota, and the crowds of Christmas shoppers on both inside and out added to the chaos.

Damage to the store was estimated at $2,000,000 to $3,000,000.

Fire extinguishers along the walls were ignored.

Refuse Demand For Probe of Suez Incident

LONDON (Reuters)—The government, after a noisy scene in the Commons Tuesday night and early morning, refused to appoint an all-party committee to inquire into the 1956 Suez operation and the events which led up to it, as suggested by the opposition.

Labor MP George Wigg, who raised the matter, said Sir Sir Anthony Eden, prime minister at the time, must say at last words to the House that he would do it all again means that inquiry was a national requirement.

Said Wigg:

"I believe that the truth about Sir Anthony Eden is that he was misled and that an honorable man, I believe what Mr. Randolph Churchill wrote about him (in a national newspaper recently) was that he did not know what he was going on. Perhaps the charge against him is that he did not have enough guts to have thrown it out."

Wigg said he believed the "villains of the piece" were Israeli Premier David Ben-Gurion of Israel.

Just Pities Boy Who Slew His Wife, Children

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — Carl A. Eder, 18, today awaited the formal legal processes which could send him to life in prison for five killings.

The tall, pale Youth was arraigned Tuesday on five counts of murder. He stood with bowed head as the names of the victims were read.

The victims, four of them children in their modest two-bedroom home in El Cajon, were: Mrs. Lolita Pendergast, 37, and her children, David 9; Thomas, 6; Diane, 4; and Allen, 3.

Judge Fenton Garfield certified Eder to the juvenile division of Superior Court which will determine whether he is to be tried as an adult or a juvenile.

Under California law a juvenile may not be sentenced to death. But the juvenile court determines that he may be tried as an adult he could be sentenced to life in prison.

Eder's capture Monday night ended a day-and-night search when Thomas Pendergast, 39, a San Diego aircraft plant pipefitter, found his wife and children murdered Friday evening.

Eder, a lawn lawyer from Rochester, N.Y., suburb, had been befriended by the Pendergasts and taken into their home six weeks earlier.

Pendergast told reporters he felt only pity for the boy. "I think he is insane," he said.

NATO has given the Soviet bomber the code name Bounder.

One of the bombers is believed earmarked for use as a flying test bed for Russia's first Atlantic bomber nuclear engine, but there was no official confirmation of

With visibility hampered by freezing rain which quickly coated windshields and road conditions made treacherous by the overnight fall of snow, a rash of accidents was reported in the city and district this morning.

Type of Fuel to Be Used In New Moira High School Not Yet Decided by Board

Although the general contract for the construction of the new Moira Secondary School was awarded at the last meeting and foundation work have commenced, no definite decision has been made as to the type of fuel to be used in heating the building.

Members of the Bay of Quinte District High School board at their December meeting last night noted that the general contract calls for the installation of a coal type boiler which can use either oil or gas heating. The general contract calls for the installation of two 5,000 gallon oil storage tanks and the type of burner to be used will be decided at a later date.

Excavation for the new building has been underway for some days and some concrete for the foundation has already been poured. It is hoped that the new Moira School will be ready for occupancy by the commencement of the school year next September.

To prepare for opening of the third high school, Mr. W. J. Musgrove as principal of the new school, has been authorized by the board to retain a secretary for the summer months to assist over to the high school administration building and generally to make preparations for the September school opening.

OFFICE INADEQUATE

Increased high school population and consequent additional business for the high school board has made the present administration building on John Street inadequate. As result the board is considering plans for the construction of a new administration building during 1959. Details of building size or possible location have yet to be gone into.

Information brochures to inform parents about the new streaming policy for students entering high school will shortly go to press. The brochures will be distributed throughout the high school district.

Other business conducted at the meeting was authorization for a letter of appreciation to be sent to the Provincial Plow Company which through its local representatives have made a tractor available for shop and agricultural classes at Belleville Collegiate.

Engagement of an additional caretaker at Quinte Secondary School was organized. This will allow re-arrangement of care-taking schedule to provide for 24 hour supervision of the building.

PAY FIXED

A specified rate of pay for caretaker workers at the Quinte Secondary when serving banquets for outside organizations was instituted by the board, this policy also to apply evenings only to other high schools in the city.

Mrs. W. J. Musgrove was hired as a temporary teacher for the remainder of May. Mrs. Pryor who had the misfortune to accidentally fall and break her wrist, Mr. Musgrove will move over to the high school administration building and generally to make preparations for the September school opening.

J.M. Bush, Ernest Kells Elected Sidney Councillors

With only 18.6 per cent of the voters turning out at the polls in an election held to choose a new council members, J.-M. Bush and Ernest Kells were elected to Sidney township council on Tuesday.

Two other candidates, James Graham and Burton Hubbell, went down to defeat.

Absence of a fight for the reeveship and deputy reeveship was given as the big reason for the slim turnout of voters. At the nomination meeting on November Harleigh Hamilton, this year's deputy reeve, was given acclamation for the office of reeve. Also receiving acclamation was Elwin Hart as council member.

Mr. Hart was the only nominee for council and a new nomination meeting is necessary to fill the remaining two positions.

In yesterday's election Mr. Bush received 495 votes, Mr. Kells 270; Mr. Graham 113 and Burton Hubbell 78.

Assistant Deputy Minister Of Federal Dept. of Labor Speaker at Foremen's Club

The Federal Department of Labor's place in the field of labor relations is that of a "god-parent" to provincial bodies.

"The Federal government does not have much to do with regard to provincial labor disputes, but takes a keen interest in development", Mr. Gordon G. Cushing, assistant Deputy Minister of the Federal Department of Labor, told members and guests of the Quinte District Foremen's Club last night.

Mr. Cushing was guest speaker at the regularly monthly dinner meeting of the club held in the Club Canara. Since this was "Management Night" guests included local firm managers and company executives.

A native of Calgary, Alta., the speaker was a former General Secretary of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada. He commenced his present duties on May 1, of this year. Active in welfare and educational work he is a member of the board of governors of Canadian Welfare Council and a member of the executive council of both the Canadian Association of Adult Education and the Canadian Citizenship Council.

Mr. Cushing, who first became interested in labor relations and particularly "human rights" during the depression of the 30's, noted the Industrial Relations and Disputes Investigation Act, passed about 10 years ago, was designed as a sort of "cooling plan" for provincial labor relations.

"The provinces have since conceived their own forms of collective bargaining between labor and management", he said.

MORE IMPORTANT FIELDS

The speaker said he felt the fields of human management co-operation, vocational training, rehabilitation of disabled persons, and accident prevention are more important than collective bargaining.

In discussing labor-management co-operation, Mr. Cushing stated: "If you have that and live with it, you realize that collective bargaining is only a medicore part of industrial relations".

One of the most important things in industry, in labor management work is that all men were born equal."

He explained that to decrease work stoppages due to industrial disputes the government under the guidance of the Federal government initiated the establishment of labor-management committees.

There are now 1500 such committees in all fields of employment across Canada.

"In the industrial group this year there were only two work stoppages in plants where labor-management committees were in operation, while in 1957 there were seven stoppages", Mr. Cushing stated.

In addition, he urged foremen and plant managers to impress upon workers their creating jobs is an "expensive proposition."

The cost of creating jobs has increased from $8,453 per job in 1946 to $11,448 per job in 1957.

In the field of rehabilitation the speaker noted that the 1951 Canadian Sickness Survey showed an estimate of 500,000 seriously disabled Canadians of working age unable to earn a living.

In a nation - wide effort to meet this situation the National Rehabilitation Advisory Council composed of representatives of the federal and provincial governments, labor, management, welfare organizations, and the CNIB, was set up in 1954.

Last year some 1,000 men and women successfully rehabilitated through provincial rehabilitation services, were able to return to work and earn their own living again, he said.

In the accident prevention field, where foremen are most active, the Federal Department of Labor is a "god - father to the provinces" in their accident prevention programs, and co-ordinates the various provincial programs, the speaker said. In Ontario the Federal government works with the Industrial Accident Prevention Association.

ASSIST IN TRAINING

In the vocational training field in the Federal government supplies money to train prospective workers, in the field of labor relations". Mr. Cushing stated.

Prior to his speech Mr. Cushing brought greetings from the Minister of Labor, Hon. Michael Starr.

The speaker was introduced by Len Taylor of the Ontario-Intelligencer, chairman of the ways and means committee / and thanked by Charles Morton, Keyman of the club. Charles Orr also presented Mr. Cushing with a gift on behalf of the club.

The head table was occupied by the club president, Al Fewtrell, who also introduced those at the head table.

The invocation and an inspiring memorial were given by the Rev. Keith Daniels, of Victory United Church. Charles Orr who substituted for Archdeacon J. B. Creeggan.

A sing-song of Christmas carols was led by Fred Hall, who also conducted the draw for door prizes.

Membership chairman Alex Muskeluk, of Bata Shoe Company, reported a total membership of 137. Other reports were given by Hugh Jones, of Northern Electric, president of the National Council of Foremen's Clubs, Abel Nightingale and Ron Isaacs, of Quinte Secondary School, co-chairman of education committee. Mr. Nightingale announced a new educational course would commence January 14.

Out-Going Councillor Gives Other Members Bible as Gift

TRENTON — "This is one of the nicest endings of a council that I have ever seen," Clerk-treasurer O. W. Larry said Monday night as the councillors exchanged seasonal greetings and extended their wishes of a prosperous new year for each other.

"I have never seen the expressions as displayed tonight," continued the clerk-treasurer, "and I, also have the most respect and admiration for Councillor Ray Fox. He has been a guiding hand during the year and on several occasions has spared all on troubled waters. He will be greatly missed by the council next year."

The remarks of the clerk and councillors came out following the presentation of a Bible to Councillor Fox on behalf of the Councillor Ray Fox. In giving them the gift Mr. Box said, "I would like to say a small word of remembrance with each of the council and the clerk to express my appreciation, as an out-going councillor, for the wonderful way we have been able to discuss from time to time our problems for the town in a masterly and impartial way. This book which I give you has not been a great inspiration in my life and I would like to present each of you with a Bible as a memento of the honor it has been for me to sit with you during the past year."

The mayor and councillors each expressed their gratitude to Councillor Fox for his gift and his thoughtfulness.

Mayor Burtt told the councillors he appreciated the way each decision to leave the council and end the voters. He said he felt sure the new council members would return him to office anytime he may wish to run. "And personally hope you will see your way clear to seek a seat on the town council in the years to come," said the mayor.

Mayor Burtt regretted the feelings of the rest of the council when he told Councillor Fox he had been an honor for them to sit with him on the council and that "your learnings from the Bible have often shown themselves when it guided you in reaching decisions at the heated discussions held here during the year."

Dakotas Win Again In Pee Wee Hockey

TRENTON — Manager LAC. C. G. Kelly and coach Mr. I. L. Anderson of the RCAF are feeling pretty proud of their Pee Wee hockey team.

Their team, the Dakotas, picked up an 8 to 0 win over the Tee-Birds two weeks ago and then continued the good work with a 2 to 1 win over the Argus last Saturday, Dec. 6.

Brothers Doug and Peter Quackenbush scored one goal each in the first game, with Larry Hudson, Ricky Irvin, Teddie Worral and John Plammery adding one each to the total score.

In the last Saturday's game Larry Hudson and Doug Quackenbush popped in the markers for the Dakotas.

May Put Lights On Open-Air Rinks in Town

TRENTON — Councillor Ray Fox was named as a committee of one to meet with the Trenton Board of Education to further pursue the possibilities of putting lights on the skating rinks which are being built at each of the town schools.

Mayor Ross Burtt approved the self-appointment of Mr. Fox after it was decided that it would be the Board of Education which would have to pay for the electrical power to operate the lights although it was considered this would amount to very little.

The matter of lights for the rinks was brought up in the last council meeting by Coun. R. Fox who suggested it would have a considerable advantage to have a string of lights run down the centre of each rink to give the children a chance to enjoy themselves on the rinks after dark.

He said the cost of rehabilitating the lights would amount to very little and they could be moved to the various rinks needed. He also suggested that the Public Utilities Commission have some lengths of lights as are now hanging over the main street which could be used and these could be used with white bulbs, rather than coloured, installed.

The mayor suggested that a letter be written to the Board of Education asking its opinion on the matter since it would have the right also of operating the lights. However, Mr. Fox suggested that perhaps a personal interview with the members of the board would be more effective and told the mayor he felt it would be happy to act in this capacity. He said he felt all concerned would co-operate in doing this for the children of the town.

The Trenton Fire Department has been flooding the various rinks at the schools and the Public Works Department to have snow removal gangs will be clearing the snow from the rinks when necessary.

Gas Heating Plant Bought For Town Sheds

TRENTON — The council decided to purchase gas heating equipment and have it installed in the garage sheds by local contractors as soon as possible. This was agreed upon at the last regular meeting of town council held in the board room of the Municipal Building Monday night.

Councillor Joe Gould, chairman of the public works committee, told the councillors he had gone to Toronto to get prices on the heating gear and that he felt could be had for the use suitable units at a cost of $4,-287.25. This price did not cover the costs of installation and it was decided that three tenders would be obtained for this as soon as possible.

Mr. Gould told the council this equipment would replace the oil burning units now in the sheds and which have worn out and need replacing as well as to provide the added gas for the new sheds built during the past year.

He said the company from which they are purchasing the heating units will also send a man down to Trenton to make sure it has been installed properly. The price quoted, Mr. Gould said, is f.o.b. Toronto.

Speaking on the purchase, Councillor Vagn Lange said he felt the equipment should all be bought locally as well as to have local men install it. He said then they would be able to have the necessary service on the furnaces if they broke down and would have parts worn out easily replaced.

Mr. Gould replied that it was standard gas equipment and he did not anticipate any trouble getting parts or service within short notice. He also reminded the councillor that the price he got was $800 cheaper than what had been previously quoted by local dealers.

Councillor Ray Fox said he felt they were bound to run into some trouble with the equipment in days to come and it didn't matter when the units were purchased from. But if the Toronto company was a good, reliable one, then it should be easy to get it from them.

Mr. Gould also tabled before the council a diagram of the way the heating units would be set up and the plans for its installation.

THE HOT WAR

"Communist propaganda is usually adroit, and often effective. Sometimes, however, it is merely silly, and silly propaganda is worse than futile."—Editorial column, Windsor Daily Star.

This is the conclusion which the above newspaper arrives at when assessing the value of the Chinese Communists' claim that the Chinese Nationalists have been firing poison gas on the Chinese mainland. These claims, we agree, are not true. But this does not mean that they are silly especially when we consider their effectiveness upon the millions of illiterate, unknowledgable, and uneducated masses in Asia and other parts of the world.

There was a person, not too many years back, who claimed that the bigger the lie the more likely it was to be believed. A certain Dr. Goebbels encountered a certain amount of success utilizing this theory during the 1930's. After all, propaganda is basically the dissemination of information in a manner calculated to achieve a desired attitude amongst its recipients.

The Communists are waging a "hot war," and have been for some years, to win the minds of millions of people. To do this they have utilized every trick of psychology and propaganda at their command. Remember when we assess the value of some of their statements all of which are based for propaganda purposes of one sort or another, we should do so not in the light of our own reasoning capabilities utilizing our own knowledge and education and philosophies of life. We should examine Communist propaganda in the light of those for whom it was intended, through their eyes, their knowledge and their way of life.

We may interpret the propaganda of gas bombs on the Chinese mainland as "silly" through our own eyes But this propaganda was not meant for us, it was meant for millions of Asiatics and possibly Middle East peoples. And to them it may probably neither "silly" nor "futile" if we examine it through their eyes and its effectiveness upon their thinking.

This is the "hot war" which is being waged by the Communist world. They are presently more interested in winning minds than in winning land or territory. Of the world's 2,734 million people, 1,500 million, over one-third, are already under the direct control of the Communists. If the Communists can wage a successful campaign in Asia and obtain the support or control of the major countries still not under Communist control, they could control 1,501 million people - - over one-half of the world's population! This undoubtedly the aim of the Communists. In fulfilling this goal they are most unlikely to waste time and effort on "silly" or "futile" efforts or statements. If any of their statements make sense to our western democratic minds we may assume that these statements were for our consumption. If the statements do not make sense we can assume that they were not meant for our appreciation.

If the latter is the case we should find out for whom the statements were meant and set our own propaganda into action. If we are to preserve our way of life we have to have the support, friendship and understanding - - especially understanding - - of all other nations and peoples. To get this we must, in turn, understand them and understand them, preferably, through their way of life and thinking - - not ours. If we cannot understand other races or people then we must accept them and their way of thinking - - no matter how unconditionally - - if we are to maintain our own.

THIS IS A DOG-GONE LAW

The case of Lassie, a two-year-old Alsatian under sentence of death for chasing motorcycles, may result in a change in the English law which condemns misbehaving dogs to death. The penalty may be softened.

Before the police could carry out the death sentence, Lassie was spirited away to a dog sanctuary where police have no authority to enter. However, every day Lassie's owner defies the court's ruling of death costs the owner a pound. The steadily mounting penalties may cause Lassie's owner to surrender the dog.

Now we think there are two sides to the question of whether a misbehaving dog should be sentenced to death. One can have sympathy for the dog, and for its owner, but one should also remember that a dog which chases motorcycles could easily kill a cyclist.

Surely, though, there ought to be no quarrel with the contention that there is something the matter with a law which does not give the police authority to seize any dog condemned to death by the court. At present, as far as English dogs are concerned, there is one law for the rich and another for the poor.

YOUNG DAD IN TOY SHOP

By EDGAR A. GUEST

Seldom sigh for money;
Take life as a joke;
When life-days are sunny
Don't mind being broke.
Don't go cheating riches
Like some fellows do;
My palm quickens itches
For a golden sou.
But inside a toy shop
Mommy with me.
In a youngsters' toy shop
I want all I see.

In my wallet fishing
For what I can spare,
All the time a-wishing
I were a millionaire.
Mother there beside me
Tells me in the shop:
Glad she's there to guide me
Or I'd never stop.
Once before I'm lying
Cold and still and white,
I'd like the joy of buying
Every toy in sight.

Canada's Sovereignty Hit

Montreal Gazette

When President Eisenhower was in Ottawa last summer he said: "Canada must always be a free and independent word between friends."

It may now be asked what is left of that word of his when Attorney-General Rogers has asked Congress for authority to raise serious difficulties between the United States and Canada.

What Attorney-General Rogers asks is that he be given the authority at the U.S. customs to cancel the clearance papers of any ship which carries goods, these goods will restrict imports into the United States.

This, of course, is an impossible claim for Canada to accept. It is impossible in effect, since Washington's authority is higher than Ottawa's in the regulation of companies doing business within Canadian boundaries, in accordance with Canadian laws. It would mean that such subsidiaries of companies employing persons in this country to make certain goods, in order that Canadians may buy them, could not such goods as imports from the United States.

Since Attorney-General Rogers is a member of President Eisenhower's cabinet, the president's silence on the issue implies no responsibility for his decisions. The responsibility is his. If Mr. Rogers' action is a mere matter for Canadians, or serious enough in the first place, it will make all the greater the worst of bad impressions what the United States sells to Canada and what Canada buys from the United States. With our trade deficit already serious, the Government of the United States has put restrictions on imports of Canadian lead and zinc, and has encouraged quotas against Canadian oil products into the U.S. Pacific region. These moves were all protested to Canada.

Now comes this further, and more drastic move. Subsidiaries of American companies are not to be allowed to use Canadian patents, if they may restrict the sale in Canada of goods manufactured in the United States.

When he was in Ottawa in July, President Eisenhower said that the United States should be blamed if Canadians wished to buy anything south of the border. They were buying all they needed in the U.S. and they were free choice and well.

The United States, he insisted, is not a state trader; the Government was not placing American goods in Canada. All that was happening was that Canadians wished to purchase known to themselves, believed that American goods were more suited to their needs than what they could find elsewhere. The Government in Washington was not to be blamed for that.

The argument, of course, ignored the fact that Canadians are being prohibited, by the action of the Government in Washington from selling enough in the United States to pay for what they buy. Only recently they became aggravated by the special restrictions on Canadian lead, zinc and oil.

Now, however, something else has happened. Canadians would be compelled, in effect, by the United States that could be made in Canada, and which they buy, in fact, from U.S. firms under Canadian patents. This is not a question of quality. It is not a question of goods compulsory. And this would be prohibited by enforcing American law to American subsidiaries over the Canadian border.

The previous restrictions on imports from Canada into the United States, however unjustifiable they may have seemed, were at least quite legal. The Government of the United States has the right to restrict any imports it wishes. But to exercise the power of American law to regulate the operations of companies doing business in Canada under Canadian law becomes a direct challenge to Canadian sovereignty. As the president of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, Mr. C.N. McArthur, said in the United States the other day, "... it is like an attempt by Canada to remove any doubt that my country's capital is still Ottawa."

If should not be said this is an action taken by "the United States" against Canada's interests. Like previous actions about lead, zinc and oil, has already been condemned within the United States by many responsible and influential groups notably by a Special Committee of the New York Bar Association. The consensus there is that this is a case of the Government in Washington acting before the pressure of special lobbying interests.

It surely is not in relations between Canada and the United States, in a matter as vital as national sovereignty, to lobby together as a pivot point in history. If so, it is not in this, as in case of this kind ought not to be allowed to influence relations. It may still be hoped that, as believed friends, the distinguished President Eisenhower's Attorney-General will be very far from final.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

For every rebel you bury in the ground, twenty rebels a r e g r o w i n g up to take his place, burgeoning and grow strong. This is a saying of the Annamese humanist, and has been said in every language, ancient and modern. Yet how few how seem to learn its every generation who rise to power over their fellow men, the rights of shooting and burying rebels. What is the secret of the rebel? How they read? Are they unin-formed? How can we safeguard ourselves against the fateful headstrong to govern us?

Now and again we encourage ged to think that by killing those who oppose us we gain our ends. For example, the Germans mistakenly c e l i e d the North American Indian, got in our way in the early days of the exploration and exploitation of this continent. With our superior equipment and technologies, we got rid of the Red Indian massacres, deceit, preposterous treaties, until at last we got him walled off in reservations to live in idle, concentration camps of the large, open air. In other parts of the world, as with the Bushmen of Australia, we had some success in stamping aside aboriginal breeds of men who were not the equal of the white man's standing. It is not yet c l e a r whether the Negro will survive in Africa, India, the Philippines, the Indies and other areas of t h i s great world.

But these were not rebels we destroyed. These were helpless people.

If a man is not helpless, and is not a rebel, all us remember is now risky it is to bury him. Of all the rebels on earth, he is the most potent.

TODAY'S TALK

ON MEETING A HAPPY PERSON

It takes such a small incident to touch a personality into a glow of light and wonder. Like meeting a happy person when least expected. Incidents, however, are among the important happenings of each one of o u r days. The little things spring daily into the big things, and this changes life itself.

I believe that every one of us has something of magic and happiness in it ought to be given over to us. We need it i n c r e a s i n g l y possible to condition ourselves to the meeting of a happy person. It takes self-training, though. We need to brood over thoughts the same as we have been over her expected hatching.

The greatest gift God has given man is that of the mind. It alone should be the great enemy of depression from our Creator. With what power and beauty are His revelations exposed! You whom to tell!

meet God when you meet a happy person and His approach is like wedging His way into t h e hearts of millions.

We can scientifically measure the influence of a happy person, and indeed a group of happy persons! Happy persons are the salt of this earth. They are the healers of the sick and broken hopes for perfect freedom in the world. Each one of us gains new happy person is an event of major value.

Each one of us gains new happiness every time we contact a happy person. We are challenged to learn from that one. Happiness is a medicine. It has b e e n demonstrated time and again. A happy worker is always the most efficient. Such a one is an inspiration for every other person in his organization. You can pick out the happy people in any crowd. They are the ones to

Pre-Cooked

Winnipeg Tribune

The ready-mixed, pre-cooked era has nothing to replace the aroma of new-baked bread with butter melting into a slice cut from the first steaming loaf from the oven-and-vanilla smell of a kitchen where there are cake batter spoons to be licked.

Cut Insurance Coverage

Windsor Star

There are two ways of boosting costs of goods and services. One is a straight price increase. The other, less direct but equally effective, is a reduction in quality or quantity of the goods or services purchased during the year. Both have been noted in these inflationary days.

The steadily announced rates for fire and other insurance are examples of the latter. It is impossible to estimate precisely just how the changes in rates will affect the cost him, until he sees the bill for the premiums.

It is easy, however, to figure out he will be receiving less insurance protection, there being a flat of exclusions from coverage now being announced. Some of these are very important indeed.

Two are illustrative. Homeowners in a family is away from home for more than 60 hours at the Hallowe'en season. Before that if whatever, unless there is a daily check made of the storm by a "competent person."

Perhaps one could arrange for a neighbour or friend to do it. But what if that person were taken sick, or suddenly called out of town?

We suspect there will be a lot of "competent persons" hired (and a lot more of "fine print" in insurance policies). What is who is a "competent person" to make it?

This certainly is going to cause a lot of anxiety for people going on holidays, or otherwise away from home. They will be obliged to test their home insurance down in their absence only to find they can't collect a cent of it.

If they own summer cottages or other seasonal residences they will be worried the rest of the year too. Another exclusion is that from any insurance coverage on such property against burglaries or malicious damage. This means the owners are without any such protection during the period they are occupied by a large part of the year.

All these exclusions and restrictions involve a very real issue. In the past people have relied on the private insurance companies to see that they had adequate, protection against fire, theft and other hazards.

Now the insurance companies have been taking a loss on certain types of insurance. Rather than increase their rates sufficiently to offset the losses they have been reducing their protection.

But if private enterprise isn't to offer adequate protection, then it should be known so property owners look for protection, or are they to remain satisfied with policies of little value?

If insurance companies continue to reduce the protection they will there some day be a demand for a government plan that will provide the protection people think necessary? It isn't thought to be brushed aside quickly.

To Your Good Health

By Joseph G. Molner, M.D.

CONTENTMENT CONDUCIVE TO HEALTH IN ELDERLY PEOPLE

"Dear Dr. Molner: What is the healthiest climate for people of retirement age? Your opinion on temperature and precipitation will be appreciated." Mrs. T. H.

There is no "healthiest" climate. Some people with asthma, some with arthritis, others with some with allergies can sometimes find great relief in certain areas, but there is no fixed rule. What helps one may be of no use to another. Probably the older of very great importance is the person's mental and emotional attitude. Being in a climate you like, with people you love, being contentment, and contentment, whatever the reason, is conducive to health.

Elderly persons suffering unduly from cold might find a warmer climate worth the effort of moving — but be sure should go prepared to make new friends, and develop new interests.

"Dear Dr. Molner: The writer (age 48) was recently told by his doctor that he has a very slight enlargement of the prostate gland. Do you believe there is any value in the use of the prostate gland as advanced by — ? If so, would you advise the writer to consult a urologist?— D. F."

Let's not argue about anybody's prostate! The most important fact is that preventive treatment is better than any treatment for almost any ailment. I had some prostate trouble myself, and have it now. I had it treated as soon as it became evident.

"Dear Dr. Molner: I have a brownish tint between my navel. It is becoming more frequent. I am a girl 16. and rapidly growing. I started reducing I am looking for a slender figure. Do not change continuous. Do think this stems from being overweight — R. H."

No, it has nothing to do with reducing. It probably means that the colon — or what used to be a tube before you were born, a continuation of the large intestine — did not quite seal itself off. Or some other factor has caused an infection.

Dont let this go untended: have your physician examine it, and correct it. On the other hand, if promptly treated, it is not likely to affect your future health and happiness as a wife and mother. However, don't wait too long can, if neglected, get out of hand and become both painful and dangerous.

"Dear Dr. Molner: In one of your articles, you mentioned that there is no known medicine that will control the high cholesterol level in man. I recently read that oatmeal will help lower the cholesterol value. Is this valid? — R.S."

There is a difference between affecting, and controlling. With most of the medicines which have the property of lowering the cholesterol level, this effect is not constant. The cholesterol level declines at first, later climbs up to the usual level. Yes, nicotine acid, taken in large doses by mouth, has been reported as having the effect of lowering the cholesterol level. But I still hope it soon will act over a period.

"Dear Dr. Molner: Please write about diabetes. How can I cure an appetite and thirst which I am informed is caused by this disease? Is there a diet for overcoming mild forms of this?"

Diabetes, currently ranked as the eighth most frequent cause of death, is bound to become less and less deadly as people learn to understand it — and control it. Control of it will cure the excessive thirst. But with appetite, it's the other way around. Becoming overweight leads to diabetes, not vice-versa. Diet can help a great deal in cases of diabetes. A whole column, or a series of them, would be needed to explain enough informaton on diabetes, which is why I have decided to devote a booklet to this topic. If you want a copy, you should write to me, enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope and ask for "Diabetes, the Sneak Disease."

Count your calories the easy way! The recipient copy of my booklet, "The Calorie Chart", write me in care of The Chicago Sun-Times Syndicate, Box 175, Dundee, Ill., enclosing a large, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 3 cents in coin to cover handling.

Men Lying At Attention

London Free Press

On Civvie Street it is faintly amusing to learn that the army it is "lying at attention." Should you, one fine balmy day in May, spy a soldier prone on the ground — and him attending to his duties at that — do not jump to the conclusion that he has fainted and is in immediate need of a doctor.

Not at all! He is, as Lt. Col. Jay F. Wood of the army council secretariat, explains in the current issue of the Army Journal, "lying at attention." This neat device in military protocol has been arrived at in the event that the fainted soldier shall not spoil the movement of his comrades who are handed to execute."

We are happy to be able to endorse this exegesis to our readers because next summer we will witness several military par des in public, and as sure as little apples grow on tall trees there will be soldiers "lying at attention" here and there across the Dominion.

You have never done anything outstanding in your career. You have given now the impression has been created that your good work is away and the world would n o miss you.

That is all contrary to t h e truth. Everyone in the world has called to a definite service. There is something you can do which nobody else can do. There is something you can make to the welfare of the world and to the growth of your own soul, and no one but you can make it.

It is all contrary to t h e truth. Everyone in the world has called to a definite service. There is something you can do which nobody else can do. There is something you can make to the welfare of the world and to the growth of your own soul, and no one but you can make it.

The important matter is not what you do, but the spirit in which you perform any task assigned.

To every man his work. Here is a concept that is basic. Without believing it and acting upon it, no one can achieve happiness.

Fire Department Members Enjoy Annual Banquet

If people noticed something different going on around the No. 2 Fire Hall on West Moira Street last night they did not require too great a sense of perception. Outside about seventy to eighty cars lined West Moira and several of the side streets. Inside about one hundred and ten to twenty people mingled in the upper reaches of the fire hall. The occasion was the annual banquet of the Belleville Fire Department, with Fire Chief Gerald Vance as host and master of ceremonies.

After sitting down to an excellent turkey dinner the visitors and guests, who included members of the City Council and the City Hall staff, visiting firemen, prominent orators, members of the Fourth Estate, and prominent personalities from both near and far, were treated to a very high level of individual commentary by those present on civic government, local lawyers, and anyone present whom they wished to reproach. Few present will forget City Solicitor Bob Pringle's witty remarks especially concerning a certain "senator." Fewer will forget "Senator" Harry Rollins' eloquent oration concerning his civic administration, especially a certain municipal legal counsel.

It is also doubtful if many will readily forget the good time which they had through the hard efforts and with the compliments of Belleville's fire men. The event, which is unique at least in this area, was also successful due to the efforts of the firemen's wives who baked the delicious pies which were served for dessert.

Suction Motor Given Hospital By Chapter

A new suction motor will now be in use in the Pediatrics Ward of the Belleville General Hospital. Thanks to the efforts of the Alpha Lambda Chapter of the Beta Sigma Phi sorority, enough money was collected through their annual Black and Gold Ball to provide for this piece of equipment.

The Alpha Lambda chapter has also provided a two-bed room in the pediatrics ward of the local hospital, and has provided equipment for the Baby Convalescent Home in Plainfield and the School for Mentally Retarded Children on Pine Street.

The cheque for the cost of the suction motor was presented to Miss Margaret M. Pearl, Director of Nursing, by Mrs. R. Smith, president of the Alpha Lambda chapter.

'TWAS SEVEN DAYS BEFORE CHRISTMAS . . .

When all over town
People hurried and scurried
Some wearing a frown.

Soon the stockings would hang
By the chimney with care
But what to put in them?
We feel such despair.

The children were nestled
All snug in their beds,
What to buy? Where to shop?
Buzzes through our poor heads.

Mum with her list
And Dad just confused,
Had just settled down
Not too enthused.

When out of his chair,
Dad rose with a clatter,
Mother, surprised, said,
"What is the matter?"

The light from the lamp
Lit the floor up below,
Where Dad dropped the "Intell"
His face all aglow.

Then to my wondering eyes did appear
An ad in the paper that made it all clear.

As rapir as eagles our ideas all came,
We whistled and shouted as we checked off each name.

"WATCHES AND DIAMONDS—
EARRINGS AND BEADS—
CHINA AND SILVER—
ALL JEWELLERY NEEDS."

We had what we needed to fill up our socks

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Earl McKenzie are shown signing the register following their marriage in Colborne United Church, Colborne, Ontario. The bride is the former Miss Beverly Fern Jackson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Jackson, Colborne, and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond H. McKenzie, of Frankford. (Photo by William E. Riley, Belleville, Ontario.)

McKENZIE — JACKSON

Large white chrysanthemums mingled with yellow, adorned the altar of Colborne United Church, and white satin bows on the guest pews, on Saturday, November 29, at 2.00 p.m. for a lovely wedding when Beverly Fern Jackson, of Colborne, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bruce A. Jackson, became the bride of Edward Earl McKenzie, of Frankford, son of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond H. McKenzie.

Mrs. W. Irvine, of Colborne provided the traditional wedding music, and accompanied the soloist, Miss Marilyn Yeakes, of Colborne, in her rendition of "Because," during the signing of the register.

Given in marriage by her father, Mr. Bruce Jackson, the bride was radiant in her full-length bridal gown of white nylon net and lace over satin featuring a fitted bodice of Chantilly lace over satin, with delicately scalloped neckline and long, lily-pointed sleeves. Three tiers of cascading, lace-edged, trothy net accented the boufland skirt, which was enhanced by a back tiered-net panel. She wore nylon net fingertip veil and pearl studded coronet, glass slippers, and carried a white Bible crested with red Sweetheart roses, and white, rose-knotted streamers.

She was attended by Miss Joan McKenzie, of Frankford, sister of the bridegroom, as maid of honour, gowned in ballerina-length blue nylon chiffon and net over taffeta, with matching blue nylon chiffon picture hat, and glass slippers. She carried a bouquet of pink carnations mingled with white 'mums and pink roses.

Miss Carol Tenkinson, of Belleville, cousin of the bride, as bridesmaid, was attired in blue nylon over taffeta with blue picture hat of nylon, white shoes, and carried pink carnations, white 'mums, mingled with pink roses.

Mr. Dale Ashbury, of Belleville, attended the bridegroom, while Mr. Percy Ashbury, and Jerry Tenkinson, both of Belleville, ushered the guests.

The reception was held in the church parlors where a buffet luncheon was served by Mrs. M. Rusaw; Miss Gail Watson; Mrs. M. Cherry, and Mrs. M. Sheppard.

The bride's table was prettily appointed with white damask, and centred by a three-tier wedding cake flanked by silver candle holders with tall, white candles.

The bride's mother received the guests, gowned in black velvety and white print, on teal blue crystal acetate with white accessories, and corsage of red, Sweetheart roses. She was assisted by the bridegroom's mother, who wore sapphire blue crepe with white accessories, and corsage of red Sweetheart roses.

tor, Cornwall, and Brockville, the bride travelling in Caribbean blue sheath gown, of ariel fabric, with brown fur jacket, rust-tinted feather hat and accessories. They are residing in Milan, Ontario.

Guests were present from Renfrew; Belleville; Foxboro; Napanee; Frankford; Colborne; Plainfield, and Shannonville.

Prior to her marriage, the bride was presented with a steam iron by her fellow employees of Delora Sterilite; and by a community shower in Colborne by neighbors and friends.

CHRISTMAS BANQUET

The University Women's Club of Belleville and district enjoyed its annual Christmas banquet recently in the club room of the Hotel Quinte.

Following a "most delightful smorgasbord" dinner, a most pleasant and interesting and colorful report of last summer's Triennial Conference held in Montreal. The report was made by the local president, Mrs. John Haig, and by Mrs. D. MacKinnon, also a local member.

Following the highlight of the Conference, Mrs. A. Gillis gave an informative and amusing resume of her recent European tour.

The evening concluded with the singing of Christmas carols.

Lady Smoked First Cigar On a Bet

CALGARY (CP) — Teacups may tremble and eyebrows hitt when dainty Mrs. Helengrace Brown lights up a smoke, because she prefers full-length cigars.

The diminutive New England-born blonde, who served seven years in the women's branch of the U.S. Navy, had her first cigar on a bet. Someone was passing cigars around when she stopped at a service station, she said. "They told me I could have a free tank of gas if I smoked one. My mother was so horrified when I came home smoking a cigar."

It's a regular habit, but there was one exception during a social conference at which she was working in Washington. "Some of the men objected to cigar smoke, so I had my first cigaret."

She won't smoke a pipe. "The ashes fall into the dishpan when I'm doing my housework," she explained. "Cigars are handier."

She's the delight of tobacco dealers. A cigar manufacturer in New Orleans is so pleased to find a woman puffing his product that he sends a regular supply.

Going Shopping?

If it were not a starting point we would be ashamed to begin with those two words. However, we understand that the merchants are agreeably surprised at the volume of business they are doing. There had been slim forecasts as for a decrease in sales, but fortunately they have not proved true. In many cases, business is better than last year and last minute repeat purchase orders have had to be made out. Often fear, caused by such forecasts, itself brings about the unwanted situation.

We have tried to give a few helpful suggestions from time to time about your gift list/

Here are a few more:

Men and women too are proud of their cars and enjoy keeping them clean and well equipped with accessories. The year a new summer-winter auto cushion has just been introduced. These cushions are reversible with a heating cover to allow air circulation. The summer side is a ventilated fibre cover, while the winter side features a fleece facing of warm synthetic fibre.

During winter driving, the fleece is warm and cozy as well as comfortable to sit on. These cushions are also designed to give support to the back and are especially good for long trips. They are attractively packaged ready to slip under the Christmas tree. Give a thought to an item that is becoming more and more desired, useful and perfectly into today's trend for casual living. Very plastic or leather covered versions it is just as much at home outdoors and on verandahs and patios and is often preferable to an extra chair. There are a variety of shapes, sizes and coverings available; the most popular of Canadian fabric coverings is corduroy in vivid jewel tones, while the most popular neutrals are beige and black. These are especially useful for young marrieds couples who are furnishing thomes and apartments in contemporary fashion.

Here are a miscellany of gift ideas to bear in mind if you are rushed. For men, think of slippers lined of soft, glove leather with flexible soles, gloves, brief-cases, pipes, cuff-links, tie clips, watch-bracelets. A sports shirt always makes a hit in soft cotton flannel or corduroy; dress shirts in broadcloth or oxford cloth. For the school miss or career girl, give a blouse, sweater, slip, gloves, bag, belt, earrings, bracelet or necklace. For youngsters of either sex, aged five to ten, you are safe in giving a dress-up costume; for boys, give cowboy suits, space men suits or baseball uniforms and for little girls there are nurses uniforms and real "grown up" outfits. When all else fails, give money if you have any left.

There are few new articles that will be a help to you, the homemaker, not just at Christmas time, but over the whole year. You will soon be using a push-button soap cream in an aerosol container and gone are the days of the messy soap dish. Just the required amount for each washing job is dispensed with the touch of a finger.

Another of the latest developments is a jiffy shoe polish spray also released by a push button. It puts an instant gloss on shoes of any color save white.

ST. PAUL'S W.G.

ROSLIN — The December meeting of St. Paul's Guild, Roslin, was held at the home of the Rev. and Mrs. D. Woodward. Mrs. Goodfellow opened the meeting and Mr. Woodward led in prayer.

The lucky ticket for the quilt was drawn with Mrs. Goldie Gow, Plainfield, the winner.

A social hour was spent in the exchange of Christmas gifts. There were two readings, give by Mr. Woodward and Mrs. Bruce Hamilton.

Thank you notes were read and business showed a good balance on hand.

Refreshments were served by Mrs. Woodward and all left wishing each other a merry Christmas.

GOOD MANNERS

— By Mrs. Beeckman

SHOULD SHE HAVE ACCEPTED THREE INVITATIONS?

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

These three incidents happened to me. Three male cousins of mine became engaged. The first one introduced his bride-to-be to me at the wedding of a relative. The other two fiances were introduced to me on the street. We received invitations to all three weddings, and we attended them. About five or six weeks before each wedding, I received an invitation to the bridal shower. I feel my name should not have been given for these occasions. Had the brides-to-be been my cousins, that would have been a different story. So, I refused all three invitations. Did I do right? — Reader

If you really didn't want to go to these three showers, it was not a "must" that you accept the invitations. But if you didnt accept the invitations simply because the groom-to-be, and the brides-to-be, are your cousins, the reason doesn't make a very much sense. I imagine that t h three showers were large ones with relatives and friends of both bride-to-be and groom-to-be invited, and therefore your name would naturally be included on each list of relatives to be invited.

Perhaps, however, you weren't particularly interested in taking advantage of the excellent opportunities offered you to meet and get to know the fiancees of your three cousins, their families and friends, as well as having a reunion-party with your own relatives and friends.

AFFORDABLE DRESS FOR INFORMAL OCCASION

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Next month my husband's co-workers are planning to have an informal dinner-dance at one of our local hotels. I'd like to wear a certain dress I have, but I thought I'd ask you please to advise my first. The dress is black, simple in design, has a scooped neckline, front and back, also a full skirt, under which I generally wear a crinoline. I consider this dress dressy enough, but my big worry is that it is of cotton material. When I bought the dress, the saleswoman told me I could wear it all year round, since it is heavy enough. Do you think it would be appropriate for this kind of occasion at this time of year? — M.

Yes, I do think this dress would be appropriate for you to wear to this informal dinner-dance. Many of today's cottons, particularly the good-looking, good-quality black ones, often look quite like silk. You're fortunate that the dress is black. (I suggest you don't wear a crinoline under the skirt, for this would doubtless emphasize the material.) To play down the material and play up the simple design, you have a fine opportunity to choose especially interesting accessories.

THE FAMILY COUNCIL

EDITOR'S NOTE: The Family Council consists of a judge, a psychiatrist, three clergymen, a newspaper editor, a women's editor and two writers. Each article is a summary of an actual case history. The Council reports on problems that have been dealt with by responsible agencies and counsellors.

Ralph E. — I can't stand my brother-in-law.

Mrs. K. E. — I don't want to do him any more harm.

Ralph E. — I am 16 and I've already had enough hard knocks to last a lifetime. My father died when I was five and my mother had to go to work to support us. She left me in the care of my big sister who was only 15 at that time.

I have gotten into trouble at school and recently I was arrested with a group of other kids for destroying some public property. I didn't really do anything but I was with the group. I got off easy and I think I learned my lesson. A social worker visited my mother and recommended that I go live with my sister, who is now married and has two children of her own.

My sister Cora is okay, but I can't stand my brother-in-law. He is against me from the word go. It certainly won't do me any good to be stuck with him. My mother ought to realize that.

Mrs. K. E. — I realize that I haven't done right by Ralph and he has taken me in for it. My daughter always told me that I shouldn't have gone out to work, and it would have been better to rely on charity. But I didn't see things that way. I wanted to do a little better for the children and now I am paying the price.

Cora says she will be glad to take Ralph into her home now and she claims her husband is willing, but he says he won't stand for any nonsense and Ralph doesn't obey he's going to give him a rough time.

Ralph has cried and begged to remain with me. He has h a h enough. He threatened to run away if I send him to live with Cora. He says it's bad enough he hasn't any father now I'll be deserting him. I don't want to do any more harm than I've already done.

The Council: Ralph sounds like a pretty shrewd article, but he is not the proper judge of where he ought to live.

This youngster is remarkably apt at playing on his mother's guilt feelings and has developed the very bad habit of thinking of himself as a most unfortunate boy. He believes that all his misconduct is excusable on t h i s ground and that he is not called upon to make any active effort toward setting himself on t h e right track.

It is certainly a misfortune to lose a father early in life and to be placed under supervision of an immature girl, but the possibility was open for Ralph to create something good out of a bad situation.

The fact that a trained social worker thinks that Ralph's sister's home would be a better place for him is a reasonable indication that Ralph needs something he is not getting with his mother. We suspect that this "something" is a cool common sense and firm discipline. Ralph is in terror that he will not be able to wheedle and whine on the ground of his "hard knocks" in front of his brother-in-law.

Nobody can predict how t h e situation will work out, but if this brother-in-law is not abusive, we have a notion he was made to order for Ralph's case. T h e boy will probably wind up being worshipful him. Some young sters need "understanding," but when a 16-year-old boy sees himself as a pitiable abused creature, it is reasonable to suspect he has had an overdose of t h a t kind of thing and needs the bracing air of tougher treatment.

(First Instalment)

We had Christmas dinner in advance for two very important reasons. 1) Because this flesh and blood mother is going to be in Seoul, Germany, with Marianne and family for Christmas and 2) I wanted to cook and serve the Christmas dinner I am writing about today so I could be of solid help to you in absentia.

Dinner Menus

I am full of glee to pass on this news to you. I know I will receive dozens of letters wishing me Godspeed.

But enough dreaming . . . if I don't get on with my work I won't make it.

Mrs. Diefenbaker Describes Job as PM's Wife as Just Being Handy When Needed

By ALAN DONNELLY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

One of Canada's busiest and most important women describes her job as "just being on hand when I'm needed."

For Olive Evangeline Diefenbaker being "on hand" has meant going through two general election campaigns, three transatlantic flights, numerous plane hops across Canada and now a world air tour.

All this in less than two years.

Between trips the wife of John Diefenbaker is the smiling hostess of 24 Sussex Street, official home of Canadian prime ministers, where she has had the Queen and President Eisenhower as guests.

HAD IMPORTANT ROLE

Many keen political observers give her a big share of credit for the Progressive Conservative victory in the election and friends say she has been of immense moral support to her husband as head of the government.

John, a widower, and Olive, a widow, were married Dec. 8, 1953, in Toronto. They had known each other years earlier in Saskatoon, meeting there just after the First World War in the church of her father, a Baptist minister.

"We were good friends—family friends," she says.

Life was fairly simple for the lawyer-politician and his bride until two years ago when Mr. Diefenbaker became Progressive Conservative leader. On that day, Dec. 14, 1956, Olive Diefenbaker stood before the cheering convention delegates and promised simply:

"I will do everything in my power to help him."

IN TWO CAMPAIGNS

Two high-pressure election campaigns followed less than a year apart. Keeping her promise meant something like riding the nose cone of a rocket.

As the first prime minister's wife since Lady Laurier to play a public part in her husband's affairs, she has been Mr. Diefenbaker's constant companion. Sometimes that has even meant moving about on crutches.

As chatelaine of the prime minister's three-storey grey stone home on the Ottawa River, she shuns personal publicity and she does not intrude herself into political issues or debates.

Many of her decisions are taken up with social events, from teas to affairs for charity. Often her acceptance of an engagement is with the proviso that she will call it off if her husband needs her elsewhere. Before the current world tour, she cancelled 15.

She says she has set this rule: "His needs come first and I try to fit my plans into his schedule."

IN PUBLIC EYE

This means accepting the glare and scrutiny of public life.

"I think I accept public scrutiny reasonably well," she says. "In general, the public are very kind and generous and so it's not too hard to take."

She regards herself as being shy, but says she learned long ago "that the other person is likely to be shy, too."

Through it all she has kept her sense of enthusiasm and excitement hidden behind a calm, unhurried exterior.

A newspaper man told her that young reporter accompanying the prime minister's party around the world was practically helpless with excitement.

"Confidentially, so are we," said Mrs. Diefenbaker.

LOBSTER STORY

The busy official life of the Diefenbakers has not affected their sense of humor. At an election campaign luncheon in the Maritimes, local Conservative women proudly served a lobster salad.

John enjoyed it immensely. Olive, who can't eat lobster, hid hers under the lettuce.

Impishly, John, who noticed, suggested loudly: "Have some more lobster, dear."

She managed to avoid a second portion. Later she said with a grin: "I could have killed him!"

There is not much time for relaxation, inevitably, because the prime minister's job is an around-the-clock one, the activities of office don't be excluded entirely from their home.

As Mrs. Diefenbaker says: "We live in an atmosphere that is almost totally his job."

TALK THINGS OVER

The prime minister isn't the type to unload office problems on his wife but they "talk about things he does—because that's our life."

When they can have a quiet evening at home, the Diefenbakers spend it in their cozy apartment on the second floor of the official residence chatting about their day's activities or watching television, or John with books and Olive with her knitting.

In such a well-staffed house there is little Mrs. Diefenbaker can do for the prime minister except be his attentive companion. There are a steward, a cook, three maids, a housekeeper, a laundress, two extra-mural cleaning women sent in by the works department, and a chauffeur.

The laundress is an innovation brought about by Mrs. Diefenbaker shortly after she moved in. Previously, all laundry was sent out of 24 Sussex Street. Now the residence has modern washing equipment and all laundry except shirts is done there.

Mrs. Diefenbaker doesn't get much chance to cook, though she enjoys cooking. The staff plans most of the meals, checking the menu with her. The prime minister is an easy man to cook for. "He likes most anything," she says. "He has an enormous breakfast. After that it's catch as catch can."

Last summer she frequently cooked meals on weekend fishing excursions to their Harrington Lake cottage in the Gatineau Hills. Sometimes in Ottawa she gets late-evening snacks—usually cold cereal and milk—after the staff is finished work.

She loves gardening and had a plot of land dug up for her at Harrington Lake last spring. This she filled with vegetables from the garden and crabapples from the grounds at 24 Sussex Street were made into relishes and jelly by the staff, using Mrs. Diefenbaker's recipes. They are used to give a home flavor when guests come to dinner.

The Diefenbakers are a devoted couple, quite unconcerned about showing affection in public. On campaign travels he was more than once seen sleeping with his head on her shoulder.

When the weather is favorable, Mrs. Diefenbaker often walks with her husband part way to his office. When heavily travelled streets are reached, the chauffeur picks them up, drives the prime minister to Parliament Hill and returns Mrs. Diefenbaker home. The trip is repeated in the evening, in reverse.

During the day they have frequent telephone conversations on a special line through the East Block switchboard. Sometimes the prime minister gets home for lunch. More often he has it in his office.

The dinner lunches, prepared by the household staff, are delivered by the chauffeur in a specially made wooden box almost as large as a suitcase with separate compartments for food and dishes, silverware and two thermos bottles.

Alone at home in the morning, Mrs. Diefenbaker may load recordings on her record player—"my great love"—and write her correspondence. She receives up to 40 letters a day and answers them in longhand.

Many are from people who write something like—"We are thinking about you and praying for you." Such communications deserve a personal reply.

In the more leisurely first three years of their marriage, Olive often drove John on various outings around Prince Albert, Sask., where they still maintain a home. Occasionally she drove him duck hunting but stayed in the car while he roamed the marshes.

Since they have had a chauffeur she has let her driving permit lapse. She hopes to get a new one soon.

In recent years Mrs. Diefenbaker has had to give more attention to clothes than before.

"I try to be practical but I do need a lot," she says. She can get ready-made dresses to fit and likes to buy that way to see what she's getting, but she also uses a dressmaker for more elaborate costumes.

FAVORS WIDE BRIMS

Wide-brimmed hats were her favorites but she wears few now.

"We are travelling so much and large hats are so hard to pack."

She has easily adjusted herself to the exciting and active life of a prime minister's wife. She quickly made all of John's friends hers. On a first-name basis with many people, gets to know wives and their children and keeps informed about them.

Mrs. Diefenbaker has a warm feeling for others, whether friends or strangers. In London she was assigned a car with a girl chauffeur. On one trip their car brushed the fender of another.

The chauffeur was almost in tears from embarrassment. Impulsively, Mrs. Diefenbaker unpinned a valuable maple - leaf brooch she was wearing and gave it to the girl—"just to make you feel better."

BORN IN MANITOBA

Olive Diefenbaker was born in Roland, Man., about 50 years ago after her father, Rev. C. H. Freeman, moved there from Nova Scotia. Later the family lived in Moose Jaw, Prince Albert and Saskatoon.

Her first husband, Toronto barrister Harry F. Palmer, died in 1935, two years after their marriage, leaving a baby daughter, Carolyn. The daughter is married and lives in Toronto.

After the death of her husband, Mrs. Diefenbaker taught high school for 10 years in Arthur and West Germany, and it is to their 18-month-old son John that Mrs. Diefenbaker's hand - knit socks are directed.

She was in that post in 1953 when John Diefenbaker, whose first wife, the former Edna Brouwer, died childless in 1951 after 22 years of marriage, asked her to marry him.

Mrs. Diefenbaker samples a dish in the kitchen of the prime minister's residence at 24 Sussex Street in Ottawa while the cook, Mrs. Alice Saumure, looks on. Behind staff plan and prepare most of the meals but Mrs. Diefenbaker checks the menu. This photo was taken before the Diefenbakers left on their world tour Oct. 28. Since then Mrs. Saumure has left the household staff. (CP Photo).

The Ottawa River flows behind 24 Sussex Street, official residence of Canada's prime minister. Here Prime Minister and Mrs. Diefenbaker look out from the rear balcony off the second-floor living room of the three-storey house. They are looking up the river towards Parliament Hill, about a mile away. Across the river is Hull, Que. (CP Photo).

Since John Diefenbaker was named national leader of the Progressive Conservative party nearly two years ago, the Diefenbakers have had a busy time but when they have a free evening they like to spend it together in this cozy study of the prime minister's residence at 24 Sussex Street in Ottawa. This and the photos at bottom was taken before they left on a world tour October 28. (CP Photo).

7,000 Women Attend Bazaar At Coliseum

OTTAWA (CP) — Bargains in cash and kind lured 7,000 women to the capital's biggest bazaar, a 12-hour "occasional" for the 1958 Christmas season at which customers took the bargain hunting of Mrs. Dianne Coldrey of Hadassah "Ho" member Lewis Goodall's organizing job.

Mrs. Coldrey helped for four years and every year it gets bigger and better.

Mrs. Michael Greenberg, chairman of this year's extravaganza, says asked whether Hadassah has ever thought of having a two-day bazaar:

"I think we could get the customers, but I don't think our women could stand up to it," she said.

EARLY QUEUES

About 2,000 women stormed through the Coliseum gates this year. Hundreds had waited in lineups long before the 10 a.m. opening. They were still positive in as the bazaar closed up at midnight.

One photographer, inside the building when they stampeded began to load the clothing and household items. Hadassah members also said afterward it was busy selling everything from home baking to knit goods, linens and jewellery.

This year's receipts were expected to exceed last year's when the bazaar brought in $11,000. Proceeds go to hospitals and welfare projects in Israel. Items such as books, clothing, medicines and even agricultural implements.

Many items are donated by members, and some merchants stock it too with articles of newness and distinction, purchasing.

Hostess for the sale include Mrs. Greenberg demonstrations beauty and wardrobe hits, ruffled, bloop games, and a new automobile for a lucky ticket holder.

Hadassah members operated a full-scale cafeteria and a free baby-sitter service, accommodating as many as 75 youngsters at a time.

The bazaar committee hired plainclothes security officers to watch for shoplifters and the Ottawa Police Brigade was on hand for emergencies.

ALARMS BUYERS

HARROW, England (CP)—Warning letters have been sent to food suppliers after the public health officer of this Middlesex town found a cigarett butt in a bread roll, a nail in a cake, parts of a bottle in a loaf, glass in bread and cement in milk bottles.

Wedding Bells Are Booming For Teen-Agers

LONDON (AP) — Teen-age wedding bells are booming in Britain. There are three times as many teen-age weddings as before the war.

Joan Eggett, 15, lives in south east London. Eighteen months ago she met Jack Oliver Derek Wallen at a religious meeting.

A year ago, while Joan was still at school, they got engaged. The marriage was set for three days after Joan's 16th birthday. Derek is 20.

The arrival here yesterday of Mrs. Barbara Scruggs, 14-year-old wife of an American sailor, caused less furore than it would have a few years ago.

In England no one under 16 may marry. Between 16 and 21, both parents must approve. If they refuse permission, the youngsters can try to persuade a judge that they should be allowed to wed.

Britain's youngest bride today is Phillis Mills (nee Plavsic). She married John Mills, 19, on her 16th birthday in November. Said Phillis's mother: "I certainly don't think she's young."

What do the experts think about these teen-age marriages?

Joseph Brayshaw of the National Marriage Guidance Council said:

"There are three reasons for younger marriages — full employment, family planning and instalment buying. As long as the standard of living remains high, people will marry young."

James Holiday, superintendent registrar at London's Caxton Hall, where there are 2,000 weddings a year, said: "The only thing I have against very young marriages is that, inevitably, the couple haven't sufficient financial backing to start a home of their own."

Rev. P. N. Seymour, vicar of a church in southeast London for 33 years, said:

"I don't think one can generalize on the right age for marriage. But I do think they should wait until they have a home and are capable of looking after each other."

Trappers in Far North Must Be Tough to Stand Hardships

MOOSE FACTORY — The population of this settlement, 700-odd miles north of Toronto and three miles from its sister municipality of Moosonee, has dropped sharply with the end of the duck-and-goose season on James Bay. The Cree Indians have moved out to their trapping grounds, seeking the beaver and other fur bearers which provide them with an annual cash crop.

The exact date of the beginning of their begins into the wilderness isn't "set." It depends entirely on the weather. When the creeks and streams, the little potholes in muskeg are frozen up, that's the time to move. The dog teams, scantily fed during the summer months, have been fattened up ready for their hard winter work. The outfitting at the big Hudson's Bay store—one of the first in Canada—has been completed. And then, at some unrecognizable signal, the men of the Cree band suddenly decide to move and are gone.

Beaver is, of course, their main target. There was, not so long ago, that the beaver were almost extinct on James Bay. Then the Ontario Department of Lands and Forests, in co-operation with the Department of Indian Affairs and the Company, restocked the area with animals taken from Algonquin Park, zoned it for Indian trappers and established quotas. In one of the most remarkable comebacks in animal history, James Bay came alive with beaver—almost to the point where there were too many for the good of the animals.

FLAIN FOOD

Trappers are hardy folks; they have to be. The supplies they take on their dog sleds are basic —flour, tea, sugar, shortening for bannock. Some take a side of bacon; most of them depend entirely on the meat of the beaver they trap for their winter supply. The meat is nutritious perhaps too fat for the taste of most southerners, but northern travellers need fat in large quantities to help them withstand the extreme cold and blizzard conditions they encounter as a matter of routine.

The average trapper covers about 16 to 17 miles a day. His "zone" or private fur farm is usually in triangular form. He has a main cabin or shelter, perhaps a tent with a wooden floor at the point of the triangle.

At the end of each leg, he establishes another shelter, sometimes a mere brush pile which keeps the snow off as he sleeps, rather uncomfortably, beneath it. Few Indians use the sleeping bag without which most while men wouldn't move in the north.

But many of them have what is considered the warmest covering of all—the woven rabbit-skin blankets which are made by the women of the Crees.

It takes about 70 rabbit pelts — white—to make a blanket. The pelts are cut into strips about an inch wide and varying in thickness to the winter fur of the animal. These strips are woven so loosely that fingers may be poked through them into the blankets. The thick undercoating of fur provides as much warmth, the Indians claim, as does that of the caribou which is favored by the Eskimo farther north. There are not too many caribou in the southern area of James Bay.

The rabbit-skin blankets are beautiful—but not for use in warm southern houses or apartments. The hair comes off them in warm surroundings, and more than one southern housewife has had occasion to rake her husband over the coals when he's brought one home for a souvenir.

Some of the Indians may get home for Christmas, but they are the exceptional ones who manage to wangle a ride either by aircraft or one of the supply boats which run up the Bay before freeze up, and thus are on their trapping grounds early. A few leave trap lines, of course, close to home, some within minutes of the settlements and of the outlying tents or shelters on the big Moose river. But most of them will be in the bush until the spring breakup.

BUSY DAYS

Their days are very full; they begin at daybreak to cover a leg of the trapline, picking up animals which have been caught, re-setting the traps and continuing through the long day until they reach the overnight shelter. Many of them work until midnight or later thawing out the frozen animals and pelting them, taking great pains to avoid cuts in the fur, stretching them carefully.

For some years now, the Department of Lands and Forests has sent skilled fur handlers out to instruct their charges in the best means of skinning and curing, because only the best-treated pelts command the best prices.

How much can a good trapper make in a winter? The prices vary so much that no one can tell. It's claimed the trapper is the greatest gambler of them all; he may work all winter and find his pelts, because of world prices, are barely worth the time spent in preparing them for market.

HOPEFUL REQUEST

GRANDE PRAIRIE, Alta. (CP) — When county secretary Russ Rowe missed a recent council meeting to go moose hunting, councillors agreed to overlook his lapse on condition he supply 100 pounds of moose meat to each.

Santa's reindeer can be balky at times but that's just due to high spirits and eagerness to get going on the Christmas job. This lively handful, probably Prancer, is one of 14 that arrived from Alaska at Washington and he will take part in a Christmas pageant at the U.S. capital.

It's time to trim the tree...

Out with the decorations! Up with the tree! Don't worry too much about which light goes where, or which star goes on top, because every Christmas Tree looks beautiful. When the job's done, why not have a few friends in to admire your handiwork.

A little imagination goes a long way in Christmas Party planning. As a start, try a paper Christmas Tree decorated with hors d'oeuvres. Roll a large piece of green paper (a desk blotter, which can be purchased at any office supply store, would do nicely) into a cone shape. Tape it with cellulose tape on the inside and trim the bottom level with scissors. Then force toothpicks through from the inside and garnish them with small, colorful hors d'oeuvres. The 'tree' may be reinforced by filling with crumpled paper if it seems at all flimsy.

ROSLIN

County Home Buildings, Operational Care Described at W.I. Meeting

ROSLIN — The December meeting of Roslin Women's Institute was held on Thursday evening at the home of Mrs. Carman Bailey with a large number present.

The president, Mrs. D. Chisholm, presided. Roll call was answered with a white gift of candy which was to be given to the Hastings County Home this year.

The secretary, Mrs. W. Bates, read thank-you letters for gifts and flowers received. A letter of thanks was received from the CNIB for the cheque of $74 from the recent canvas for the blind in the Roslin area, and also one from the Canadian Mental Health for the donation.

It was noted in the new board ruling IWIO fees would be increased from 15 to 30 cents a member.

Plans were made to help a needy family at Christmas, food and clothing to be left with Mrs. Empson for forwarding.

The speaker, Mrs. M. Farguy, was in charge of the program. All joined in singing carols with Mrs. Fargey explaining their origin. She also gave a paper on the motto, "It is more blessed to give than to receive."

Mrs. Cairns and Miss Carol Bailey favored with a duet, "Holy Night, Silent Night." Mrs. J. Fargey gave a reading on the origin of the hymn, "While Shepherds Watched Their Flocks by Night."

The guest speaker, Mrs. Kenneth York, of Belleville, thanked the members for their gift of home-made candy for the members of Hastings County Home.

The speaker also gave a number of interesting facts about the home, stating that Hastings County was one of the first to provide a home for the aged, and in 1906 the first home was started and opened on December 6, 1907, and the first patient was admitted in January, 1908. She said two of the first inmates are still there.

In 1948 it was decided to build a larger home and move to another location. On October 21, 1951, the new home was officially opened by the Hon. W. A. Goodfellow, and on October 25, the staff and members of the home moved in.

The superintendents in charge since the beginning were: T. E. Wilson 1906-1918; John Lee 1918-1932; W. E. Sandercock 1929-1942 and Kenneth York, 1942 to present time.

The building is laid out anchor style, with six distinct wings for normal, special and hospital care. The main part is all on one level with the staff only on the upper floor.

It was originally planned to accommodate 107; there are now over 200.

The hospital was planned to accommodate 24; there are now 52 patients.

BOARD OF GOVERNORS

The Home is governed by a board of governors, which is appointed from County Council. The Home is solely owned and operated by the County of Hastings. She also showed forms of application.

The farm in connection with the home consists of 136 acres and helps provide food for the home, and from the standpoint of mental therapy, is of great benefit.

Meals are served in the main dining room for all who are able to get about. There are two smaller dining room for special care and tray service in the hospital. Most of the staff are graduate or practical nurses.

As there is no recreation room, church services are held Sundays in the main dining room. On week days this is used as a recreation room. Visiting hours are from 2 to 4 daily.

Inmates pay their way if able, the balance is made up by the county and provincial government grants.

The home economist, Miss Sauve, was present and wished the branch every success in its work and added the season's greetings. She spoke of the girls' club work and hoped many would attend achievement day at Madoc on February 27, and at Stirling, February 21, when the girls would be in competition. This year's project is "Canada Can Be Smart."

Mrs. F. Meeks gave a paper on the topic, "Christmastime Long Ago."

Christmas gifts were exchanged and during the social hour, refreshments were served by the hostess and her assistants.

MADOC

Kiwanis Club Marks 10 Years Of Service

MADOC — The Kiwanis Club of Madoc celebrated 10 years of service on Friday evening when they entertained their ladies and other guests at a birthday supper at Blue's Hotel.

The highlight of the evening was a travelogue by Miss Joyce Fleming, B.A., who returned home to Canada last August after spending two years on the teaching staff in a school at Soest, Germany. While overseas she visited many countries in Europe including Russia. She took many pictures of interest — behind the Iron Curtain, and these were also shown. A description of each slide was given by the speaker as they were presented.

Miss Fleming is a daughter of Mr and Mrs. Fred Fleming of Madoc. At present she is teaching in Toronto.

Other items on the program included several special numbers by Mr. Bassett of Madoc High School staff and feats of magic by Ray De Silva and Miss Joan Frances of Cobourg.

This being the 16th anniversary of the club, charter president, Ken Bissell reviewed the activities of the club during its inception. He introduced past presidents and made mention of the fact that approximately $15,000 had been raised and split for welfare work in the community.

President Charles Johnston outlined the work that had been done in 1958 as approved by the directors at December meeting. Paid hospital account $400 for a crippled child who recently underwent surgery, purchased a wheel chair immediately on loan to a lady, donated $100 for the erection of a Rehabilitation Centre for crippled children in Ontario, $25 to Canadian Red Cross, authorized purchase of clothing for polio patient, and $250 for the annual Christmas boxes.

A delightful feature of the evening was a presentation to the Christmas box committee by each Kiwanis lady of a gift suitably wrapped to be included in the Christmas boxes. This gesture was much appreciated by the club members.

The guest speaker was introduced by Carl Howse and Kiwanis appreciation was extended by Rev. R. A. Milley. The toast to the ladies was proposed by Harry Roscoe and responded to by Mrs. Wilma O'Brien.

SPECIAL CLASS

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — City council has exempted umbrella pigeons from the bylaw banning keeping of pigeons and other fowl within city limits, so long as the numbers are limited by the Canadian Thunder Club.

SUBWAY TRAFFIC DWINDLES

With population and industry shifting to outlying and suburban areas, where parking is less a problem than in downtown areas, Toronto-area are tending to their cars instead of the modern subway, Canada's first. Although another subway route is in the planning stage, the Toronto Transit Commission has indicated it will ask for a fare increase in 1960. It now charges 10 cents for four tickets on the system, considered a model of efficiency, lost about 3,000,000 passengers this year. (CP Photo.)

Public Transit in Canada No Longer Laughing Matter, Many Subsidies Being Paid

By MEL SUSPIN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Why are Halifax trams like bananas?

"Because they're yellow and come in bunches."

This bit of so - called humor was thin 15 years when Halifax trams crammed daily into the single-track passenger cars.

It wasn't really funny to stand in pouring rain waiting for passengers to disembark before you could board the antiquated trolleys.

The banana - colored Birney cars are long since gone and modern buses weave through streets with much less effort and noise.

NO LAUGHING MATTER

The old jokes, with their variations in other cities, are also gone. Public transit in Canada is no longer a laughing matter.

In the war years and for some time after, when automobiles were scarce, most systems made money despite their dependence on generally delapidated equipment. Now, even with costly modern buses and streetcars, the majority operate at losses, usually subsidized by the communities they service.

In almost every city fewer people ride buses and trolleys. The reasons, as stated by officials of transit systems in a Canadian Press cross-Canada survey, are surprisingly similar across the land.

One is that more and more people are taking their cars to work. A study made in New York several years ago showed that if a man can get into his own car planning to drive to the nearest public transportation terminal, there's a good chance he'll drive all the way into town.

It's reasonable to assume this applies to Canadians, particularly those travelling from the suburbs where multiple-fare arrangements are often in effect.

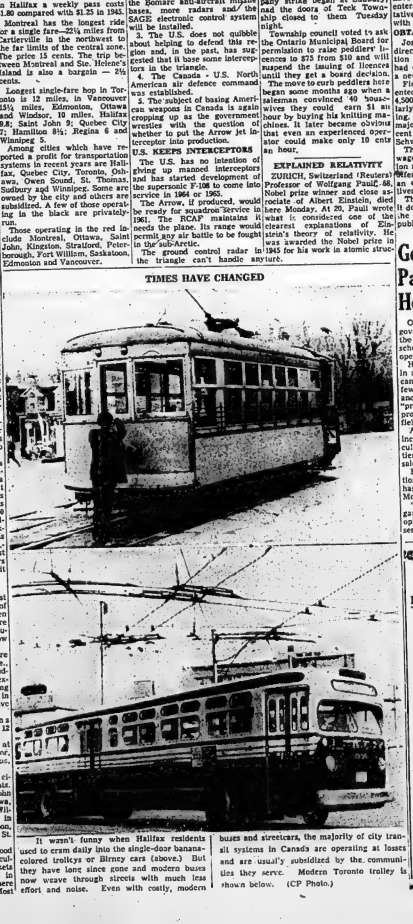
INDUSTRY SHIFTS

The shifting of industry to outlying areas where parking is less of a problem than downtown, also means more people are more likely to drive than ride.

Traffic congestion described as a reason for the drop in use of transit systems after working hours, Monday and other entertainment which require nighttime travel has lost many adherents to the small screen. Fewer people are going out after dark.

The economic recession of the last year has meant, many men, with no jobs to go to, have stayed home. With less spare money, women make fewer afternoon shopping trips. When they do go out it may be only to a nearby shopping plaza, a post-war innovation that has cut the business of downtown stores.

Car pools, splitting costs of gas and parking, and the five - day week, reducing Saturday travel, are also hitting public transportation.



Some cities have their own causes. In Ottawa for example, there has been a tendency to abolish these in recent years. In Halifax a weekly pass costs $1.80 compared with $1.25 in 1945.

Montreal has the longest ride for a single fare—22½ miles from Carterville in the northwest to the far limits of the central zone. The price 15 cents. The trip between Montreal and Ste. Helene's Island is also a bargain — 2½ cents.

Longest single-fare hop in Toronto is 12 miles; in Vancouver 15½ miles, Edmonton, Ottawa and Windsor, 10 miles, Halifax 9.8; Saint John 9; Quebec City 7; Hamilton 8½; Regina 6 and Winnipeg 5.

Among cities which have reported a profit for transportation systems in recent years are Halifax, Quebec City, Toronto, Oshawa, Owen Sound, St. Thomas, Sudbury and Winnipeg. Some are owned by the city and others are subsidized. A few of those operating in the black are privately-run.

Those operating in the red include Montreal, Ottawa, Saint John, Kingston, Stratford, Peterborough, Fort William, Saskatoon, Edmonton and Vancouver.

It wasn't funny when Halifax residents used to cram daily into the single-door banana-colored trolleys or Birney cars (above.) But they have lent since gone and modern buses now weave through streets with much less effort and noise. Even with costly, modern buses and streetcars, the majority of city transit systems in Canada are operating at losses and are usually subsidized by the communities they service. Modern Toronto trolley is shown below. (CP Photo.)

Great Triangular Land Mass Causing Great Concern on How to Be Defended by Air

OTTAWA (CP) — If North America had been divided right across by the 49th parallel, the air defence worries of the United States and Canada would be eased considerably.

It is a great triangular land mass, with the Lakehead, Windsor, and the Gaspe Peninsula at three points thrusts like an enormous delta into the United States.

It is this area Ottawa is talking about when it refers to the air defence of Canada. If this country can't adequately defend it—or, rather, the air above it—then the U.S. will have to.

This area is as vital to the U.S. as it is to Canada. If it were inadequately defended, any enemy bomber force could use it as the main entry route to U.S. targets. American interceptors can—and do—fly over Canada from their northern airfields as a matter of basics. But they can't adequately cover the Lakehead - Windsor-Gaspe triangle from their own bases.

Therefore:

1. Nearly all Canada's air defence effort has been concentrated in the triangle and will be in the future. Eight of the RCAF's nine home interceptor squadrons are based in this region, as well as the heaviest radar construction.

2. It is in this same area that the Bomarc anti-aircraft missile bases, more radars and the SAGE electronic control system will be installed.

3. The U.S. does not publish about helping to defend this region and, in the past, has suggested that it has some interceptors in the triangle.

The Canadian - U.S. North American air defence command was established.

3. The subject of basing American weapons in Canada is again cropping up as the government wrestles with the question of whether to put the Arrow jet interceptor into production.

U.S. KEEPS INTERCEPTORS

The U.S. has no intention of giving up manned interceptors and has started development of the supersonic F-108 to come into service in 1964 or 1963.

The Arrow, if produced, would be ready for operation service in 1961. The RCAF maintains it needs the plane. Its range would permit any air battle to be fought in the sub-Arctic.

The present control radar in the triangle can't handle anyturf more interceptors than it does right now. It won't be able to handle more until late 1961 after more radars and SAGE have been installed.

Thus there is no present plan to base American fighter squadrons in Canada beyond the two stationed in Newfoundland and Labrador.

But it is a problem the government may have to face eventually.

Officials maintain the matter does not involve Canadian sovereignty. It concerned simply obtaining the best possible defence for Canada and the U.S. within the resources of each.

Whether the government could ignore political implications cannot be foreseen. But it is known that the government is attempting some preliminary probing of public opinion on the matter.

Teck Township Closes Door To Peddlers

KIRKLAND LAKE (CP) — Door-to-door salesmen are disappearing steadily in this area since the International Nickel Company strike began at Sudbury, and the doors of Teck Township closed to them Monday night.

Township council voted to ask the Ontario Municipal Board for permission to raise peddlers' licences to $75 from $10 and will suspend the issuing of licences until they get a board decision.

The move to curb peddlers here began some months ago when a salesman convinced 60 housewives they could earn $1 an hour by buying his knitting machines. It later became obvious that even an experienced operator could make only 10 cents an hour.

Deliverers Refuse Latest Offer Of Publishers

NEW YORK (AP)—Members of the striking newspaper deliverers' union have rejected a federal mediator's proposal to vote again on a publishers' contract offer.

The strike against nine major New York dailies began when the union members rejected the same offer last December 9.

The membership's rejection of the proposal Tuesda ynight reversed the union negotiating committee's earlier agreement to resubmit the $7 wage package offer to union members.

The action dimmed hopes of a settlement soon. Further bargaining sessions have not been arranged. Both sides are expected to meet today.

STRIKE CONTINUES

Sam Feldman, president of the deliverers' union, said the strike would continue.

The Publishers Association of New York City called the union members' action "a complete rejection of their own elected and appointed officials and negotiators — a rejection that will be viewed by the public only as wanton, reckless, capricious and irresponsible." The statement added:

"Now that the union members have twice rejected agreements entered into by their representatives, the publishers wonder—with whom can they negotiate?"

OBTAINED VOTE CONSENT

Joseph F. Finnegan, national director of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, had obtained the agreement for a new vote.

Finnegan's proposal was presented to 1,500 members of the 4,500-member union at a regularly-scheduled monthly meeting. They rejected it with a majority estimated at 80 per cent by union lawyer Asher Schwartz.

The original vote against the wage offer was 877 to 727. Union negotiators had accepted the offer tentatively Dec. 1 in an eight-hour walkout by deliverers that day.

The union membership turned it down the next day and struck the papers. The papers halted publication two days later.

Govt. to Stand Pat on Present Hospital Plan

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government plans to stand pat on the present hospital insurance scheme until it can be tested in operation for a few years.

Health Minister Monteith said in an interview Tuesday that he can see no plan for the next few years in the hospital insurance program he described as probably the most ambitious project ever undertaken in the field of health in Canada."

An extension of the program to include home care for tuberculosis and mental hospital patients is not being planned, he said.

Extension of federal participation to cover medical care also has not been considered, Mr. Monteith said.

"Our sole interest in this regard at the moment is in developing and perfecting the present hospital insurance plan."

Demands to Settle 86-Day Inco Strike Growing Louder; Wives Put Union on Spot

SUDBURY (CP) — Demands even expelled for open attacks on for settlement of the 86-day Inco strike are growing louder in the Nickel Belt.

With government - sponsored talks having resumed in Toronto, Mayor Joseph Fabbro of Sudbury yesterday called on the Ontario government to exert "extreme pressure" on both company and union.

"The time is ripe for a settlement," he said in an interview. "The government should exert the utmost in pressure on both parties to reach a settlement. The government has tremendous powers and its opinions could hardly be discarded."

Rev. H. J. Murphy, Roman Catholic priest to hundreds of miners in the nearby Sturgeon district, said growing pressure on the union was what caused the Toronto talks to resume.

"It was the mass meeting of women last Friday that really did it," he said. "It put the union on the spot."

WIVES SINGE VOTE

"Meanwhile leaders of the back-to-work movement among striking wives renewed attempts for a supervised vote among the mine-mill membership on any new offer submitted by the company.

Mrs. Lloia Breen and Mrs. Margaret Grenier said "more than half of the 13,000 strikers in this area are ready to go back to work if a satisfactory settlements it wage offer with improvements in fringe benefits.

"Women have been prevalent that the original strike vote was conducted unfairly," said Mrs. Breen. "A vote supervised by persons outside the union would guarantee the men were handled fairly."

The union issued a statement saying any "realistic" proposal from the company would result in a vot vote but it would be conducted "only by the union."

SECRET BALLOT QUESTION

Asked whether there would be a secret ballot even if a company proposal was handled by union negotiators, financial secretary Jim Zakes said:

"That's up to the negotiating committee."

The union statement said the Toronto meetings were called because the back-to-work movement failed and "provided no encouragement" for Inco negotiators.

"It is our hope that the attitude of International Nickel Company has changed and that they are now prepared to enter into bargaining so that the strike can be settled.

EXECUTIVE EYED

There were indications the back-to-work movement might be followed by a fresh campaign to remove the union executive. Said another of the dissident wives, Mrs. Marion Ross:

"Now that we've got the ball rolling there's quite a bit that could be done—like wiping out executives."

The women claim support from Inco workers who pay dues but refuse to join the union. They number anywhere from 300 to 1,200.

They also claim support from leaders of past pro-rata agreements the union executive. One of these men, who asked his name not be used, said he is only waiting for the "proper time" for another try.

Anti-Communist functions have been agitating in the union since 1949 and more than 40 members have been suspended, fined or

Canadian Breweries to Resist Any Anti-Combines Charges

TORONTO (CP) — Any charges brought against Canadian Breweries Ltd. under anti-combines legislation will be vigorously resisted, the boundary thinks in a letter to shareholders.

The letter—signed by E. P. Taylor, chairman—says Justice Minister Fulton's announcement is an interim step and that prosecution will be launched against the company.

"No charge has yet been laid, the letter continues, and the company has no knowledge of the details of any such charge.

It repeats a statement from the company's annual report which states that the company is convinced it has done nothing contrary to law.

The letter says it is not written as a criticism of the government or the authorities whose responsibility it is to decide whether a prosecution is to be undertaken, but to inform shareholders of the company's position.

It reviews the report in May, 1953, of the Restrictive Trade Practices Commission which concluded that Canadian Breweries did not control the brewing industry, and dealt with other competition, did not dominate the beer market and did not have the power to diktate prices or hinder sales competition.

"The report recommended, however, steps be taken to prevent Canadian Breweries from expanding further by acquisition of either the assets or a controlling interest in its competitors; to prevent it from acquiring any additional control of Western Canada Breweries Ltd.; and to prevent it from entering into any undertaking with any of its competitors for the purpose of regulating prices or lessening competition.

Following this report, the letter adds, the company while believing it had not violated the law in any respect—wrote to the minister of justice undertaking on behalf of itself and its subsidiaries that it would not undertake any action contravening the suggestions of the commission, except for the suggestions concerning Western Canada Breweries.

In regard to the commission's reference to Western Canada Breweries — in which Canadian Breweries now holds a controlling interest—the letter says:

"We consider with all respect that the commission erred. Anyone who knows the facts concerning the industry in Western Canada would come to the conclusion that the acquisition by Canadian Breweries Ltd. of a controlling interest in a reputable brewing company in Western Canada with which it was not competing and which still competes with the other breweries that were then operating, affected the competitive situation in the brewing business in western Canada to a negligible degree."

The letter adds:

"Since this investigation was commenced in 1951, one of our principal competitors in Eastern Canada has acquired control of two large brewing companies operating in Manitoba and the other in British Columbia and recently another of our principal competitors in Eastern Canada has acquired control of a large brewing company operating breweries in Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia.

"If the company is charged with a breach of the provisions of the combines investigation act we can only assume that it will be because of acquisitions made during the 1930s and early 1940s in Ontario and that now, some 15 or 20 years later, notwithstanding that all the information concerning such acquisitions was at all times a matter of public knowledge, it is being suggested that what the company did at that time was wrong."

Spiritual Father of Catholics Most Notable Death in 1958

By JOSEPH MacSWEEN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Pope Pius XII, spiritual father to 500,000,000 Roman Catholics and honored as the "Pope of Peace," died in 1958 at the age of 82.

Death came to Eugenio Giuseppe Giovanni Pacelli, the Mediator, after he suffered two strokes. Despite his frail physique he had earlier survived serious illness.

Ascending the papal throne in 1939, Pius became known as one of the most democratic popes, greeting many audiences and greeting many thousands at the Vatican with personal words of blessing.

Ole Archie Wins Prize Award, Named Fighter of the Year

By MURRAY ROSE

NEW YORK (AP) — Light-heavyweight champion Archie Moore, after 22 years of pro batting, today won the award he prized above all others—the Edward J. Neil Memorial Plaque as Fighter of the Year.

He was the unanimous pick of the Boxing Writers Association for the 1958 trophy. Against Archie, who celebrated another birthday (42, or 40) last Saturday, will share the honors with another old timer, broadcaster-writer Sam Taub, at the BWA's annual dinner early in January.

Taub, a 72 - year - old New Yorker and a pioneer boxing broadcaster, was chosen to receive the James J. Walker Memorial Trophy "for long and meritorious service to boxing."

DREAM COME TRUE

"This is a dream come true," said Archie, "and makes it a big year all around."

Taub, for once in long career, was almost speechless.

"I'm thrilled," he finally said when the BWA's unanimous vote for one of their own was announced. Sam is one of the three surviving charter members of the association.

Moore fought what he himself called "the most sensational fight of my career" last Wednesday night when he rallied from the brink of defeat to knock out Yvon Durelle in the Ile des Soeurs, N.B., in the 11th round of a memorable title bout in Montreal.

It was Archie's seventh defense of the crown he won six years ago from Joey Maxim. His knockout was the 122th of his 26-year career and made him the all-time knockout champ of boxing. Archie hasn't been beaten by a right-heavyweight in seven years and his current undefeated streak has reached 16.

KNOCKOUT KING

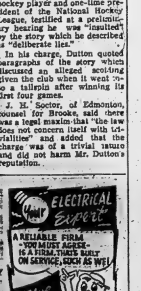
Moore has won his last five title defenses by knockouts. His record is 175-24-6.

Taub, an effervescent little fellow, writes a boxing column for the Daily Sports Bulletin. His vivid radio accounts of the great fights of the golden 30s and the hectic 40s made him nationally known.

The Neil Plaque is named in memory of the Associated Press sports writer killed in 1938 while serving as a war correspondent in Spain. The Walker Trophy is named for the late mayor of New York, a gay, dapper man who loved boxing and helped its growth.

Sports Mag Editor Faces Libel Charge

CALGARY (CP) — James Brooke of Edmonton has been ordered to stand trial on a charge of defamatory libel laid by football executive Murray (Red) Dutton, president of Calgary Stampeders.



Brooke is editor of Western Sportsweek, a weekly sports magazine. Dutton laid the charge following publication of an article in the Oct. 3 issue which dealt with a Stampeder losing streak in the Western Inter-provincial Football Union.

The case is to be heard before the Alberta Supreme Court, probably late in January.

Dutton, former major league hockey player and one-time president of the National Hockey League, testified at a preliminary hearing he now "installed" by the story which he described as "deliberate lies."

In his charge, Dutton quoted paragraphs of the story which discussed an alleged scolding given the club when it went 0-2 to a tailspin after winning its first four games.

J. H. Sector, of Edmonton, counsel for Brooke, said there was a legal maxim that "the law does not concern itself with trivialities" and added that the charge was of a trivial nature and did not harm Mr. Dutton's reputation.

Beavers Blank U.S. National Hockey Team

FORT WILLIAM (CP) — Fort William Beavers of the Thunder Bay Senior Hockey League handed the touring United States national amateur team its first of the season, blanking the Americans 2-0 Tuesday night.

Outstanding in the wide-open contest was Fort William goalkeeper Bert Brooks, who turned aside 42 shots.

Norm Francis and Fred Bachart scored the goals, the latter after the U.S. team had benched its goalie in favor of an extra forward.

In the second period the visitors claimed a goal to tie the score at 1-1.

The goal judge flashed the red light, but the puck appeared behind the cage. The judge said the puck had gone through a hole in the mesh. A hole was found and repaired but referee Al Tolkko overruled the judge and the score remained 1-0.

WITH SEA FLEAS

TORONTO (CP) — Marty Nugent, 31, prominent amateur Toronto hockey player of the early 1920s, died of a heart attack Tuesday at his home. Nugent was a defenceman with the National Sea Fleas, Allan Cup champions of 1922.

Browns to Rely On Passing

CLEVELAND (CP) — Cleveland Browns probably will do plenty of passing when they meet New York Giants in their National Football League playoff next Sunday.

The Browns went to New York last Sunday expecting to rely heavily on the pass but the weather, field conditions and the fact they moved in front early in the game altered plans.

The Giants beat the Browns 13-10 to tie them for first place in the NFL's eastern division. The winner of next Sunday's game in New York goes against Baltimore Colts for the league title.

Browns quarterback Milt Plum is one of the top passers in the league. He wound up the season just behind Eddie LeBaron of Washington Redskins with a 54-per-cent completion record.

BRITISH STEEL

Britain's production of crude steel rose from 12,700,000 tons in 1946 to 21,700,000 tons in 1957.

Italian Sun Poses Problem For Athletes

LONDON (AP) — Britain's Olympic Games chiefs have called in scientists and doctors to help prepare their athletes for the 1960 Games. They will be told under a sweltering Italian sun.

Sandy Duncan, secretary of the British Olympic Association, said track and field coach Geoff Dyson were worried about what would happen to British athletes called to run races like the marathon and 10,000 metres under the hot August sun of Rome.

"So we asked the Medical Research Council to investigate medical aspects of this great heat problem," Duncan said.

The result is that volunteer athletes will act as guinea pigs as specially heated chambers at the council's headquarters here.

"They will undergo tests in the heat chambers," Dyson said. "From these and other experiments we shall make our preparations for Rome and the 1960 Olympic Games."

Duncan said they wanted to find the answer to questions such as:

"How soon should our team arrive in Rome? Will they need acclimatizing? Would it be better to arrive at the last minute?"

JUNIORS GO SOUTH

TORONTO (CP)—Three Canadians will take part in the first Orange Bowl Cup tennis matches Dec. 31-Jan. 4 at Miami Beach. Don Curtis and Harry Fauquier, 16-year-olds from Toronto, and Keith Carpenter, 17, of Montreal will join players from 16 nations in the first staging of the "junior aged" Davis Cup meet. Hugh Peacock of Toronto will act as non-playing captain.

Varsity Meets Whitby Dunlops In Big Test

TORONTO (CP) — The University of Toronto hockey team, hoping to compete in the 1960 Olympic Games, gets a chance to show its worth tonight in an exhibition game against the world champion Whitby Dunlops.

For the last few years the Varsity Blues have dominated the intercollegiate league and feel they are ready for a chance to represent Canada in the Olympics. Games in Squaw Valley, Calif., or make up a portion of the team that does make the trip.

For the Dunlops the game means little and from the fee they will receive, they'll buy a set of blazers, commemorating the international title they won last winter.

This will be the only major team the Blues will meet all season and it is their big chance to impress observers who may be dubbed super by the calibre of opposition they have faced in the past.

SEES TOUGH GAME

Whitby Manager Wren Blair whose team is leaving away from from the rest of the Eastern Ontario Senior A group, expects a tough game.

"Varsity will play away over their heads for them, because it would be such a big one for them to win."

Blair feels any Olympic entry should include at least three Varsity forward lines, Gaetan Brodie and Mike Elik.

Doug Williams, the Whitby rookie last year, has joined the Blues and will play tonight. Aside from him and a few others, Blair will send out much the same team that won the world title in Oslo.

Harness Drivers Elected to Hall of Fame

BY JOHN CHANDLER

GOSHEN, N.Y. (AP) — The great names of harness racing in the last century, 39 famous owners, breeders, trainers and drivers, were elected today to the Hall of Fame of the Trotting Horse Museum.

The list of sulky immortals was announced by E. Roland Harriman, president of the museum, adjoining Goshen's Historic Harness Oval.

In the past, only horses were elected as immortals to the Hall of Fame. Under the rules, a living person may be elected to the hall and to receive a two-thirds vote of the museum trustees to be chosen.

NAMES KEDYK

Heading the list was William S. Ryadyk who lived near Goshen and owned the famous stallion Hambletonian, foaled in 1849. Hambletonian never raced, but became the greatest sire of all time. Approximately 99 per cent of harness horses now on the track trace directly to him in the male line.

Another elected was William H. Cane, Mr. Hambletonian, who took over the famous 3-year-old race in 1930 and made it a sulky classic. Cane died in 1955 after which the Hambletonian was moved to Dunedin, Fla.

Others included Pop Geers, noted driver killed during a race at Wheeling, W. Va., in 1924; Horton McHenry, who drove Dan Patch in his races; Leland Stanford, senator from California and owner of the famed Palo Alto Farm; Sep Palin, who drove Greyhound and Hoot Mon to Hambletonian victories; Benjamin F. White, winner of four Hambletonians; and Peter Volo-mite, tobacco man who raced a large stable on the grand circuit for many years and E. H. Harriman, founder of the Arden Homestead Stable and owner of Historic Track, and the champion pacer John R. Gentry.

Bill Corum, Sports Writer, Dies of Cancer

NEW YORK (AP) — Bill Corum, a small-town boy who found fame in New York and contentment in the blue grass of Kentucky, died Tuesday night at the age of 64.

Cancer of the lung, complicated by pneumonia, ended his dual career of a syndicated sports columnist for the New York Journal American and president of Churchill Downs race track in Louisville, Ky.

He became critically ill during the weekend, and literally the newspaper for which he worked will not carry his obituary today. With eight other metropolitan dailies, it has suspended publication because of a de-liverers' strike.

BOXING COMMENTATOR

Corum specialized in baseball, racing and boxing in his column. He also was widely known as a radio and television commentator at major boxing bouts.

Max Kase, sports editor of The Journal American, said today, "There is nothing I can add to the wonderful record he has made as a man."

Sports writers and sportsmen echoed Kase's feelings.

Corum was born at Speed, Mo., July 10, 1895. In 1925 he joined The Journal American as a baseball writer. That was the year he saw his first Kentucky Derby, and he praised the classic so much that in 1949, when Col. Matt Winn died, he was the logical choice for the presidency of the race track.

CONTINUED WRITING

Corum continued in his sports writing job, but for two months each spring he went to the blue grass country to conduct the spring meeting.

Corum first entered hospital during the world series in October.

Corum's wife died in 1953. He is survived by his mother, a brother, Clayton, and a son, Robert.

Musical Star Howard Keel Now Has Simon Peter Role

BY BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The big man with the flowing hair and beard looked like a classical painting of Jove. You never would have recognized him as musical comedy star Howard Keel.

It was Keel, all right. I could tell when he opened his mouth and the booming bass-baritone came out.

This is the mountie who answered Ann Blyth's Indian Love Call, the man who got Annie's gun and Betty Hutton and crooned Pagan Love Song to Esther Williams.

Now he is playing Simon Peter in The Big Fisherman, the Biblical epic from the late Lloyd C. Douglas best-seller. How come this change of pace?

"It was due solely to the astuteness of my agent," Keel said. "He had the feel I could do it, and suggested me to the producer, Rowland V. Lee.

Howard did a thriller in England but this is his first Hollywood film since he joined the exodus from MGM. I mentioned that it might start a new, non-singing career for him.

"Don't do it, so," he said, "though this kind of picture is pretty specialized. There are just so many of them made. At least it may get the producers to realizing I can do something else besides sing. Actually, I did six or seven pictures at MGM in which I didn't utter a note."

Howard is a little bitter about his departure from MGM. During his last three years there he did but one picture, Kismet.

"It was a bomb," he admitted. "I never worked so hard on a picture in my life, but I was up against great odds. The whole thing was done with too heavy a hand."

For months he tried to get his freedom from the studio. He felt he would have had a chance to sing South Pacific if he had been allowed to test for it. Howard played the Emile de Becque role in Kansas City and could have done his own songs, while Rosanno Brazzi's voice was dubbed.

But Howard has little time for bitterness. He is busy minding money in various fields, including night clubs. I asked why he didn't sing anymore, since Mario Lanza found so lucrative.

"Actually, I started out to train as a concert singer and I've studied a great deal in the last five years," he said. "But Lanza was established as a concert singer, and it would take me two years to make my own place in the field. That would mean a lot of travelling, and I've got three kids who are at ages when I think I should spend a much time with them as possible."

Christmas Sing With Bing Will Have Kathy in Group

BY CHARLES MERCER

NEW YORK (AP)—This year is no exception to a seasonal practice Bing Crosby established in 1935. He seeks as many people as possible to join him Christmas Eve in a Christmas Sing with Bing on CBS radio (at 9 p.m. EST).

Crosby will be joined this year by his wife, the former Kathy Grant, who will sing in public with her husband for the first time on any radio or television network. The program also will feature choruses from Fiji, Hawaii, Alaska, Salt Lake City, the Vatican, and the atomic submarine Nautilus.

Why does Crosby go to the effort involved for a one-hour radio program with remote pick-ups from around the world? His explanation:

"It's the one time of the year when I'm sure I can make my favorite entertainer serve something bigger than mere entertainment. It's the performance in which I'm most at ease with listeners because I know that they know I'm giving my best."

Crosby recalls that he was asked into doing the 1935 Christmas Eve broadcast — and was astonished by the enthusiastic public reception of the program. "Why, some newspapers even wrote editorials about it."

This year, as in the past, he will sing Adeste Fideles. Interestingly, he will be urged to make his first recording of the number several years before the war.

"Being only a crooner," Crosby recalls, "I felt that I didn't have sufficient stature to sing a song with religious implications. But Jack Kapp (a recording company executive) insisted that Adeste Fideles through the years had become virtually a Christmas carol. I agreed finally.

"Silent Night was different. I didn't feel that it fit into the carol category. Moreover, I thought it would be wrong for me to take income from the sale of such a record. The way I saw it, it would be like cashing in on the church or the Bible.

"But brother Larry came up with a suggestion. He set up a fund for the children then being taken care of by American missions in China. The plan was to use the royalties from Silent Night and pour them into the fund. In that way I'd avoid cashing in on religious songs.

"We helped clothe and support those kids until they were grown, looking for fresh tax money, ruled that our scheme was illegal. By that time we had put $250,000 into that worthwhile cause.

"When the second war came along Larry assembled an entertainment unit composed of a chorus line, a band, four or five acts in all. It played the camps and it was financed with money from the Silent Night fund. I went along with the show myself sometimes."

The sparkling play of Jean Paul Fayette, who has been the most consistent player on the Macs' roster this season, has shot the popular centre to within striking distance of top-snipping playing coach Ike Hildebrand. Ike has a 16-18 record for 34 points while Jean Paul is nudging him with 13-17-30 mark.

JEAN-PAUL FAYETTE

The likeable Cornwall-born French Canadian, who has won the "most gentlemanly player" award two years in a row, is enjoying a remarkable season. His clever work on the pivotal spot has foundationed not a few scores, while individually he has been a distinct threat in front of the goalmouth.

With almost half the schedule to go Jean Paul is within five goals of his last season's output, while he is 13 assists short of last year's record.

Paul's consistency this year has been nothing short of remarkable. He has been anything but an "in-and-outer" already has been anything but an "in-and-outer" already in hockey, scoring when the team needed itself or setting up a team-mate when in position to do so.

A master of the nearly-lost art of stickhandling, Paul has thrilled the fans on not a few occasions with his mastery of the puck. He is not a "puck-hog," nor does he hesitate to "feed" a mate if he is in a better position to score.

If he maintains the high calibre of play, Jean Paul will probably enjoy the best season of a colorful hockey career. He was little short of brilliant in his effort before home town fans last Sunday night when he scored one and set up another of the Macs' three goals.

The statement of the year came from a veteran habitue of the press box last Friday night in a game against Hull-Ottawa. From somewhere in the pews a fan cracks "Come, Fayette, what are you doing?" The press-boxer growled, "Don't worry about Fayette, buh. If all the Macs played like he does, there would be less worries about the club."

Was there any special reason for his startling brilliancy and subsequent consistency of play? Paul was asked.

Jean Paul hesitated. He is always reticent about talking about himself. "I knew from the start I was going to have a good year. The main reason, I think, is because I have felt better physically than in other years. I had little trouble in getting into condition. I got top-notch when the camp opened, and it has been that way thus far through the season."

Jean Paul has no ambitions to become the top scorer of the club or the league. "I will be satisfied with a point a game, if I am lucky enough to get one." He is now point ahead of his goal thus far, the Macs having played 28 games with Jean Paul aggregating 29 points.

The main points he seeks are the two that are credited to the club after a game. Like Lou Smrke, Jean Paul is a team player scoring whenever the opportunity presents itself or assists all the best and most effective way possible.

However, Jean Paul's 29 point, five behind the 34 of the top point-getter of the club, Ike Hildebrand, just tops by one three other Macs who share third place with 24 points. "Wonder" Brown and Lou Smrke each have a 16-12 mark while Johnny McLellan has 10 and 18.

Hildebrand, Brown and Smrke share the club's goal getting honors with 16, while Ike, Johnny McLellan and Al Dewsbury divide assists tops with 18. Incidentally Johnny is the "bad man" of the team with 38 minutes in the hoosegow to his credit.

Another player who is enjoying his best season with the Macs is that bigsline bulldozer, Moe Benoit. Since taking off a load of business worries, Myles Morosse has taken on a new lease of hockey life. He has been a big asset to the club both defensively and going away. He has been a solid stumbling block in front of Gordie Bell while his blazing slapshot has hit paydirt often. Offensively Moe has been going great guns, too, listing 16 assists, while potting a pair of goals.

Unsung Centre Norm Johnson Is Plugging Along Quietly Beating Habs' 2 Boy Wonders

By KENNEDY WELLS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Boston Bruins have turned up another late - blossoming rookie to cause a falk flower 16 the National Hockey League's harsh climate.

He is Norm Johnson, a boyfaced centre and defenceman playing his first full NHL season at 26—middle-age by sport standards.

Brought up from Springfield Indians of the American Hockey League last season when the Bruins' schedule was almost finished, Johnson really caught fire during the playoffs, as he scored four goals in 12 games during Bruins' gallant attempt to win the Stanley Cup.

This year, although sports writers are crediting about the two real Canadiens' boy wonders Ralph Backstrom and Ab McDonald, Johnson plugs along quietly beating them.

LEADS BACKSTROM

The 170 - pound Moose Jaw, Sask., native leads all NHL rookies with two goals and 16 assists and on that basis alone should be a strong contender for top place in midyear voting for the rookie-of-the-year award, the Calder Trophy.

Johnson's career is reminiscent of that of Larry Regan, the 155-pound forward Bruins brought out of semi-retirement in the 1956-57 season to win the Calder Trophy.

Like Johnson, Regan was 26 when he entered the NHL—an age when most hockey players either have had a fling with the big league or have resigned themselves to playing out their string in the minors.

Johnson, whose curly hair is thinning in front, got his big chance when Bruins' sent Real Chevrefils down to Springfield for his indifferent play and cavalier attitude towards training regulations.

They decided to take a gamble on Johnson and he didn't let them down.

CLEVER PLAYMAKER

During his three previous seasons in professional hockey he had shown himself a clever playmaker and an able rearguard when the occasion demanded.

His first two years were spent with Brandon Wheat Kings in the Western Hockey League and his play there in 1956-57 attracted the attention of Boston scouts as he scored 22 goals and assisted on 46 more in 70 games.

With Springfield in 52 games before Bruins beckoned he scored only eight goals but set up 33 others.

This season his biggest success has been on a line with left-winger Vic Stasiuk and right-winger Jerry Toppazzini and all three are well up in the NHL point-race.

Tonight, in the only NHL game scheduled, Boston is to Chicago against the Black Hawks whom they defeated 4-2 last Saturday to snap a losing streak. A victory tonight would put them only one point back of second-place Detroit Red Wings.

Kingston Loses Heartbreaker Blows Third-Frame 4-2 Lead

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

An escort of policemen and arena ushers had to protect a referee from the North Bay hockey fans Tuesday night after two third period penalties set up Sudbury Wolves for a 7-6 win over North Bay Trappers.

Referee Bud MacDonald of Sudbury escaped to his dressing room through a wild uproar in which several fans had to be forcibly restrained from laying hands on him.

Trappers in last place in the OHA-NOHA were leading 5-3 when MacDonald handed out penalties to North Bay defenceman Jean Therrien and goalie Marv Edwards just 23 seconds apart. That was all Kingston needed. A power - packed offensive onslaught produced the goals in 52 seconds and a win which put them in third place.

In the other senior game Whitby Dunlops came from behind to edge Kingston Merchants 5-4 in the Eastern OHA.

BITTERLY FOUGHT

It was a bitterly-fought affair all the way at North Bay. Late in the final period two fights erupted and at one point Trapper winger Stan Maxwell charged referee MacDonald to protest a cross-checking call. He won himself a 10-minute ruledout.

Joe Dempsey, Trappers' 200-pound trailer, tried to tangle with MacDonald and the referee was held back by players when he attempted to get to Dempsey after some heated remarks.

Joe Zorbas fired three goals for Sudbury with Armand Lemieux, Norm Guimond, John Bobenic and Mickey Dohan getting the rest. North Bay scorers were Gerry Cabana, Ted Szydlowski, Cleland Mortson, Tony Pocia, Ches Koneczny and George Gosselin.

At Whitby the last-place Merchants hold a 4-2 lead with 13 minutes left and were out-skating the league leaders in probably their sharpest performance of the season.

Quebec Aces Defeat Macs 6-2 In Second Exhibition Game

SHERBROOKE, Que. — Sants Claus ha stwo strikes on Wing Hockey in this Quebec city, even Allen Cup champions won't lure the fatihful from the shopping centers.

Last night only 325 fans turned out to see the Quebec Aces of the Quebec Hockey League hand the Belleville McFarlands their second consecutive exhibition game defeat. The score was 6-2.

It was another of those "gentlemanly" games with only one penalty being assessed by the referee, a minor going to the Aces' Duke in the third period.

The Macs trek to Chicoutimi today where they meet the Saguenens of that city in the third and final exhibition game of their Quebec series tonight.

The Aces scored two goals in the first period outpointed the Allen Cup champions 4-1 in the second frame with the McFarlands counting the only goal of the third period.

The line of Hildebrand, Brown and McLellan stood out for the Macs, the playing coach and "Wiener" scoring the goals with each getting an assist and McLellan a pair.

Maxwell, Bailey, O'Ree, LeClair, Kukulowicz and Bulloch were the Aces goalgetters. LeClair also earned a couple of assists.

O'Ree scored the first goal of the sinless opening period with LeClair making it 2-0 for the Aces late in the frame.

Hildebrand took McLellan's pass after four minutes of the second chapter to break the McFarland egg, but the Aces flipped back with four goals in seven minutes. LeClair started it giving Maxwell a paydirt pass and Bailey upped the score to 3-1 two minutes later. Kukulowicz added the third on a play with Teal and Bulloch closed the splurge with a neat counter from a pass from LeClair.

"Wiener" Brown beat Miller in the Aces nets for the second Belleville counter after four minutes of play in the third period. The Macs failed to capitalize when Dube drew the only sentence of the game at 7.40.

LeBaron, Bowl Title Winners

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Little Eddie LeBaron and big Jimmy Brown were the passing and ground-gaining titles respectively of the National Football League.

LeBaron, chuck-handed quarterback of the Washington Redskins, wound up the season with 79 completions in 145 attempts for a 9.41 average gain. He connected for 11 touchdowns and posted a 54.5 per cent completion percentage.

Brown, who had the ground-gaining title won as early as four weeks ago when he passed Steve van Buren's old record mark of 1,146 yards for a season, finished with 1,527 yards gained on 337 runs. He averaged 4.9 yards per try.

Behind Brown in the ground gaining department came Baltimore's Alan Ameche, 791 yards on 171 attempts for a 4.6 average. Joe Perry of San Francisco ranked third with 758 yards and a 6.1 average.

Games' Brass Says Complaints 'Sour Grapes'

MONTREAL (CP)—Jack Davies, president of the Canadian British Empire Games Association says that complaints against officials made by several athletes concerning the B.E. Games held here at Cardiff sounded to him like "sour grapes."

"These fellows are not qualified to assess the competence of the officials in team management. They were elected by responsible sporting associations from across the country. We couldn't possibly have had a more conscientious group of officials."

The controversy began when team general manager Bob Osborne of Vancouver recommended at an AAU meeting this month the suspension of an athlete over an incident that occurred at a party in England.

Osborne didn't elaborate, nor did he name the athlete, but runner Joe Mullins, in an interview later, said "I'll tell the man Osborne is after."

TEAM CAPTAIN AGREES

Runner Doug Clement of Vancouver, games team captain, and hole vaulter Bob Reid of Vancouver also accused officials in interviews. One said that officials spent "more time in reception parlors than in taking care of their athletes."

Reid said he feels it is "unfortunate that the AAU wanted to make such a big thing of a rather "innocent" incident. Now that they had, he said, he feels he must state what Canadian team members" conduct was the worst than that of the officials.

He said the team expense funds were inadequate, causing boat transportation instead of air transport on the trip to Cardiff, that coach Bob Adams of Saskatoon had used "high school coaching methods," and that there had been general inefficiency and selfishness shown by officials on the trip.

Connelly Still Leads Junior Scoring Race

TORONTO (CP)—Wayne Connelly continued to move up the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A scoring ladder this week and after the games Friday his borough forward has amassed 49 points.

He has counted 19 goals and picked up 30 assists.

Nearest contenders are St. Catharine TeePee centre Stan Millis, three points behind with 30 goals and 26 assists. Bill Mahoney of Peterborough is in third place with 45 points made up of 23 goals and 22 assists.

Statistics including Monday night's games show Chico Maki of TeePees is fourth with 41 points and Peterborough's Larry Babcock fifth with 32.

Jacques Caron, who minds the nets for the Peter, leads the goalies with a 2.57 goals-per-game average, having allowed 36 goals in 14 games. Dennis Doherty of St. Catharine's is a close second with 2.92.

Olson Wins By Freak KO

FRESNO, Calif. (AP) — Bobo Olson, former world middleweight boxing champion, scored a freak technical knockout Tuesday night over Tommy Villa of San Jose, Calif., who refused to continue after taking a low blow.

Referee John Reno called the foul at 1:28 of the fifth round. He gave Villa a five-minute rest.

Villa's corner said they would not let Tommy resume the fight. When the five minutes ended, Reno awarded Olson the technical knockout.

California state athletic commission said the verdict is subject to review and possible investigation.

Villa, inexperienced against the veteran Bobo, was far behind on points. He was down for an eight count in the fourth round.

Olson, trying a comeback as a light - heavyweight, weighed 175 pounds, Villa 176. It was Bobo's third straight victory.

Reno said there was no question Villa was struck low with a right hand but he thought Tommy could have continued. Villa, 25, has won 12 fights lost nine and drew two. He substituted for Bobby Cox of Oakland, Calif., who withdrew because of illness.

Wally Brabin Gets the Gate As G.M. Kingston Merchants

KINGSTON (CP)—Wally Brabin, general manager of Kingston Merchants of OHA Senior A eastern division, said Tuesday night he has been fired by the executive of the Limestone Hockey Club, operators of the team.

Brabin said in Whitby that the club had asked for his resignation, effective immediately. The former assistant manager of the world-champion Whitby Dunlops was in that town where the last-place Merchants lost 5-4 to the Dunlops.

Brabin said several reasons were given for his dismissal and remarked: "When a team is in last place, there always has to be a goat."

The 37-year-old executive said the move came as a complete surprise to him.

WON'T REPLACE HIM

Members of the club executive were not immediately available for comment. But Brabin said they were not contemplating hiring a new manager.

He expressed the opinion that the team would continue for the present with Bus Gagnon remaining as coach and club president Reg Walton assuming extra duties.

Brabin said the executive was not satisfied with the team and that an economy drive was a factor in his dismissal.

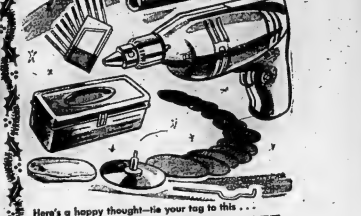
"My future plans are indefinite but I'll probably go back to work in Oshawa as a machinist," he added.

May Issue Challenge for Edinbarch Cup

MONTREAL (CP)—[illegible]re is a chance that an eastern challenge will be issued this spring for the Ogilvie Flour Mills Cup semi-finalists of the Canadian professional hockey championship.

Montreal Royals of the four-team Quebec Hockey League said today that should they win the league championship, they would challenge the Western Hockey League champions for the trophy.

Right now the chances look good for Royals. They are 15 points ahead of the league.



The east-west playoff was discontinued last season at the request of the WHL after four years in which the two leagues made more than $40,000 net profit and attracted some 170,000 fans.

The west had insisted there was no time for the playoff because of their late season, especially planned to bypass the televised Stanley Cup series.

But this year the National Hockey League, the QSHL and the WHL all wind up their regular seasons March

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH., LITTLE ORPHANS UNAWARE . . .

These two little girls look forward to Christmas Day apparently unaware that their mother and father are dead. The children, Paula, 5, left, and Jean, 4½, played all day Sunday in their pyjamas, informing a grandmother who phoned, late in the day they were unable to awaken their parents. Mr. and Mrs. Stuart Faucett had been overcome by carbon monoxide from a faulty fireplace. (AP Wirephoto).

Khrushchev in Class by Self In Drafting NATO Agendas

By ALAN HARVEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Nikita Khrushchev still boasts the West's best writing arm.

When it comes to drafting agendas for NATO, the Russian leader is a class by himself.

A year ago, his lengthy letters to Western leaders, including Prime Minister Diefenbaker, provided the big talking point at the NATO summit meeting in Paris.

Now he's blasting at Berlin. The result is that the foreign German capital topped the list of subjects discussed by the NATO Council in Paris Tuesday.

RESPECT FOR NATO

If it weren't for the chill of fear implicit in the Berlin situation, some NATO experts would almost welcome Khrushchev's habit of pulverizing NATO conferences with polemics and paisaver.

It shows his respect for NATO and may help convince doubting Thomases of its paramount role in Western defence.

"We in NATO tend to be a little critical about political consultation among the 15 member countries," said an official who has watched the NATO Council at work.

"So it's reassuring to have the Russians come along every time NATO meets and say in effect that this is where the West's foreign policy is determined."

In other words, if the Russians believe in NATO maybe Western sceptics should believe in it, too.

Apart from helping to write the agenda for NATO meetings, Khrushchev acts to some degree as the alliance's unpaid publicity man and morale booster, though the comparison obviously has limits.

By fixing the spotlight on Berlin, pen pal Khrushchev has deflected attention from NATO internal worries. These include reports of a new orientation in Italy's foreign policy toward a more neutralist course.

HEADACHE FOR RUSSIA

Nothing detracts from the seriousness of Berlin. It is vital to West Germany and therefore to the West. Because of the day-to-day contrast between the city's western and eastern sectors, it is a throbbing headache for Russia, the living lie to East German propaganda.

For millions of Germans, Berlin is a beacon. Rapidly re-establishing itself as one of Europe's brightest and gayest cities, Berlin is almost to the Federal Republic what Paris is to France.

The mere mention of the name brings a gleam to the eye of Germans who live elsewhere.

"Berlin!" said a trade unionist to a reporter in Cologne last year. "I'd crawl on my hands and knees to get there."

The trade unionist's tribute be accepted laconically by Ber-cause of the glut of nickel on the world market.

ON SHORT WEEK

Because of production cutbacks ordered during the last year, employees were working only a 32-hour week when the strike began.

Inco offered boosts of one and 4% per cent respectively in the second and third years of the contract.

On Nov. 29 the union rejected this proposal, but scaled down its original demand for an eight-per-cent wage boost on a one-year contract to a bid for a three-year with wage increases of about three per cent in each year.

When the strike began, the average hourly wage was $2.20.

Toronto Firm Donates 600 Pairs of Shoes

SUDBURY (AP) — A shipment of 600 pairs of children's shoes to be distributed to families of International - Nickel Company strikers has been donated by a Toronto firm.

Rev. J. J. Delaney, head of the Catholic charities organization aiding needy families in the International Nickel Company strike, said another Toronto firm telephoned Tuesday to offer $25 worth of Christmas groceries to a family of seven.

Captain S. A. Tuck of the Salvation Army, working with the Catholic charities, said there has been a great need for teenagers' shoes.

Barn Loss $30,000

BRANTFOFRD (CP) — Fire of undetermined origin Tuesday night destroyed a barn on the farm of Earlon Misner of Brantford.

Lost in the blaze was 25 tons of hay, 2,000 bushels of oats, a tractor, farm implements, 30 cows and 15 pigs.

Damage was estimated at more than $30,000.

"You mean to say— just 3-a-day may send backache away!"

Sounds good! Logical, too! You see the normal job of the kidneys is to remove excess wastes and acids — so often the cause of backache — from the system. Dodd's Kidney Pills stimulate the kidneys in this function and so may bring you that welcome relief from backache they have many others. Try Just-a-Day. You can depend on Dodd's — in the blue box with the red band. 64

Palace Staff Enjoys Party

LONDON (Reuters)— Nursemaid Mabel Anderson headed for early today cherishing the memory of Tuesday night's staff ball at Buckingham Palace.

Mabel, nursemaid to Princess Alexandra, was one of Prince Philip's partners as Philip, Queen Elizabeth and Princess Margaret danced until midnight with palace servants.

Band leader Sydney Lipton played music from the musicals My Fair Lady and West Side Story but pop-type cha-cha-cha music dominated the evening.

There was no rock 'n' roll for the 500 dancers at the traditional pre-Christmas "below stairs" celebration.

The servants — each was allowed one guest — enjoyed a buffet supper and port, sherry and beer.

The Queen, wearing a full-skirted evening gown of pale green satin embroidered with emeralds and a diamond and pearl tiara, was received by Maurice Watts, her page, who is chairman of the Royal Household Social Club.

Great Lakes Shipping Ends

TORONTO (CP) — Great Lakes shipping, plagued by near-record ice conditions in its final days, has virtually halted.

The Welland Canal between Lake Erie and Lake Ontario was scheduled to close Tuesday night. Only one U.S. lock is still operating at the Sault Ste. Marie canal link between lakes Huron and Superior.

Traffic at Welland has been slowed by the worst ice conditions in 16 years which have clogged gates and caused holdups in the approach waters to the locks.

Seven ships battling ice in the Detroit River began moving Tuesday under United States Coast Guard icebreakers opened the Livingstone Channel across from Amherstburg.

Ships still in movement are heading for winter tieup. The vessels in the Detroit River are scheduled to winter at Port Colborne.

Port officials say they expect the vessels will have little difficulty in reaching their winter docks despite the heavy ice.

CHINESE PEOPLE

Chinese Communist revolution has been pictured as the all-knowing guide and counsellor who makes no mistakes.

Any clouding of the picture could cause cracks in the Communist control system. This would be especially true if there were any hint the change involved controversy over the new commune system, which is smashing centuried family traditions to force people into work camps.

There also could be repercussions in China's satellites, North Korea and North Viet Nam, if people got the idea Mao is a "paper tiger."

DISTURB CITIZENS

Foreign Minister Chen Yi, in telling the diplomats of the change, admitted the Chinese people would be disturbed by the news. Chen said the decision would be announced in a way "to banish all fear and apprehension."

Indications are that this will be done by playing up the traditional Chinese reverence for the scholar. The people apparently will be told Mao is relinquishing one post to devote more time to study and writing.

This line already has been given to Peiping correspondents for the London Daily Worker and the official Yugoslav news agency Tanjug.

Tanjug said Chen told diplomats Mao will concentrate on Communist Party theoretical work.

NORSTAD

after rejecting Soviet efforts to push the West out of Berlin.

Although they turned down the Russian proposal, sources said the ministers declared — under Canadian urging—their readiness to negotiate over Germany.

SIXTH REPLY

A working party was to begin sketching out a reply to Soviet Premier Khrushchev's Nov. 27 note on Berlin.

A firmly worded NATO communique Tuesday rejected Khrushchev's effort to get the allies out of Berlin within six months.

The communique said the West is ready to examine not only the Berlin situation but also the general subjects of European security and disarmament.

Canada was a member of the six-power committee which drafted the declaration on the extent to which the West should offer to negotiate with Russia over the German problem.

SMITH'S VIEW

Sources said External Affairs Minister Sidney Smith of Canada wanted something more than a reiteration of Sunday's statement of the four western powers—the United States, France, Britain and West Germany.

This statement was confined to rejecting Soviet proposals for a Western withdrawal from a demilitarized free city of West Berlin.

Smith said that although Canada is not involved in the Western occupation arrangements in West Berlin, she is directly affected by what happens.

Canada had associated itself with the three-power declaration protecting Berlin made in October, 1954. The Canadian government agreed that the Soviet proposals of Nov. 27 were unacceptable.

WOULD BE SATELLITE

The Soviet proposals could not lead to the creation of a free city. They would lead instead to the ends of Berlin becoming a Soviet satellite.

Smith asked the foreign ministers whether the West should entirely rule out possible interim arrangements for Berlin which could be regarded as a first step toward reunification.

Conference sources said Smith did not amplify this remark but went on to ask whether the West could advance any counter-proposals. He urged the Western powers to examine this question.

SOME PROBLEMS

As the military talks began, there was no official indication of the problems to be raised. But observers pointed to these likely topics:

1. Delay in providing European bases for U.S. intermediate range missiles with nuclear warheads. Only Britain has signed up for them, although negotiations for Italian missile launching sites are well advanced.

NATO officials clearly want French sites. But the French are insisting on sole control of the weapons instead of sharing control with U.S. officers.

2. Lack of at least half the 30 full-strength, combat-ready divisions which the supreme allied commander, U.S. Gen. Lauris Norstad, insists still are needed.

One major trouble is the lag in West German armament. Another is the diversion of most French strength from Europe to Algeria.

2. Need for more anti-submarine forces. Naval officers may press for more anti-sub planes, destroyers and escort vessels. They feel their forces are adequate only for the most limited defence and offer no leeway in case of war. They would like to see personnel and money provided to start an anti-sub warfare technological centre at La Spezia, Italy.

Taurus (April 20 to May 20) Plunge not into that new venture until all important duties are out of the way today. It may not be all that you supposed it to be anyway and you could simply waste time and money. Meet obligations. P.M. follow intuition and you get support.

Gemini (May 21 to June 21) You are tempted to be extravagant this day simply that you may make as good an impression as your neighbor, to put up a front with a friend. Zip your purse instead. P.M. take advantage of chance to have fun with relatives or neighbors, pals.

Moon Children (June 22 to July 21) — Irate authority and pugnacious associate could certainly make things tough for you if you get upset emotionally. Rise above both and be the soul of gentility. Tonight, set up a schedule for next week's activities. Go to bed early.

Leo (July 22 to Aug. 21) — Job and friends out of doors plus home chores could really have you going about in circles today if you don't get your time properly slanted. Then tonight you will still have time to get out and have a rollicking good time.

Virgo (Aug. 22 to Sept. 23) — Don't give in to the temptation to be extravagant where pleasure is concerned today, or you may be overspending your budget. Be good and P.M. family ties give support, too, and you can enjoy a lovely evening.

Libra (Sept. 23 to Oct. 23) — Associates are a close to disagree, so don't try to bring them together. P.M. splendid for fun with family, relations, friends; or business associates to combine business with pleasure.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) — Follow your intuition to attend to all important outside duties and business affairs, conferences, though there is much to do at home, at desk. Aspects are fine for this. P.M. get chores done, make future plans, set up good budget.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) — Make tiny investments today, for you are very likely to be extravagant if you let yourself go, and ruin your credit. Then get advice from financiers, men in affairs for years. P.M. is good for social amenities, fun and frolic.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) — Step out early this morning and avoid trouble brewing at home. Follow your ambitions and you will find that conditions at abode automatically right themselves. P.M. establish better order and greater harmony; be kind to make it.

Aquarius (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) — Permitting a spirit of anxiety to warp your precious hours and ruin your nerves is foolhardy. Cast it aside and go after your goals and ambitions planned for the day. P.M. get together with right persons toward mutual, lucrative aims.

Pisces (Feb. 20 to March 20) — You realize that your financial position isn't as you would like to have it. Don't fret over the situation, but put on your thinking cap and go see that fine, influential friend. Get advice, backing. Impress with your great ability.

If your child is born today — The ingenious child born today will want to do everything at the same time, as it were. Take him or her in hand early and teach method and constructive building, the value of time in the scheme of things. Appreciate the pioneering spirit in your progeny, and also the wisdom that makes him or her retain the old established ways and standards. Exceptionally good start here for the natural inventor.

Science Now Shrinks Piles Without Pain Or Discomfort

Finds Healing Substance That Relieves Pain And Itching As It Shrinks Hemorrhoids

Toronto, Ont. (Special)—For the first time science has found a new substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids and to relieve pain and itching. Thousands have been relieved with this inexpensive substance right in the privacy of their own home without any discomfort or inconvenience.

In hemorrhoid case after another, "very striking improvement" was reported and verified by doctors' observations.

Pain was promptly relieved. And while gently relieving pain, actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

And most amazing of all—that improvement was maintained in cases where doctors' observations were continued over a period of many months!

In fact, results were so thorough that sufferers were able to make such statements as "Piles have ceased to be a problem!" And among these sufferers were a very large majority of hemorrhoidal conditions, some of even 10 to 20 years' standing.

All this, without the use of narcotics, anesthetics or astringents of any kind. The secret is a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne)—the discovery of a famous scientific institute. Already, Bio-Dyne is in wide use for healing injured tissue on all parts of the body.

This new healing substance is offered in suppository or ointment form called Preparation H. Ask for it for individually sealed convenient Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H ointment with special applicator. Preparation H is sold at all drug stores. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded.

Batawa.

BATAWA — It is with regret that we report Mrs. J. Jancika has been admitted to Trenton Memorial Hospital. All hope for her complete and speedy recovery, the underwent surgery on Monday.

On Friday evening, the ceremony for the lighting of Batawa's tree took place. In his brief address, Mr. Hess expressed the hope that all previous effort in lighting the village would be eclipsed. Residents have already begun installing Christmas lights in their homes and an outstanding example is the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Bamber, which was the first to have Christmas lights installed.

A group of Batawa children received perfect awards for perfect attendance at school. In most cases the perfect record of attendance was for a period from two to five years. The presentation of bronze and silver medals was made by Mr. Ralph Armstrong, chairman of the Batawa Public School Board and those receiving the awards included: Jimmy Brookstra, Tom Muzkiuke, David Muzkiuke, Florence Muzka, Paul Duncan, Linda Duncan, Jack Duncan, Karla Borick, Frances Wilson, Ronda Geldard, Blair Elder, Everett Purse, Mary Tiamas and Ed. Woodward. Congratulations, students and keep up the perfect, attendance record.

On Tuesday, Mr. A. Papenhuijzen, manager of maintenance at the Batawa plant in Southern Rhodesia visited Batawa.

Bata study courses are postponed until the first of the year.

United Church WMS Holds December Meet

The regular monthly meeting of Tabernacle United Church W.M.S. was held in the church on Tuesday, 9th.

The president, Mrs. Ray Lockyer presided at the meeting.

Several members took part in the devotional period emphasizing the meaning of Christmas as taken from John 1-14. "And the Word was made flesh and dwelt among us".

John's Christmas story shows that God moves in a rational way His wonders to perform Man by searching had not found God. Now in order to reveal the true nature of God "the Word" was made flesh and dwelt among us". Jesus came to the earth in the likeness of man and lived with men and showed them what God was like.

"In a world of darkness and sin Isaiah rang the bells of prophecy which was fulfilled when the sound of those bells reverberated among the Judean hills on that solemn night when Jesus was born in Bethlehem.

Isaiah 9-6 "His name shall be called — Wonderful Counsellor, the Mighty God, the Everlasting Father, the Prince of Peace".

"Christmas is a time of light and love, lights in homes and the light of joy in human hearts. If we are to have the Christmas light in our hearts and homes today, we must really know the Christ Child.

"Christmas cards are messengers of goodwill, tokens of love as we celebrate the birthday of our King.

"Little prayer, for far and wide Rises all our friends this Christmas tide.

Minutes of November meeting were read and adopted. Treasurer gave her report; and stated that when final offerings were in for the year the allocation would be met.

Instead of taking up the Study Book in this period an article was read from Missionary Monthly telling some of the things done by W.M.S. to make Christmas a brighter time for children in far away places.

Hundreds and hundreds of Christmas gifts are carried in the June bales made up by the W.M.S. to the Mission centres of the church. These gifts are stored until Christmas and are then given to the children by mission workers. These gifts are unique in that they are accompanied by prayers from W.M.S. women for the welfare of the children receiving them. In each case a small gift brings much joy to a child's heart.

Meeting was closed with prayer.

Ottawa Teller Given 4-Year Prison Term

OTTAWA (CP) — Bank teller Boyce Johnston today was sentenced to four years in penitentiary after pleading guilty to the theft of $260,000, part of which financed a 17-day night-life binge and entourage spree in the United States.

Magistrate Glenn Strike, in sentencing the 25-year-old former employee of the Imperial Bank of Canada here, said this "is a very serious theft involving a very large sum of money."

"I have little sympathy for you. You were trusted by your employer and your family."

During his brief taste of high living, Johnston bought $12,500 of the money he took from the bank for which he was working. This has since been repaid by his family.

Johnston, former chief teller at the bank, vanished with the money Sunday, Sept. 28, after telling his wife he was going hunting near his hometown of Renfrew.

He boarded a plane for Windsor, crossed to Detroit, flew as far as Los Angeles. He was arrested Nov. 10 in the washroom of the Fare Deal nightclub in Detroit.

Magistrate Strike said it is necessary for banks and financial houses to place persons in positions of trust.

MOTIVES SELFISH

"Your motives were completely selfish," he told Johnston.

After his arrest Johnston told police he wanted to "see what it was like" to have that much money.

Counsel for Johnston told the court Dec. 10 that Johnston's wife intends to take up residence with him again after she has served his jail term. His father-in-law, Hartwell, Bradnex, plans to make him a partner in a business to be established in another part of the province.

REINSTATEMENT OF CROWE APPROVED BY U.C. BOARD

Believes Professor Right in Protest

TORONTO (CP) — A committee of leading Toronto Church of Canada executives has expressed approval of the reinstatement of Prof. Harry S. Crowe by United College.

The 12-member sub-executive of the church's general council said in a statement following an all-day conference Wednesday:

"We believe that Prof. Crowe has acted in the best interests of the use to his detriment of his personal reputation and that the board of regents has rectified the situation so far as possible through the reinstatement of Professor Crowe."

The 36-year-old professor of history was fired by the church-sponsored college three months ago after a letter he wrote from Kingston came into the possession of the principal, Dr. W. C. Lockhart. He was reinstated this week.

DEFENDS LOCKHART

The 450-word statement expressed confidence in Dr. Lockhart. The meeting included with 15 other faculty members during the course of which the firing, "as a man of integrity and one whose devotion to the cause of United College and the church is of a very high order."

Mr. Hamilton did not disclose the text of the letter to the board of regents, saying it was the minister of photostating the letter. This was a mistake in judgment, Mr. Hamilton told reporters, for which he has made a public apology."

The statement said United College is a church-related institution responsible to the synod of Manitoba charter. The United Church has no direct control over its policies "and none over the appointment or dismissal of professors in the faculties of arts and sciences."

"The board of regents therefore possesses virtual autonomy in the conduct of affairs of the college."

REQUIRE NO OATHS

The statement added:

"The United Church has always stood for academic freedom. It has never required loyalty oaths or rigid doctrinal statements from college or university teachers . . .

"Its members are deeply concerned with the issues of academic freedom and security of employment. They feel that National Conference of Canadian Universities and Colleges and Association of University Teachers consider and develop a proper procedure in such circumstances requires."

Mr. Hamilton's resignation has not been accepted by the college board although he has offered his resignation to leave next August 31. The board has accepted the resignation of three of the 15 other faculty resignations, which are also effective Aug. 31.

West Germany Ousts France As Third Place NATO Power

PARIS (AP) — West Germany is becoming the third most important military power in the Atlantic alliance, taking the place left vacant by France's troubles in Algeria and her disputes with her allies.

This picture emerged from the annual assessment of NATO strength. The meeting of ministers from the 15 treaty nations headed to its conclusion tonight with big gains for Chancellor Adenauer of West Germany and losses for French Premier de Gaulle.

But there was no dispute between representatives of the two leaders since de Gaulle became premier June 1. Circumstances have made them friends seeking the same goals—at least over the short range.

However, the French had to defend their military position alone and failed to win the top place in allied councils which de Gaulle seeks.

All 15 countries agreed with the military goals enunciated by the supreme allied commander, U.S. Gen. Lauris Norstad. But official spokesman added that Norstad's program of building the army divisions at full strength and of speeding up development and modernization of weapons needed only as an objective. This was an admission that some NATO countries are dragging their feet.

Several years NATO military planners have been disturbed by Britain's inability to send the Algerian rebellion and bring back to Europe the several hundred thousand troops sent to the nationalist uprising.

During those years the West German army has been building a new military force. By the end of March West Germany will have a 350,000-man force in the NATO defence line against any aggression. Defence Minister Franz Strauss said.

A further indication of West Germany's emergence as the West's major continental military power was contained in the report that for the first time German-built guided missiles will work with France and Italy on anti-aircraft missiles which probably will be equipped eventually with nuclear warheads, informed sources said.

French Army Minister Pierre Guillaumat said France would be best to fulfill its European role but it has many overseas obligations and is "building the flank of NATO," meaning North Africa.

De Gaulle suffered a blow by failing to win support for his plan for a directorate for United States and Britain in a guiding direction for NATO.

The French dispute with Britain over West Germany's rearmament and de Gaulle of one victory he thought he already had in fact. At a separate meeting Thursday, British advocates of a West European free trade area appear to have succeeded in driving a wedge between France and the U.S. partners in the European common market.

Merry Christmas Unlikely In Strike-Bound Mining City

SUDBURY (CP) — The nickel belt has joined its hopes on a "Merry Year — A Merry Christmas is unlikely.

Striking smelters anxiously watching government-sponsored negotiations in Toronto, welfare workers Wednesday began giving psychological effects accompanying the 78-day-old walkout by members of the International Nickel Company strike which started Oct. 1.

At the same time the company announced it doesn't expect to spend mual $14,000 Christmas party for children.

"Christmas will be black in Sudbury," declared Mrs. J. Zimmerley, in charge of the Roman Catholic Welfare Depot giving food and clothing to about 200 families daily.

"It's bad enough to see a man hungry but it's worse when you break it to his children that what's happening here. A lot of the men are broken. They just sit and stare."

Captain Sidney Tuck of the Salvation Army said: "Tremendous strain", has been apparent among relief applicants already facing into his office at the rate of 25 a day, many breaking down in tears.

In one case a woman had cracked and been sent to a mental hospital. "It was just the strain of worrying about bills and how to feed her children."

Father Delaney said he is scared to think what will happen" if the Toronto negotiations collapse. "Everytime there's a death or illness in the depot everyone stops and goes to the funeral."

A company spokesman said that even with the strike settled by the 4 weeks before most of the strikers were back on the job "it probably would take two weeks to come through.

Federal conciliator general Manager R. H. Waddington said his firm has begun paying Christmas bonuses to office employees and pensioners but "no plans are being made for Christmas parties to give them to the 14,000 strikers.

"It isn't a punitive measure," he said. "They just don't meet the regulations."

Have Commuted Death Sentences Of Two Cypriots

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Two Greek Cypriot youths condemned to die early today received hurtmiggle reprieves from Britain's Governor Sir Hugh Foot. The executions had been expected to touch off new bloodshed on Cyprus.

News of the reprieves spread rapidly through Nicosia Greek Cypriot districts. Many prisoners who had been chanting patriotic songs and shouting anti-British slogans broke into a tremendous cheer.

The cheer gave the first indication to crowds waiting outside the Nicosia jail that the executions were carried out.

They would have been the first persons executed by the British since the Mediterranean island in 21 months. They were condemned for the EOKA murder of a Greek Cypriot. EOKA is the Greek terrorist organization fighting for union with Greece.

A later government announcement said the sentences were also commuted to life imprisonment.

Numerous appeals for clemency had been made to British authorities, including messages from Cypriot youths to Queen Elizabeth.

When Foot went to the death cell to tell the youths of his reprieve, a priest reported, "they were overjoyed and overwhelmed and tried to kiss the governor's hand."

Wednesday night British security headquarters broadcast warnings to all Britons to restrict their movements in expectation of EOKA reprisals for the executions.

Death Penalty Only Sentence Claims Judge

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — "Some crimes are so revolting there is only one penalty — the death penalty," said Judge John A. Hewicker. "I've never heard anything like this case — and I hope I won't again."

The judge passed Harvey Glatman, 33, a Los Angeles television repairman who had confessed slaying three women and photographing them raping and slowly strangling them.

"The horror and the suffering those girls underwent," said Hewicker, "must have been horrible. I will impose the death penalty as the only proper judgment."

Glatman told reporters: "It was about what I wanted."

In a tape recorded confession introduced in the trial, Glatman said his motive, for dating the women was "sex. I knew I would not have killed them had they co-operated. I would not have killed them so they wouldn't tell police.

Glatman's defense of his victims—showing them bound and gagged—was contradicted by interviews he gave and released to reporters Wednesday.

Glatman said he persuaded all three victims at gunpoint, to be tied up for crime magazine pictures.

He was ordered to die for the murders of Mrs. Shirley Ann Bridgeford, 24, a Sun Valley, Calif., divorcee, and Miss Ruth Mercado, 24, a Los Angeles model. He was not tried for the slaying of Hollywood model Judy Dull, 19.

RED HATS GIVEN TO 20 CARDINALS BY POPE JOHN

Public Consistory Glittering Affair

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Amid glittering and moving medieval pageantry, Pope John XXIII today placed the red hats of their high office over the heads of 20 of the 23 new cardinals of the Roman Catholic Church.

More than 35,000 cheering persons filled the basilica of St. Peter for the glittering public consistory, the climactic event in the ceremonies this week which have increased the College of Cardinals to 76 men.

The new cardinals approached the papal throne singly, their heads bowed in prayer, their bright scarlet trains trailing nine feet behind.

Each of the new princes of the church knelt quickly, kissed the pope's slipper and then his hand. Each time the pontiff bent low to touch cheeks with the new member of the sacred college.

RECITES CHARGE

Then for each Pope John recreated this solemn charge in Latin:

"For the praise of almighty God and the honor of the apostolic see, receive the red hat, the special badge of a cardinal's office. By this we wish to understand that you must show yourself fearless even to the point of shedding of your blood, in making our holy faith respected, in securing peace for Christian people and the glory of our blood, in making our holy faith respected, in securing peace for Christian people and the glory of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost. Amen."

The act of investiture proceeded quickly, lasting about one minute. Pope John then left the cardinal moved away without his red hat. Later it was delivered in the day and will never again appear in public until the next consistory. When the cardinal died, his hat is placed on his coffin. Then it is hung and suspended from the ceiling of his cathedral.

FIRST ABSENT

The three new cardinals absent today were Fernando Cento, papal nuncio to Portugal; Joseph Bueno Montreal, Archbishop of Seville, Spain, and Paolo Giobbe, nuncio to Italy, Giuseppe Fiche. They will receive the insignia of office from the chiefs of states of Portugal, Spain, and Italy. Another ancient custom between those predominantly Catholic nations and the Vatican envoys to the new cardinal's native country. The new dean of the college, French-born Eugene Cardinal Tisserant.

Later today the Pope was to meet in secret consistory with the cardinals to confirm their symbolic rings, admit them to the privilege of wearing purple and give them to secrecy concerning the college's future deliberations.

The 23 new cardinals named by the Pope Nov. 17 include 13 Italians and 10 non-Italians.

Chain-Letter Style of Financing Runs Into Difficulties in Italy

ROME (AP)—An Italian parliamentary commission reports a former bank clerk's chain-letter and fantied enticed 302 priests to invest with him despite a Vatican warning against it.

The priests numbered almost three out of every hundred responded to the soliciting of Gian Battista Giuffre for investments that would bring 40- to 100-per-cent interest payments, the report said.

The commission said Giuffre used funds collected from subsequent depositors to pay off earlier debtors and still "owes investors more than $5,000,000 after paying out $2,560,000 interest.

Giuffre, 56, started as a bank clerk. For the last eight years he has been financing construction in northern Italy, much of it church property. He had no bank but names of persons desiring investment of the tax and fined them.

Loss 10 Million As Fire Sweeps Truck Warehouse

Montreal Blaze Forces 25 Families From Homes

Motor City Holds Party For Horses

DETROIT (AP)—Only 15 horses turned out for Detroit's 37th annual Christmas party for the Motor City's active draft animals.

The Detroit Humane Society sponsored the annual party complete with oats, hay and apples for the horses and coffee and sandwiches for the owners.

Roy, a 25-year-old junk wagon horse, was judged the best animal at the party.

MONTREAL (CP)—A smokey, three-alarm fire wrecked the upper floors of a trucking company's east-end warehouse Wednesday night and one company official said damage to the building and stored goods could surpass $10,000,000.

Roger Sauriol, assistant manager of the J. B. Ballargeon Express Company, said losses would probably exceed $10,000,000."

However, company officials of Ballargeon, said it was impossible to estimate damage.

"The building contained furniture, antiques and other goods, but we cannot possibly make an estimate of the damage yet," he said.

The wind-fed flames raced over tar roofs, putting the upper floor of a two-storey section and the top floors of a five-storey section. Cause of the fire was unknown.

TWO INJURED

Two persons, one a fireman injured as he fought flames while working in five-above temperatures, gained control in a little more than two hours.

Fireman Rene de Bellegeville, 30, suffered a broken leg and a fall, while Berthe Marcotte, a 20-year-old nurse, broke a leg when she slipped on icy streets while watching the fire. Several other persons escaped injury as a huge section of wall collapsed as they placed ladders against it.

The intersection of St. Denis and Ontario streets, where the warehouse is located, was left in sheet of ice. Three bus lines had to be rerouted and Montreal traffic was detoured as firemen played 3½ streams on the building.

VANS DESTROYED

Five company vans were reported destroyed, but drivers—holding a meeting when flames erupted—managed to drive other vans from the warehouse and the main garage.

Thick white smoke, that later turned black, enveloped the area. Firemen could be seen five miles away and as winds played with the flames at the top floors, the fire-fighters evacuated 25 families from nearby homes. They returned several hours later, their houses untouched.

Huge Rocket Engine Ordered

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States hope of being the first country to rocket a man into space took an upward turn today — a huge engine order for a giant $200,000,000 rocket.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration gave Rocketdyne, a division of North American Aviation, Inc., Canoga Park, Calif., the job of designing and developing a huge engine which up to 1,500,000 pounds of thrust.

"Performance flight rating tests of the engine will be based on unmanned vehicle applications," the announcement said, "but it may eventually propel manned satellites and space craft."

Such an engine could launch those payloads weighing several tons.

It is estimated the new supersocket project will take four to six years.

Mine Officials Face New Trial, Jury Disagrees

TORONTO (CP)—Two former officials of Aconic Mining Corporation will face a new trial on four charges of fraud and stock manipulation. A trial with an Ontario Supreme Court jury failed to reach a verdict early today. The jury deliberated for 18 hours before the foreman told Mr. Justice J. C. Morden that agreement was "widely separated."

The trial of Edward J. Butler, former general manager of Aconic, and Joseph Beaudry, former president of the Aconic Corporation, lasted almost seven weeks. No date for a new trial was set.

The charges were laid after Aconic stock dropped about $10 when it was learned that the Toronto Stock Exchange in August, 1957, would delist the stock unless by which the same person buys and sells stock in effort to simulate market activity.

Butler said in his defence he was interested in accumulating stock and maintaining an orderly market. He said he did not know he was involved in wash-trading and added that he interpreted the regulations as an "unnecessary sale."

TELLS OF EXPENDITURES

Butler, who was one of the two accused to testify in his own defence, said that $1,000,000 was raised and Beaudry, with whom he formed the company in 1956, had passed $170,000 into the treasury.

Special prosecutor R. F. Wilson said more than $1,000,000 of Aconic stock passed through brokers when the stock plunged.

"Considering the over-all picture, it is clear that the accused men intended to make a killing which did not come off," he told the court.

Arthur Martin, counsel for Butler, said that the fall of stock was due to short-selling and dumping of shares on the market.

Joseph Sedgwick, Beaudry's counsel said, "There has not been one word to indicate fraudulent conduct in a single transaction in Ontario."

Checks on Ice On Bay Here Prove It Thin

Director of Recreation Lloyd Doran announces that the ice in some parts of the bay is thin, and recommends that precautions should be taken.

Mr. Doran conferred with Superintendent of Public Works Adam Stalker and had the ice thickness checked at different points with the result the test showing ice from 4½ inches in thickness to as little as an inch and a half an inch only yards away.

Mr. Stalker reports the heavy snow fall has formed a blanket over the ice, preventing the frost penetrating, as is necessary to form a thick layer of ice. Ice was checked at the pump house in the harbor and at the foot of Foster Avenue.

Another check will be made the first of next week.

John Baptiste Takes Jail Term, Won't Pay Fine

BANCROFT (CP) — A Baptiste Lake man has chosen to go to jail for six weeks rather than pay a $100 fine and $114 court costs for failing to remain at the scene of a boating accident.

John Bapliste, 37, was convicted under a section of the Canada Shipping Act as a result of an accident Sept. 28 when his 25-horse power outboard collided with an anchored fishing boat on the lake 60 miles north of Peterborough.

Joseph Mayer, 24, of Hamilton was thrown into the water suffering a shoulder fracture and dislocation. Another fisherman pulled him out.

Grader Rakes Side of Three Motor Vehicles

Property damage amounting to nearly $800 resulted yesterday in a four-vehicle mixup at the corner of North Front St. and Bridge, involving a power grader and three autos.

Police said that Otfried Wahlen was driving the grader east on Bridge St. when he made a left turn to go north on Front St. when he lost control, causing the machine to straighten his vehicle up.

The blade of the grader raked along the side of three southbound cars stopped at the intersection for the red light. The cars were driven by Mr. & Mrs. Hazzard, 64 St. Charles; Lewis Williams of Foxboro, and Arthur Conner, Lansdowne St.

Damage to the Hazzard vehicle was about $75; to the Williams' car about $300, and to the Connor vehicle, $200.

City Theatres Complimented by Bd. Officials

Belleville motion picture theatres, this week, were complimented for the cleanliness in which they are operated. An official of the Ontario Censor Board, William S. Watt, stated to the Ontario Intelligencer that this is one of the few cities in the province that enjoys an almost absolute freedom from censorship.

In a tour of inspection, Mr. Watt found that the theatre managers observed the regulations with great care. He noted that there was no blocked exists, the premises were clean and the theatres well staffed. In particular he stated the censor board's signs classifying certain pictures as "adult entertainment" and "admittance restricted to persons 18 years and over" were given prominence when required.

The board of censors regards observation of this regulation as most important. The classification of films as restricted entertainment was a departmental regulation which arose with the advent of a type of European film containing subject matter which could not generally be adult mind. This is necessary and essential, said Mr. Watt, due to the wider change in policy of the American screen to meet the demand for more adult entertainment. The newspaper advertisements which include the entertainment the theatre signs are to be regarded as a guide to the parents that the proposed entertainment is not suitable for children.

Mr. Watt also stated that theatre managers welcome phone calls and communications regarding the quality of motion pictures. Theatre managers in the city are Tommy Meagher of the Capitol, Willard Fawcett of the Odeon and George Forhan of the Belle Theatre.

Driver of Car Tells of Slaying At Hearing

OTTAWA (CP) — Little Glen Whelan sat horrified in his car when Robert O'Leary stepped in front towards the rival gang's car holding his chest.

"He was bleeding all over—in his chest, in his hands, in his eyes, in his nose and his mouth.

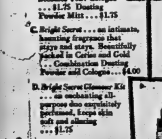
"He tried to reach the car door, missed, and fell against the front fender.

"Then he rolled over, fell to the ground, and stayed there . . ."

The frail looking 17-year-old testified at the opening Wednesday of this sensational hearing of murder charges against James (Red) McDermott, 17, John Drain, 19, William Post, 19, his brother James, 16, and Henri Dubois.

They are accused of slaying 20-year-old O'Leary in a gang fight Sept. 22 on west-central Somerset Street following an argument in a restaurant.

A pathologist told the hearing O'Leary died of a vicious wound that severed blood vessels over the heart and pierced a lung. He said an eight-inch steak knife found near the body could have been the weapon, and that in his opinion the knife was driven in and twisted.



Whelan said he was driver of the car that carried the five accused and O'Leary to the fight scene.

He identified McDermott as the youth who wielded the knife.

The altercation began in Bailey Restaurant when one of two teen-age girls accompanying O'Leary and Edward Champagne, 20, took offense at language used by the rival group. The second girl said she told them they're "just a bunch of punks.

Negotiations On Inco Strike Are Resumed

TORONTO (CP)—Government-sponsored negotiations to end the lengthy International Nickel Company of Canada strike at Sudbury and Port Colborne went into their third day today.

After earlier sessions lasting 90 minutes and five hours respectively, Labor Minister Daley was expected to call the company and union teams together longer today in his new effort to reach a settlement.

The session scheduled for 10 a.m. was set up at the request of chief conciliation officer Louis Fine.

The 16 months of the talks opening in separate board rooms with representatives of the joined the 12-man team from the International Nickel of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers (Ind.) for discussions.

DALEY GETS TOUGH

Although neither side would comment, indications were that the ministers, presiding in the 56-day-old strike for the third time, was adopting a get-tough policy.

Wednesday he said he would hold company and union negotiations in Toronto instead of Ottawa to reach a settlement.

The issues still to be resolved are: The terms of settlement in joint discussions before retiring to their own board rooms.

Five Constables Added to Police Force of City

Five new constables have been added to the Belleville Police Department to strengthen the force, Chief Inspector James Goodfellow announced today.

Police Chief Walter Probert noted today that four of the new men have already reported for duty, while the fifth will join the force next week. The police department will extend its policing duties when annexation is officially effective on January 1st.

The city area to be policed will be more than doubled with annexation," noted Chief Inspector Probert. "The city acreage will be increased by approximately 3,500 acres and the population will be upped by about 6,000."

Although the township area to be annexed is already receiving fire protection from Belleville, the strength of the fire department will also be increased, while the city public works department will have more roads to snowplow and other services to maintain.

1,100 PUPILS ADDED

The public school system will also be increased by an additional 1,100 pupils, with four schools with a total of 31 classrooms coming into the city with annexation. The schools to become part of the city system January 1st are Prince of Wales, 12 classrooms; Hillcrest, 8 rooms; Bayview, 8 rooms and Avondale 5 rooms.

With annexation householders in the township areas coming into the city will automatically pay lower rates for hydro and water but on the other hand will be required to pay higher city taxes.

New constables added to the police department and fireracing the force are Ross Clemmen, Earl Basil E. Cornish, Ralph Petrie, William Armstrong and Laurent Laton, all of Belleville, and James L. Minick of Trenton. Four of these men have already reported for duty, while Constable Laton will report next week.

Three of the new men, Constables Cornish, Minick and Laton, are former members of the RCAF at Trenton.

Two Arrested On Charges of Breaking, Entry

Taken into custody yesterday morning with one of them being found inside the store, two Belleville men, Marshall K. Patrigeau, 20, and Richard E. Fitzgerald, 17, will appear in city magistrate's court tomorrow on charges of breaking and entry with intent at the Cranston Sports Shop on Front street.

The two men were apprehended by Constable Charles Brown when, during his early morning patrol, he discovered a back window open and found Patrigeau inside the store.

Doing rear door checks in the vicinity, Constable Peters came onto Fitzgerald, who police said later turned out to be acting as lookout.

Questioning the man Constable Peters asked him what he was doing out that early in the morning and was told "he was taking his dog for a walk."

This satisfied the constable momentarily but seconds later he spotted the second man at the rear window at Cranstons and looking in spotted Patrigeau in the store. He placed the man under arrest and later apprehended Fitzgerald.

Surprise Attack Talks at Geneva End in Failure

GENEVA (AP) — The 10-nation conference on prevention of surprise attacks ended today in failure.

The talks never got down to a serious discussion of a surprise attack alert system because East and West were in disagreement on the purpose of the conference.

The Soviet Bloc made a vain effort to have Jan. 3 — or any other date — fixed for resumption of the talks.

The Western group, led by William C. Foster of the United States, told the Soviet Bloc it was useless to reconvene unless an agreed basis for the discussions could be established in direct contacts between the governments concerned.

The conference agreed, however, to reconvene "as early as possible."

The conference opened Nov. 10 and became bogged down from the start in procedural arguments from which it never emerged.

Christmas Has Special Meaning For All Women

TRENTON—Wednesday night marked the last meeting of 1958 for the Trenton Business and Professional Women's Club when the Yuletide turkey was served at the Hotel Gilbert.

The speaker was Rev. Henry Mathews, presently supply minister of King Street United Church, and his Christmas message gave great satisfaction and pleasure to the club members and their guests.

Mr. Mathews stated that he felt that in this day and age people were allowing the symbols of Christmas to obscure its true meaning. Christmas, he said, meant more to women than to men because it was the birth of Christ and the events that followed which began to bring women into their rightful position in the world. Jesus showed His followers that women possessed the ability to carry on stimulating conversations and express intelligent opinions, but for many years these talents were persisted in refusing women the right to raise their voices on church matters.

Mr. Mathews stated that women have proven that they could take on important positions at local, provincial and national levels and should be encouraged to do so when their talents could be used by the community or country.

God gave these talents to be used, the woman, just because she is a woman, should not be prevented from using them to the best advantage. By the same token, when a woman runs for public office she should not be voted into that office just because she is a woman, but because her ability is recognized as that of her opponent whether the opponent be male or female.

TOO FEW VOTE

Mr. Mathews stated that he felt our democratic way of life is languishing and grows worst when such a small percentage of eligible voters go to the polls and more women should take an interest in such matters.

Many men will say that woman's place is in the home. Mr. Mathews wonders who started the fallacy that "a woman makes a home," since no woman by herself can make the home. She must have the assistance and co-operation of her husband in order that a proper home life can be maintained.

Mr. Mathews, who is Irish, educated in Ireland, Scotland and Wales, has travelled extensively, thinks that Canada is the finest country in the world and hopes that some day a woman will hold the position of Prime Minister of Canada, since he feels that a woman would bring to this position something that no man has yet been able to bring.

Town Briefs

TRENTON — Trenton policemen staged a Christmas party for their wives and children above the police station last night. Santa Claus, in the form of Bill Smith, appeared and distributed the presents around the tree to the children. This was followed by a serving of ice cream and cake. Before Santa's arrival, films were shown. In charge of the party was Constable Bruce Westfall, who is chairman of the Police Association's entertainment committee. Constable Jack Graham is president of the group. Chief Jack Taylor and Mrs. Taylor were also present for the festivities.

SEVERAL MINOR ACCIDENTS

An estimated $720 in damages was caused to vehicles in motor accidents on slippery town streets yesterday. Most of the accidents were minor with damage small but one accident caused over $300 damage to the cars involved. All mishaps were blamed on the icy streets as freezing drizzle fell on the town during the morning and part of the afternoon. Town sanding trucks were on all day, sanding the streets after they had been cleared during the morning. Trucks and loaders worked in the main section of town all last night to clear as much snow as possible away before the early morning traffic on.

COMBINES WHIP FLYERS

The Bowmanville - Orono Combines whipped the Trenton Flyers 9-2 in a scheduled league game last night at the Community Centre in Trenton. During the game Trenton has only won two games and tied two others to leave them in the cellar division along with Kingston. The two play in the Eastern Ontario Intermediate A Hockey League.

POLICEMAN SPOTS FIRE

A possible serious fire in the Community Centre last night during the hockey game was prevented by Constable Garz of the dressing room on duty at the rink at the time. Someone had dropped a cigaret butt into one of the cracks of the seats and it fell and started a fire, but the seat burned to burn, with the embers falling down into the dressing room below. The constable grabbed a bucket of water from the dressing room and threw the water going through into the dressing room and onto some of the hockey players' clothing hanging there. There was apparently no damage done, due to the quick thinking and actions of the policeman.

very welcome guest of the club at its Christmas meeting.

Russian Deputy Premier Would Like to Visit U.S.

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

WASHINGTON (AP)—The possibility of high - level Soviet-American polity talks here opened today with a report that Russian Deputy Premier Anastas I. Mikoyan would like to visit Washington early next year.

The state department declined comment on the report but the Soviet government was understood to have approached the U.S. Embassy in Moscow about arranging the trip.

Mikoyan's immediate purpose would be to visit Ambassador Mikhail A. Menshikov. Indications were that the U.S. would agree to the suggestion.

URGED BY IKE

President Eisenhower proposed last February that leading Soviet personalities should come to the U.S. and rid themselves by firsthand observation of false conceptions which Eisenhower said they have about the United States.

Presumably if he came here, the 64-year-old Mikoyan would be prepared to discuss a wide range of outstanding disagreements and tensions between the United States and Russia.

But the belief in Washington is that his primary interest would be in promoting Premier Khrushchev's announced desire for greater trade with the U.S. in a letter to Eisenhower June 2. Premier Khrushchev said Khrushchev said such trade could be built up to a volume of several billion dollars within a few years. But he said to achieve that volume it would be necessary for the U.S. to grant long-term credits to the Soviet Union.

Eisenhower told Khrushchev in a message July 18 that the Soviet Union could readily develop a larger volume of trade with American firms at any time. But the president said granting of such term credits would raise complex legal and political questions.

IT PROTECTS THE INNOCENT

We read an interesting editorial the other day in the K.P. Telescope, published by The inmates of Kingston Penitentiary, concerning "trial by newspaper." It concerns the decision of a committee of the Canadian Bar Association to request the Justice Department to limit newspaper coverage of preliminary court hearings. The editors of The K.P. Telescope endorse this request most heartily on the grounds that newspapers thrive on "the sensational" and, by playing up the preliminary court hearings and every possible detail of the crime, can distort potential jurors' opinions before they may be selected to sit in judgment on the crime they have read about.

We admit that some newspapers do give sensational crimes a very heavy coverage but the crimes are usually sensational in themselves rather than being played up or glamorized by the press. There is, of course, the "yellow press" which thrives on sensationalism rather than on the sensational, but we certainly hesitate to think that this contents of this type of publication has much influence on the thinking of rational citizens. The details of the crimes and the names of those involved are certainly to be considered as public knowledge and, as such, published. However, the conclusions as to the guilt of the alleged criminal cannot be made by any newspaper from the time the accused is charged until the time the jury or judge brings down a decision. Any and all trial reports must be purely objective.

The K.P. Telescope editors go further -- they consider that the rights of the individual are not being protected by allowing the press to cover all court proceedings. We must adopt an opposite view since we feel that it is an individual's right to a fair and public trial before either judge or jury, the latter being the accused's privilege of preference. The fact that a trial is public is one of the innocent's greatest advantages and it is also an assurance to the individual that the courts are conducted in a free and democratic manner.

We cannot surrender the right of the individual to a fair and open hearing or trial in the courts of the land. This is one of the hard-earned privileges and rights of the individual citizen in a democracy. To lose this right would be to seriously weaken our way of life.

CONVERSATIONAL PROGRAMS

The Montreal Star complains of "a sulpicious trend developing on television" with conversation programs "petering all the time."

This is just another proof that one man's meat is another man's poison, or vice versa. We like conversational programs. It may be that we like them not so much because they are highly entertaining as because they are not always low entertainment -- that's a point we shall have to ponder at length while some conversational program is in progress. Nevertheless, whatever the reason, we feel that many of the conversational programs on TV are much to be preferred to those shows on which the people one sees are just mouthing the words of unseen, unheard and unknown script-writers.

Most TV watchers, we suspect, enjoy the ad lib. Script writers appear to share this view and scripts are now liberally sprinkled with "ad libs". These planned "ad libs" make the viewer suspicious of all ad libs, even genuine ones. This suspicion may be one of the reasons for the increase in the popularity of "conversational programs," which are sometimes so wandering that the viewer is convinced no self-respecting script writer would have permitted them to get on the air.

Some conversation programs are boring, but others are lively, because the viewer never knows what is coming next. It may be objected that this condition is no different from the viewer's state of knowledge regarding a carefully written show, but if the show has a script he knows that what comes next will have been carefully planned and will contain no surprises for the participants. Some of the most entertaining observations have been those made on the spur of the moment, before the speaker, or the producer, has had time to think better of them. We suspect, too, that the viewer enjoys the occasional discomfiture of some performer with a reputation.

There have been complaints that TV has made conversation a lost art. Perhaps TV may now revive the art, by giving viewers the opportunity to hear skilled conversationalists in action. -

JUST FOLKS

WHAT DO I WANT?
By EDGAR A. GUEST

What do I want for Christmas
Day?
A few glad hearts about me,
Some smiles to light me on my way
As proof that you don't doubt
me.
And then, if you choose, you may climb my knee
And smother my cheek with kisses,
And I am sure that the heart of
me
Won't ache for a thing it misses.

Just tiptoe to where I sit and doze,
And give me your fond embraces,
And all of my different cares and woes
Will vanish to other places.
Just give me your love in the old-time way,
Bestow on me your caresses,
And my battered old heart on Christmas Day
Will forget all the past distresses.

Crunchless Munching

Don't's Fast

Noiseless popcorn--you chew it without a crunch--has been developed by science. It is puffed by forcing back the silent moisture in which you could actually hear the sound track without mastication or interference.

But don't expect too much of the crunch-off.

The new, silent popcorn is actually a new kind of corn. While it makes no racket under chewing pressure, it likewise expand when, popped to only 17 times their original volume.

Yet you can't overeat. Not when some modern hybrid popcorn swells to as much as 35 times. Since popcorn is sold by bulk, they'll have to make pop corn much more expansive in kind if commercial appeal.

Lots of research is going on to improve popcorn. The Department of Agriculture, Cornell University (no pun intended), Purdue University and other institutions are working on it because of the great increase in popcorn consumption the last 30 years.

Like most things, it began in the movie corn is native to the Amer. icas. Indians ate it long before there were while men or theatre lobbies on this side of the Atlantic.

They popped it on a hot, flat rock, and that was the way White settlers took it up, but the stuff wouldn't pop to become commercially important until about 1890.

Now, as an outgrowth of the sweets scarcity in World War II and the introduction of pop-corn stands in theatres, it's the pastry of an industry grossing many millions. Growers in the midwest corn belt states harvested 281 million pounds of it last year.

In the interest of prosperity for all, we think the government should get this crunchless munch perfect off the ground.

Why not capitalize on the natural sweetness of sorghum, and thereby make the hitherto pop sorghum as a sweet (as well as nourishing) as to the popcorn?

We make this suggestion free of charge. You can have it for the asking. Really, don't just stand there.

HISTORIC BELLEVILLE

(Article 58 contributed by members of the Hastings County Historical Society.)

"ROYAL FORT FRONTENAC"

The Ontario Government and the Champlain Society have combined to provide a real Christmas book for all those interested public and historians of the province.

The treat is "Royal Fort Frontenac," the second volume in a series projected by the Ontario Government to provide "a representative selection of the significant records of the Ontario past." (The first volume, "The Valley of the Ottawa" edited by Edwin C. Guillet, was published last year.)

"Royal Fort Frontenac" is the work of Professors Richard Preston and Marcel Trudel, members of the Royal Military College at Kingston.

Their purpose was to "assemble all the available information connected with Fort Frontenac" the "first royal military establishment ever established by the French in what is now the Province of Ontario." Fort Frontenac was situated on the site of the present city of Kingston.

Their volume is attractively presented in two parts, in addition to approximately 500 pages of text, a number of charts, pictures, and maps of the old fort and its surroundings. One of these maps is of particular interest. It is a representation of Lake Ontario prepared in 1787 by La Rochefoucauld, and appears in a form that has since become completely lost. A frequently used map, the north appears at the bottom of the page (not the top as is customary) and Lake Ontario at the left side of the page (not the right side.)

The text of "Royal Fort Frontenac" is divided into seven main chronological sections, each of which contains an introductory survey and an English translation of the relevant documents, and the original French text of the documents.

Section One is probably of most interest to local readers since it deals with the Quinte Mission, which was set up in the 17th century to administer to the religious needs of the Indians in the Quinte district. The Jesuit Recipian Order established this mission in 1668 and Father Edward County (possibly near Consecon) in 1668, and maintained it until its official abandonment from the Bay of Quinte in 1687.

Section Two deals with the establishment of Fort Frontenac, the oldest military establishment in Ontario, which was founded in July, 1673. Section Three deals with the first fortress, since it was first intended that the fort should be built on the Bay of Quinte, probably near the Quinte Mission.

The text then deals with La Salle, the 90's and the fort's history which saw the evacuation of Fort Frontenac as the result of treaty, the fort's reoccupation, rebuilding and its subsequent demolition by the British.

The editors and the Champlain Society are to be congratulated on the publication of this splendid volume of primary historical material.

The Ontario Government is to be commended for contributing the cost of publication and editing. The result is a book that would normally sell for about $15, but which is available to local residents at a fraction of that amount.

The second volume on the Kingston area (1783-1815) is eagerly awaited, since it will certainly contain much of interest and importance to the growing number of persons interested in the history of this district.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

You would hardly expect the Packsack to be a prognosticator of fashion. Yet here goes.

Did you notice, in the TV coverage of the Grey Cup game, those players at and around the bench wearing large capes?

Ladies and gentlemen, the cape is coming back into fashion as a men's garment.

Formerly, the football players on the bench shrouded themselves in loose blankets. A fe w extra-flamboyant clubs invested in hooded sweat shirts of large sizes which the players hastily drew on and hardly yanked off, as they came and went at t h e bench. But all of a sudden, somebody with a practical sense thought of capes. And that we saw the players striding about the bench area arrayed in handsomeness and manliest of all garments, a great, blankety cape. The player is clothed in it in an instant. And in an instant, it is flung aside.

When I say the cape is "coming back" into fashion, I mean that it has only been out of fashion about one hundred years. Before the dawn of the 19th century, around 1800 or so, capes were the universal garment for men's overcode horseback, drove cutter, walked through snow, and otherwise had to use their limbs and still be warm. Coats came in when it was no longer necessary to be comfortable while active.

In this motor age, the cape is now about forty years late. It is the perfect garment for a man who, on entering his car, e x ting it off, and on leaving h i s car, can throw it on. Football players have now given it t h e social approval. Capes within a year, will be strictly de rigueur, as we fashion authorities say.

Fears We Are Near Runaway Inflation

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer.

"Hold the Line." What a noble sentiment but its implementation of its has been a sad fiasco. When our Prime Minister made the plea many people hoped that he meant it, but for reasons best known to themselves they have ignored it. I wonder whether the public has any idea that we in this country are rapidly approaching the danger point in the spiralling trend in inflation and do they know what it means? It is not as long ago when Germany was in the throes of inflation to the extent a postage stamp cost them three to five million marks. It is a prospect that cannot be faced with indifference. All savings are automatically wiped out. Faced with this prospect it is obvious that our legislators seem so indifferent and lack an appreciation of the sums of money, thereby aggravating the situation, being encouraged to do so by the opposition and Labor.

Economics can, to a great extent be controlled by compulsory contributions to old age pensions, hospitalization, and other social services. Grow Plants Without Soil

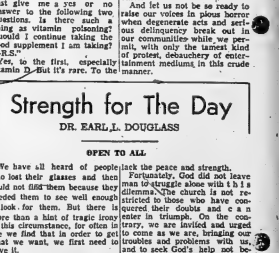
Soviet News Bulletin

Two types of experimental installations for growing vegetables without soil have been set up in Leningrad.

In one of these installations the seedlings are planted into openings drilled in pipes made of asbestos cement, through which a nutritive solution flows. The pipes are then moved and transported from the houses into the open and vice versa.

In the other installation the plants are grown in artificial soil, composed of gravel, rubble, crushed coke and sawdust. This soil is moistened with liquid fertilizers by means of an automatic device.

Introduction of an industrial method of growing out-of-farm crops without soil opens up great possibilities for developing growing big cities, in the Far North, in rocky areas, deserts and even in the Antarctic.



Strength for The Day

DR. EARL J. DOUGLASS

OPEN TO ALL

We have all heard of people who have fallen away and those could not find them because they needed them to see well enough to look for them. But there is more than a hint of tragic irony in this circumstance, for often in life we find that in order to get what we want, we first need to have it.

Perhaps this is now here truer than it is with religion. Many people desperately want the inward peace and strength which they have heard can come from strong religious faith, but without the peace and strength, they cannot seem to have it by faith — and without faith, t h e second, the so-called "food supplement" you mention is mainly vitamins and minerals, and the same good will be done by the vitamin-mineral capsules sold by all of the major pharmaceutical companies at a lower price.

Note to D.S.C.: I can sympathize with you over your sister but at 16 she is going to change her habits. She has spent all her life sneering to mom, and that's why she weighs nearly 100. She must have started with a good constitution or she wouldn't have survived this long with such weight, but I just don't think there's anything to do about it now. At 16, or 55, or any 60's she still might have shed some weight, had she had a mind to do so, but at 71 you might as well let her suffer along as she does.

Are you a victim of "vitamin starvation"? Is your opinion that your diet always contains proper food, write to me in care of The Intelligencer, Health Department, P.O. Horror Films Protested

Vancouver Province

The respected British actor, Claude Rains, adds his voice to the protest over "horror" films. He says with his usual quiet dignity of a character actor of undisputed standing in practically all types of films—that these epics are simply "horror for horror's sake." There is no attempt at any kind of artistry. There is no serious attempt to get at motivation, or to plumb the dark alleys in contemporary society.

Rains is not the only actor of are in no sense social commentaries. They are an unabashed appeal to the adult element in modern society, which they hope to titillate at the box office.

The sad part of it is that the many excellent actors who leave the cheesy stuff, and pass it off with a shrug or a laugh, have impressionable children at home. These people are giving a wide audience one way or another.

And let us not be so ready to raise our voices in pious horror when degenerate men in their sick fifties and sixties break out in our communities while we peruse with only the lightest kind of protest, debauchery of entertainment mediums in this crude manner.

Only Christmas in Springhill Will Be for the Children

By DON HOTT
Canadian Press Staff Writer

SPRINGHILL, N.S. (CP) — Tears form easily in the eyes of the women of Springhill.

Christmas is less than a week away. What Christmas there is will be for the children. The miners and wives of 75 who brought dead from the Cumberland No. 3 mine two short months ago can find no joy in a holiday that is traditionally for the family to share.

Mrs. Harold Raper sat in the kitchen of the smart-looking home her husband built with hands hard from 41 years in the coal mines of England and Springhill.

"We always went to church on Christmas Eve," she said. "I'll be going to church this year. But Christmas? Well, I don't know."

MOTHER OF THREE

She has a son, 13, still young enough to enjoy Christmas. Two other children are married. "We always had such an excellent family Christmas. All our kids always joined our group and we had such a good time.

"I'm not going to stay here Christmas Eve." Her eyes turned towards the floor.

Mrs. Fridele Allen is a Negro. Her husband was white. He rebuilt an old company house overlooking the now-closed Cumberland Railway and Coal Company. In a window facing the mine where men have worked and died for three-quarters of a century, a light cross bears testimony to tragedy.

"He was a good man," Mrs. Allen said. "He was one in a million. People said our marriage wouldn't last six months but we made out in our own way." Fidele Allen, whose body was the last to be recovered from the collapsed No. 2 colliery, was buried seven days before their 19th wedding anniversary. They had four children.

"There's nothing left of Christmas now," she said.

Some women can't talk about Christmas without their husbands. Mrs. Charlie Burton is one. Her husband was the first man to emerge alive from No. 4 pit after the 1956 explosion killed 39 and trapped 88. She knits and stares at the floor. Her husband died in No. 2 this year.

There will be gifts for the children. Special contributions have been sent by other towns and cities. Welfare organizations are seeing to it that every child from grade V to VI gets at least one gift. Younger children will get particular attention. It is a town in mourning. The few decorations in the stores testify to that. There are smiles, but the carefree laughter common at Christmas is missing.

Mackenzie led the losers by potting 5 points. Other scorers were: Parker 4, Morton 3, McGuire 4, Facey 4.

Mackenzie led the Hawks by hooping 13 points. Others who contributed to the win were Mehlenbacker 10, Wilson 8, Skinner 2, Peoples 4.

Hallam and Regensburg each scored 6 points to lead the Twisters. Other scorers were: McMaster 4, Dulmage 4, Blakely 3, Smith 2, Campbell.

Mikoyan Has Been Soviet Union's Wizard Since '26

WASHINGTON (AP) — Anastas Ivanovich Mikoyan has been the Soviet Union's trade wizard since 1926 when he was only 31 and his title was trade commissar.

Now he is 63, a first deputy premier, a member of the Soviet Presidium, and still plumping as he has done over all the years for increased trade with the United States.

The wiry, wily little Armenian's adroitness and deft touch have kept him in a key position in the Kremlin for more than 30 years—in Stalin's time and after.

It was reported in Washington Wednesday night the Soviet government has advised the United States that Mikoyan wants to visit Soviet Ambassador Mikhail Menshikov in Washington soon.

MAY TALK WITH U.S.

Washington was quick to speculate that in such a visit there is a possibility of high-level but informal Soviet-American talks on many issues.

It would be his second U.S. visit. He headed an industrial survey delegation to the United States in 1936 and had nice things to say about Americans then, sometimes with ironic reservations.

But at the Brussels World Fair last July 4 he did not appear to have his fingers crossed when he clapped in time to square dance tunes, voted for Kim Novak as his favorite film star, and praised the architecture of the American pavilion.

As a close friend once of Stalin—there were stories that Stalin had turned against him before the old dictator died—and now of Khrushchev, Mikoyan is presumed to speak with authority.

INCLUDED IN TALKS

He sat in on Senator Hubert Humphrey's eight - hour conference with Khrushchev early this month. He talked at length with Adlai Stevenson during that Democratic party chief's Soviet tour. He was one of the hosts of industrialist Cyrus Eaton.

It was reported in Moscow that Mikoyan's prospective visit is one subject Khrushchev discussed with Humphrey.

A bustling, cheerful - looking man most of the time, he has been generally on good terms with the ambassadors from the West in Moscow.

An AP reporter who has watched him in action said he often tries to upstage Khrushchev at parties. At one he even wore a white dinner jacket and he has been known to heckle Khrushchev at diplomatic functions. But they seemed to be really buddies, the reporter said.

Like Stalin, Mikoyan got his education in the Georgian capital of Tiflis at the Nesterian Theological Seminary. He as educated to be a priest. Unlike Stalin, he was graduated and then used his talents for Soviet communism instead of the Armenian church.

FREE CLINICS

STRATFORD (CP) — A series of free clinics will be held to administer anti-rabies vaccine to domestic pets in Perth County, Dr. F. D. Armstrong of the health of animals branch of the Dominion department of agriculture has announced. The presence of rabies in the county is not of epidemic proportions but a natural spread of the outbreak in Grey and Wellington counties, Dr. Armstrong said.

West Pumping Large Amounts Into West Berlin

By HANNS MEUERBOURG

BERLIN (AP)—The West is pumping hundreds of millions into West Berlin.

Americans and West German officials have pledged that the flow will go on.

This is one reason why the 2,200,000 West Berliners have not been tempted by Nikita Khrushchev's proposal to make Berlin a demilitarized "free city."

Russia's note, outlining the free city proposal last month, said it would give West Berliners "all possibilities for raising their living standards."

It spoke of the prospect of Russian orders. Khrushchev added in an interview that West Berliners would no longer need to finance West German rearmament but could increase their city income.

KNOW THE FACTS

There is hardly a West Berliner who does not know the facts:

Every year, the West German government and the United States put up more than a billion marks ($238,000,000) to pad the Berlin budget, chronically running a deficit since the war.

In addition, hundreds of millions in cheap credits are made available for Berlin investments, or to finance West German orders here.

U.S. aid granted to West Berlin since 1949, the year the Russian blockade ended, totalled $619,000,000 by last June.

West German and American help is needed to keep the city a going concern. But it cannot make up fully for the disadvantages resulting from West Berlin's isolated location 110 miles behind the Iron Curtain.

PROFITS CUT

Transport charges on the long lifelines linking Berlin with the West chop off profits and result in a competitive handicap. Almost all supplies for West Berliners have to be shipped from the West by barge, train or truck. Four - fifths of the eastbound cargo room is empty on the return to the West.

The rate of unemployment is four times as high as in West Germany. In addition to the jobless—72,000 last month—a large number of pensioners swell social and welfare expenditures.

The cost-of-living index virtually equals that of West Germany but average earnings are almost 10 per cent below the Bonn level.

Yet Western help has been effective in building up West Berlin's economy. Exports last year amounted to $302,000,000, an increase of 50 per cent over the 1955 level.

West Berlin industrialists do not expect the free city idea to become a reality. Immediately after the Soviet note, several West Berlin concerns announced large-scale investment projects.

Two Children Burned to Death Near Kenora

KENORA (CP) — Two young children died Wednesday when fire destroyed their home at Eagle River, about 70 miles east of here.

The victims were Ila Kaitkainen, 5, and her two-year-old sister, Seppa, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Yrjo Kaitkainen.

Mr. Kaitkainen was away working in the bush at the time and his wife discovered the fire as she returned from a trip to a neighbor's to obtain milk.

The mother and the neighbor, Mrs. B. Mattsson, tried to enter the flaming two-storey frame house but were driven back by intense heat. Mrs. Kaitkainen required treatment for shock.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Louis Rock Roy are pictured cutting the wedding cake following their recent marriage in St. Joseph's Roman Catholic Church, Belleville. The bride is the former Miss Esther May Wilkinson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Wilkinson, of Belleville, and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. Alfred Roy, of Rouyon, Quebec. (Photo by Loyola McCabe, Belleville.)

ROY — WILKINSON

St. Joseph's Roman Catholic Church, Belleville, was the setting, recently, for a lovely wedding when Esther May Wilkinson, of Belleville, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Wilkinson, became the bride of Joseph Louis Rock Roy, of Tweonda, son of Mr. Alfred Roy, of Rouyon, Quebec. The Reverend J. J. Buckley, of Belleville, officiated before an altar adorned with pink and white chrysanthemums.

The wedding music was rendered by the Reverend Sister Mary Sibbalana, who also accompanied the soloist, Mr. Robert Burke who sang "Ave Maria", and "On This Day, O Beautiful Mother."

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was charming in her bridal gown of white Chantilly lace over satin, fashioned with lace bodice having a scalloped, rounded neckline accented by sequins, and long, sheath-like sleeves ending in lily-points over the wrists. The full-gathered floor-length skirt of nylon tulle, with lace overskirt over satin, fell in graceful folds. She wore a chalet cap encrusted with seed pearls and sequins and a finger-tip veil of tulle illusion, and carried a bouquet of rosette red roses mingled with white net.

Mrs. Anita Roy, of Toronto, sister-in-law of the bridegroom, was matron of honor, gowned in sapphire blue China crepe with white feather hat, white gloves, and carrying a bouquet of pink mums and white net.

Mr. Claude Roy, of Toronto, attended his brother as groomsmen.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the New Queen's Hotel, where the bride's table was beautifully appointed with white damask, and centred by a three-tier wedding cake, complimented by the bridal bouquet.

The bride's mother received in royal blue velvet with white accessories and corsage of white carnations.

For the wedding trip to St. Catharines, Niagara and Buffalo the bride travelled in a navy blue wool suit with pink accessories and wore a pink baby-pink orchid.

Mrs. and Mrs. Roy are residing in Toronto.

Previous to her marriage the bride was entertained at a miscellaneous shower held at the home of Mrs. Hincher, Belleville, by her co-workers of Kresge's, with Miss Margaret Novinski as hostess.

MINTO — The Christmas meeting of St. Thomas' W. A. was held at the home of Mrs. Ed Colden on Tuesday afternoon. Mrs. Preston opened the meeting with a Christmas carol and prayers by the Rev. J. Fleming.

Mrs. Henry Geen read the Scripture lesson.

Several items of business were taken care of including the shut-ins to be remembered.

The program followed and several carols were sung after which each member contributed an appropriate selection pertaining to Christmas.

Mr. Fleming closed the meeting with prayer. Mrs. Colden served refreshments.

Bay of Quinte W.I. Holds Yuletide Party

2nd SIDNEY — The Bay of Quinte Women's Institute held its Christmas party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Percy Boulton of Belleville, on Wednesday afternoon with a good attendance.

A poem, "Bouquet of Life," was read by Mrs. Casey Ketchenson. Mrs. Don Sandercock gave a reading called "A Dash of Santa." Mrs. Alva Meyers, a poem, "It Isn't Your Turn, It's You;" "If we walk in the light, as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another," by Mrs. Fred Wilson.

It was decided to send gifts to all shut-ins in the neighborhood at Christmas, and that a donation be sent to the T.B. fund, and to the Hospital for Sick Children at Toronto. A thank-you note was received from Mrs. DeCleu, thanking the W.I. for kindness in sending her a plaid and cards, while she was ill.

It was also decided it would be best to have the W.I. meeting at "Jeanne D'Arc" in August instead of the second Wednesday as the president, Mrs. Don Sandercock will be teaching at Harder's school for that time.

A game was enjoyed, put on by Mrs. Ernest Curtis with Mrs. John Reid, Mrs. Alva Dunn, Mrs. Arnold Ketcheson, Mrs. P. Boulton, Mrs. McCarey and Mrs. Ken Clapp winning prizes.

A humorous monologue was given by Mrs. Alva Dunn called "Whiskers or a Slight Mistake", and a contest by Mrs. Clarence Holmes with Mrs. Don Sandercock winning the prize. "A Christmas Prayer" was read by Mrs. Arnold Ketcheson and the Christmas tree stripped of its gifts.

Mrs. C. Holmes moved a vote of thanks to the hostess and all those who had helped to make this meeting such a success.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Thrasher, of Belleville, on January 14th at 8.15 p.m. sharp, with Mrs. Thrasher in charge of the program.

Costume Jewelry Integral Part of Every Ensemble

By PEGGY MASSIN

PARIS (Reuters) — Costume jewelry today plays an integral role in every ensemble. A multi-strand pearl necklace is no longer a random accessory to highlight basic clothes.

The "crystals" treatment, copying antique settings, with each jewel surrounded by a frame of smaller stones, eclipses other techniques, with color assorted to each individual costume.

Or shows oriental ruby "sultan collars" paired with the glowing, high-fashion shades, or hyacinth-tinted, cut crystal with the popular lilac and lavender tones.

Pierre Cardin marks the empire waisting with sunburst clips in strands of twisted glass beads in tones of soft green, topaz, pinks or mauve — blues matched to the color of the dress.

TITTLED NECKLINES

Two interesting personalities, working respectively under the initials of "Jeanne D. Vesant" and "Cls," are designing and executing many of the most exciting costume jewelry pieces in Paris. Both women are titled. They are fierce competitors. And each has built her thriving business on a modest start.

Jeanne St. Venant, who sells to Pierre Cardin and other leading Paris boutiques as well as American specialty shops, is the professional name of the Marquise de Bausset.

The marquise owns the Chateau de Sully in the Loire Valley, where Jeanne d'Arc is reputed to have stopped on her way to Orleans. Family portraits and a true historian's knowledge of the Renaissance period inspire many of her jewelry designs, including necklaces and bib collars worked in large, triangular motifs and faceted crystal beads interspaced with gilt.

NECK TIARAS

Cls, whom admirers know as the Countess Zoltowska, supplies many of the exotic costume pieces in the Balenciaga and Givenchy collections. The countess started her business four years ago with one worker. Today, she employs a staff of 30. She believes that one bold and beautiful piece creates a smarter effect than an irrelevent scattering of lesser important, miscellaneous jewels.

There is neo-classic simplicity noticed from period designs, as well as fun and drama in the Cls collection. The countess shows a lavalier draped from neckline to hem through the back of a velvet evening gown, or integrates hair ornaments into the style of the coiffure.

Tiaras are worn at the nape of the neck, while Alexandre's pastel-hued wigs are trimmed with pendants intended to be used as earrings. In a facetious mood, Cls shows identical diamond-studded dog collars for "mistress" and "mutt."

BIB NECKLACES

In the Paris boutiques, brilliant color suggesting the look of precious gems and new bib and collarette necklaces lead the way in jewelry trends.

Multi - strand necklaces are massed at the base of the throat as the single strand lariat or sautoir goes out with the chemise dress. These long, chain necklaces may still be worn, but looped and twined close to the collar bones, instead of dangling to the waistline.

The new necklaces include up to 12 separate rows, or are narrow at the back and widen in a bib or cascade arrangement in front.

'TWAS SIX DAYS BEFORE CHRISTMAS . . .

When all over town
People hurried and scurried
Some wearing a frown.

Soon the stockings would hang
By the chimney with care
But what to put in them?
We feel such despair.

The children were nestled
All snug in their beds,
What to buy? Where to shop?
Buzzes through our poor heads.

Mum with her list
And Dad just confused,
Had just settled down
Not too enthused.

When out of his chair,
Dad rose with a clatter.
Mother, surprised, said,
"What is the matter?"

The light from the lamp
Lit the floor up below,
Where Dad dropped the "Intell"
His face all aglow.

Then to my wondering eyes did appear
An ad in the paper that made it all clear.
As rapid as eagles our ideas all came,
We whistled and shouted as we checked off each name.

"WATCHES AND DIAMONDS—
EARRINGS AND BEADS—
CHINA AND SILVER—
ALL JEWELLERY NEEDS."

We had what we needed to fill up our socks

THE FAMILY COUNCIL

... Note: The Family Council consists of a judge, a journalist, three clergymen, a newspaper editor, a women's editor and two writers. Each prides itself on a summary of an actual case history. The Council reports on problems that have been referred to it by responsible agencies and counsellors.

Rosemary S. — I want to speak away clean.

Mrs. L. M. — Maybe he'll change now.

Rosemary S. — I am 38 and have been married for the past 18 years to an alcoholic. I have tried hard to make a go of our marriage for the sake of our three children, but it looks as though it is really impossible.

A few weeks ago my husband really flipped his lid and wound up in a sanatorium. Fortunately his mother is in a position to pay some of his expenses there. I am lucky enough to have a brother in business who is willing to pay me a decent salary for some part time work.

In short, I don't need anything from my husband and stand little chance of getting it if I did. I want to break away clean at last. A lawyer friend wants to help me get a divorce. He says I should do it quickly while my determination holds up. But my mother advises me to wait.

Mrs. L. M. — This marriage never should have taken place in the first place. Rosemary's husband is of a different faith and was married before and has three children by that marriage. She knew he was an alcoholic when she married him, but insisted on going ahead and hoping that her father or I could say or do would stop her.

In spite of all that, I feel that Rosemary is making a mistake in going through with a divorce at this time. She speaks of being "free" again as if she were a girl of 18. She is nearly 40 and has three young children. Men aren't standing in line waiting to marry her.

Her husband's doctor says that there is a possibility that he'll come through this thing. He's learned his lesson now. Maybe he'll be willing to join AA and change himself.

The Council: In our opinion a "lawyer friend" who urges a quickie divorce in a moment of extreme crisis is no friend and probably not much of a lawyer.

Divorce is not a thing to be undertaken while one's "determination holds up." It must be considered at least as carefully as marriage. The fact that Rosemary must leap at such a moment is sign enough that there are plenty of doubts and reservations in her mind. Apparently she has decided to deal with these after the getting divorce — quite a bit too late. A good lawyer will help his client to deal with his doubts and make some effort to save the marriage.

Mrs. L. M. brings up some legitimate points. However, nobody seems to be given any thought to the unfortunate husband, who is being utterly deserted in his hour of need. The realization that his wife would stand by him and his children need him could help this man back to life. The realization that he has lost his whole personal life could be the final blow.

Psychiatrists find that the matter of an alcoholic often in some way contributes toward his alcoholism. We cannot judge the extent of Rosemary's responsibility, but it is something she ought to find out for herself. Her 15-year-old marriage to this alcoholic has certainly not been a one-way street. Her journey should not be to an out-of-state divorce court, but to a nearby doctor, clergyman or AA group.

Gentlemen's Choice

If you are looking for a gift for that man in your life, here's a suggestion that was made by one of our better-dressed gentleman friends. He claims it will please the most fastidious.

It's an amber striped sports shirt made of a blend of orlon and wool—a good choice for leisure hours around the house and for suburban or country living. Meticulously tailored, the shirt has the added advantage of being drip-dry.

Christmas Dinner

by Mary Moore

Yesterday I gave you the menu for a Christmas dinner party which was laid in advance because as I said I am going to Germany with Marianne for mine.

With our details we went as far as stuffing and roasting the turkey. Now we have to prepare the vegetables.

SHREDDED HARVARD BEETS

To serve six, cook 3 medium large beets until tender; drain, slip off skins and shred on the medium shredder. Pete did this — he had to keep holding them under the cold water to cool his fingers! I made the sauce by stirring together in the top of the double boiler 2 tablespoons cornstarch, ¼ cup sugar and when they were blended added ¼ cup vinegar and 1 cup hot water and stirred until thick. When Pete had them ready I added the shredded beets and put the whole business over the bottom of the double boiler, put the heat on low and forgot about them until serving time. Their lovely red glow and tangy sweet-sour flavour were ever so popular especially with the adults.

BROCCOLI WITH NEVER-FAIL HOLLANDAISE

Cook broccoli, flower end up in a saucepan, in a moderate amount of boiling water, covered, until barely tender. Drain carefully and transfer to hot serving dish. Keep hot. Pour over the broccoli —

NEVER-FAIL HOLLANDAISE

To serve 10 or 12, double this quantity) Two egg yolks, ½ teaspoon salt, dash of cayenne pepper, ½ cup melted butter or margarine, 1 tablespoon lemon juice. Beat egg yolks until thick and lemon colored. Add salt and pepper. Melt butter and add 2 tablespoons to egg yolk mixture, beating constantly. Then slowly add the rest of the butter alternately with the lemon juice, beating continuously. Pour over the broccoli and serve immediately. If any of the sauce remains it may be stored in the refrigerator in a covered container and reheated the next day over lukewarm water, never hot or boiling.

CRANBERRY RELISH

In my opinion this way of serving cranberries with turkey is sometimes superior to all other methods they do not even compete. Put through the medium blade of the food chopper, 1-lb. washed and picked over cranberries with 1 large washed and cut into quarters unpeeled orange. Catch all the juice! When ground add 1 cup white sugar. Let stand for 24 hours, covered in the frig if possible before serving. Ready as it can be made in advance.

Details for the potatoes the French way and the Green Winter Salad and the Orange Hard Sauce will be given next Monday.

LATE FRUIT

GOOD MANNERS

By Mrs. Beeckman

GRANDPARENTS SHOULD NOT MAKE THIS ANNOUNCEMENT

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. Our daughter and her husband are separated. She is expecting a baby in January, and by this time the divorce will be final. Would it be proper for my husband and me to announce the arrival of our grandchild, rather than for our daughter to announce it? She prefers not to use her husband's first name in the announcement, but would rather have the announcement read: "Mrs. Jane Smith announces the arrival of —." I think this would be incorrect. What is your advice?

2. When our daughter was married the first time, she had a very small and informal wedding, with only the parents and the attendants present. If she should ever marry again, would it be proper for her to have a big church wedding and reception? Her father and I feel that she should, because her first marriage was such a failure.

— Reader

1. My advice is that you and your husband give your daughter the privilege of announcing the birth of her baby. Apparently this is what she prefers to do, and, for you grandparents to make the announcement would not only be against her wishes, but would, I should think, unnecessarily call attention to the existing unfortunate circumstances.

If your daughter really feels that she would like to send birth announcements, I suggest she write little notes announcing the birth. There she would correctly sign Jane Smith and so avoid the use of the always-incorrect form of "Mrs. Jane Smith." These notes might read:

Dear Margaret,

This is to announce to you and Bob the birth of Susan Anne Smith, on January —. She is a dear, healthy baby, and a great comfort to me. She and I hope to see you both soon.

Devotedly.

2. It would be your daughter who would make this important decision, if and when the time comes. The plans for a second marriage depend, of course, on circumstances, and always call for special care and taste.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you please tell me what is generally considered the December birthstone? We've heard several mentioned, and we're confused. My mother's birthday is December 31, and our family have the idea that she might like to have a piece of jewelry to clip (or a pair of clips, for example) for her birthday present.

— Reader

Actually there are three birthstones assigned to December, all of them blue, and all interesting shades of blue. Turquoise . . . Lapis Lazuli . . . and Zircon. Of these the Blue Zircon is, I should say, the most popular today, because of its radiance and sparkle. Although the Zircon comes in several brilliant colors, the Blue Zircon, in glowing aquamarine tones, is the best known. Happily, it blends with all colors, and with all other shades of blue.

TWO COUPLES TO GIVE ONE WEDDING PRESENT

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

The daughter of very dear and long-time friends of our family is to be married soon. My mother and father (who live in the same town where we live) and my husband and I have been invited to the wedding. We are all very fond of this girl, and we would like to give her a wedding present that she would really use. We could not afford anything elaborate, but would like to give her some useful item which she would very much like to have, and which we four could give her if we pooled our gift-budgets. However, we wonder if this would be proper, or should we send separate gifts because we received separate invitations? If you tell us it's correct for us to give a "four-some" present, will you also suggest how we might sign the card to be enclosed?

— We Four

An entirely proper thing to do, and certainly makes a good change. The fact that you received separate invitations makes no difference whatever. On the card to be enclosed, you might write:

Dearest love and every good wish from

The Allens . . Mary and Bill and

The Lanes . . Susan and George

Springbrook W.A. Re-elects 1958 Officers

The December meeting of the Springbrook United Church Women's Association was held last Thursday afternoon in the church basement with Mrs. C. Burkitt and Mrs. T. McKeown as hostesses.

A welcome was extended to all, including one visitor, by the president, Mrs. Carman Sine.

The devotional period was conducted by Mrs. Delbert Fleming who used the special Christmas leaflet entitled "Home for Christmas" with everyone taking part. Carols were sung throughout the service. The worship closed with prayer by the Rev. A. Beare.

The members reported 44 cards sent and 17 calls made. The correspondence read consisted of three "thank-yous" and a WMS letter.

Mrs. Burton Bateman expressed her appreciation for the plant, cards and visits she received while ill. Appreciation for expressions of sympathy were extended by Mrs. Frank Cosbey and Mrs. K. Thompson.

Mrs. John McKeown reported seven calls made by the November visiting volunteers.

The flower and fruit report given showed two cards and one plant sent out.

Mrs. Delbert Fleming reported on the cupboard project, which has recently been completed. Mrs. George Thompson, for the parsonage committee, told of the decorating that had just been done at the parsonage.

The financial report of the various recent activities was given by the treasurer, Mrs. Frank Cosbey. This concluded the business.

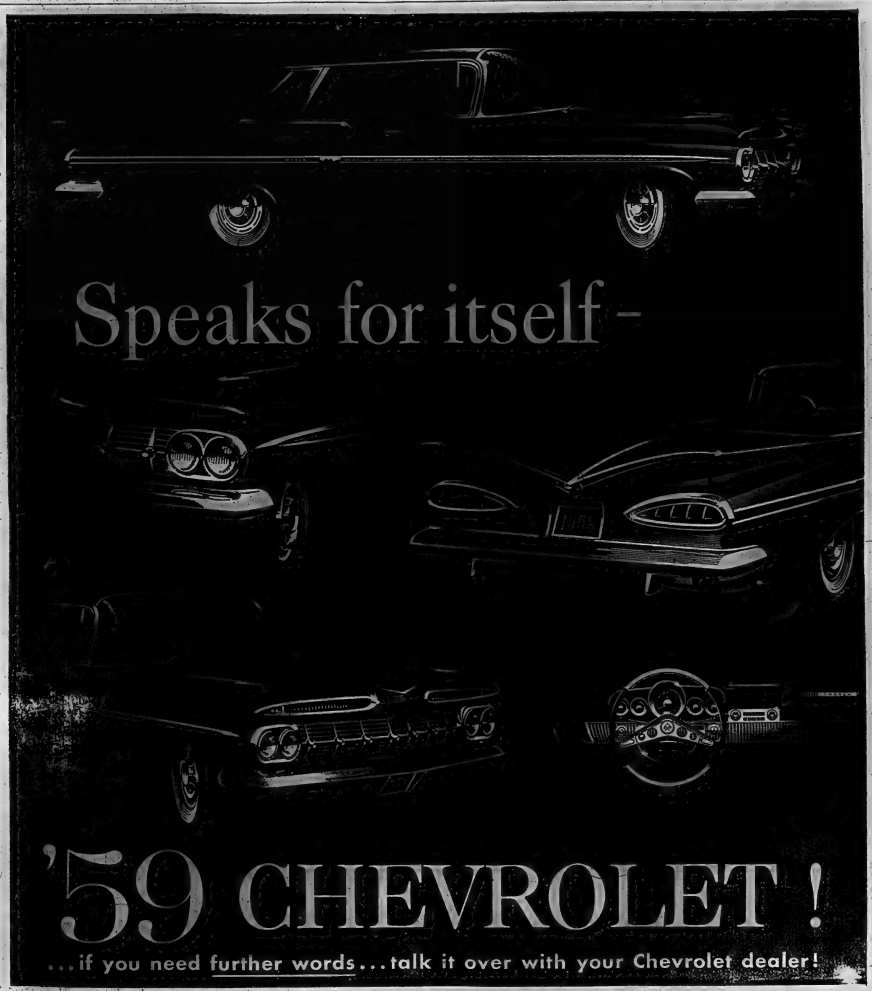
An interesting topic on "Christmas" was given by Mrs. Harry Haslett, followed by a reading by Mrs. George Thompson. The carol, "O Little Town of Bethlehem" was sung bringing this portion of the meeting to a close.

As this was the annual meeting, Mr. Beare took charge. He paid tribute to the organization for its co-operation during the past year and, although there had been much labor and, unfortunately, much illness, expenses throughout the year much less than accomplished.

The 1958 officers were re-elected for the year 1959.

Mrs. Sine, president again took charge of the meeting, and the various committees were re-appointed. A lengthy business period followed. The visiting volunteers for December and January will be Mrs. Clayton Burkitt and Mrs. Lindsay Cassidy.

The January meeting will be held in the church basement on the second Thursday of the month, in the form of a pot-luck dinner, with Mrs. Reg McKeown and Mrs. Delbert Fleming as hostesses. The executive will provide the program.



After the meeting closed refreshments were served by the hostesses and their assistants. Collection amounted to $2.50.

ALLIANCE TABERNACLE

Over 213 parents, friends and children assembled last evening at the Christian and Missionary Alliance Tabernacle for the annual Yuletide exercises and a setting of prettily lighted Christmas trees and glowing Bethlehem star, backed by a beautiful portrayal of the Nativity scene.

Following the prayer of invocation by Mrs. Palmer, wife of the pastor, the superintendent, Mrs. Fred Fraser ,extended a gracious welcome, and appreciation for the splendid number present.

The program, which consisted of two portions, the former presented by the Sunday School students of the lower school, and the latter by those of the Young People of the church and Sunday School in the form of a pageant, entitled, "The Shepherd's Live Again," where a class of boys, with Mrs. Raymond Masse as teacher, was instructed—in the meaning of Christmas. The lesson was highlighted by the arrival of the angels in their white gowns, and glistening widespread wings, the shepherds with their shepherd crooks, the wise men from the east, and the Holy Family. A choir of white surpliced choristers added a lovely note with the appropriate carols. Previous to pageant, members of the Adult Bible Class with Mr. Leonard at the organ rendered a hymn selection, "One Day."

During the offering Murray Dixon, accompanied by his sister, Miss Lenore Dixon at the piano, rendered a violin medley of lovely Christmas carols.

In every instance throughout the program of recitations, songs, and carols the "Birthday of the King," from the beginners, to the juniors, intermediates and adults was predominate.

SPECIAL FEATURE

A special feature at the close of the program was the distribution of the cradle roll gifts to 31 potential future Sunday School scholars: Iris Vardy; Wendy Joy Palmer; Farley Vander; Mark Vader; Susanne Reed; Randall Conley; David Deal; Steven Witterrett; Carol Anne Ewald; Rose Marie Whitaker; David Ivan Whitaker; Lee Ernest Vardy; Kevin Vardy; Reta Vader; Carol Anne Deal; Allen MacKay; Robert Vanderwater; Charles Vanderwater; Cheryl Seeley; Bruce Vassilin; Kenneth Leonard; Barbara Cavaghan; Deborah Jean Dexter; Brenda McNally; Lori Ann Robertson; Douglas Unger; Judy Lian Travers; Robert Eugene Whittaker; Laurie Elizabeth Courneyer; Susan Eileen Travers, and Eileen Henabee.

Those who assisted at the piano and organ for the carols and special class songs included, Miss Dorothea Atyeo, Miss Catherine Millard, and Miss Lenore Dixon, and, Mr. Wilbert Leonard, church organist.

The Reverend Sackville Palmer expressed appreciation to the parents and friends and to the teachers for their fine work in preparing the program, and closed with the benediction, after which treats of candy and apples were distributed to the various classes, to the adults and visitors.

"I'd hang up now, but Harry wants to use the phone!"

Scouting activities

At the annual meeting of the 1st St. Thomas group, chairman Arthur Abbey paid high tribute to Scoutmaster Art Fort, Cubmaster Reg Thurcher, group members and ladies' auxiliary.

Scouter Fort and Akela Churcher reported a year of real progress and indications promise a fine year ahead. The newly-formed ladies' auxiliary is proving to be an invaluable aid to the group. Last year's banquet was an example of how valuable these ladies are\. Mr. J. W. Dobson, treasurer, stated the finances were in good shape. They had a small amount at the beginning of the year and finished with a small amount. It was with regret that Mr. Deacon's resignation as treasurer was accepted after serving ten years in this office. A vote of thanks was extended to him for his faithful services.

STIRLING —Santa arrived in Stirling about 2 p.m. on Saturday via a red cutter. He and his helpers were busy distributing bags of treats to some 1,000 children.

A special movie was staged at the local theatre and here the older boys and girls were entertained. The group lind up at Dave Tanks and the sidewalk was filled with children down to the Cenotaph. The boy scouts assisted in marshalling the children to the theatre.

The pre-school children had their fun when they came with their parents or escorts to greet Santa Claus and receive their gifts.

The stores were all specially decorated for the occasion and all were ready to look after the customers. Strings of colored lights and other Christmasy decorations welcomed the folks from far and near who spent the afternoon in the village.

DESERONTO

Four Members Of Council Are Retiring

DESERONTO — The final meeting of the Deseronto 1958 council was held in the town hall on Monday night with all members present. At the close of the meeting the members expressed regret at losing four of their members. The reeve said he was very sorry to see the four members leave as he had enjoyed working with them. Mayor Sweetman stated that the co-operation of the council had been exceptional and felt that the members each deserved a gold medal for sticking together so well. He said that they had accomplished a great deal. Some of the defeated members stated that they would watch the new council with great interest.

Most of the committee reports dealt only with recommendations for the new council but the finance report tabled by the reeve showed that the county levy of $14,400 had not yet been paid. Reeve Alford thought that the county could be paid before the end of the year with the assistance of the bank. It was noted that there was no forecast of the final financial standing of the council for this year.

A letter from the town solicitor advised that the fencing agreement with the Drave Co. had finally been prepared and it was moved that this agreement be completed as soon as received.

A letter from the plumbing inspector regarding raw sewage going into storm sewers was read. The reeve moved that copies of the act be printed and made available for the plumbing inspector. The streets committee report was ordered filed for presentation to the incoming council for action as soon as possible. Councillor Marks stated that in future should the town feel it necessary to hire a police chief or constable that the applicant be given a thorough medical examination. The by-law is to be altered.

WILL PAY BOUNTY

A by-law was passed to pay a bounty on foxes.

The purchase of a new tractor was referred to thenew council with the recommendation that they review the tnoders already received.

There was some discussion regarding the alteration of the assessment of T. W. Stewart but council found no motion was necessary as the court had authorized a reduction of $30 only after Mr. Stewart.

Council declared December 26th a legal holiday.

Councillor Howard asked for advice on the question of paying for removing cats to the veterinary. On two occasions cats had bitten someone and the owners had honed for the police to remove the cat. Mr. Howard felt the town should not have to pay for this but wanted the advice of the rest of the council.

When councillor Marks asked, who authorized the hiring of a snowplow an argument was begun as apology was forthcoming from Mr. Howard had hired the plow and he stated that if necessary he would pay for the plow out of his own pocket.

Principal and Principle of Belleville Collegiate presented the interim audit. This was audit which the council said it. Neal was slow in preparing. After adopting the minutes of the meetings of March 3rd and May 2nd, Council accepted the report.

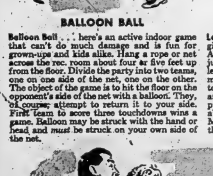
Labatt's Party Programme

Games and puzzles for the Holidays...

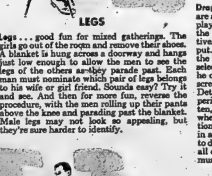
BLIND RIDE

Blind Ride . . . this one can be played just for the fun or with two teams in competition. Two men are blindfolded and spun around until they have lost all sense of direction. The men then hold hands to form a cradle in which one of the girls sits. Then the passenger has the task of guiding her carriers to a pre-determined spot on the other side of the room, pulling the left ears of her "horses" to guide them to the left, right ears to the right. This one will prove to you that the telling of right from left is quite a difficult task when you're blindfolded!



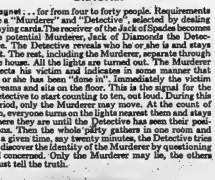
WHISPERING

Whispering . . . a game that always creates a surprise. The gang sits in a circle and one person writes down a sentence which he whispers into the ear of the person sitting next to him. This person turns to his neighbour and passes it on, and so on right round the circle. Part of the fun is not to be too careful about how clearly you whisper. The last one to get the sentence writes down what he or she thinks they heard. When you compare the sentence as it started with the sentence as it finished, you'll understand how rumours grow!



PAPER PLATE RELAY

Paper Plate Relay . . . a good one for the kids and energetic grown-ups. Split the party up into two teams and supply each team with two paper plates. Each team lines up at one end of the room with the front man having the plates. He has to get up the room and back, with his feet on the plates. He must not slide the plates along the floor, but step from one to the other, picking up the back one after each step and placing it in front of him. Each member of the team does this and the winning team is the one that finishes first.



BALLOON BALL

Balloon Ball . . . here's an active indoor game that can't do much damage and is fun for grown-ups and kids alike. Hang a rope or net across the rec. room about four or five feet up from the floor. Divide the party into two teams, one on one side of the rope, one on the other. The object of the game is to hit the floor on the opponent's side of the net with a balloon. They, of course, attempt to return it to your side. First team to score three touchdowns wins a game. Balloon may be struck with the hand or head and must be struck on your own side of the net.

LEGS

Legs . . . good fun for mixed gatherings. The girls go out of the room and remove their shoes. A blanket is hung across a doorway and hangs just low enough to allow the men to see the legs of the others as they parade past. Each man must nominate which pair of legs belongs to his wife or girl friend. Sounds easy? Try it and see. And then for more fun, reverse the procedure, with the men rolling up their pants above the knee and parading past the blanket. Male legs may not look so appealing, but they're sure harder to identify.

DRAGNET

Dragnet . . . for from four to forty people. Requirements are a "Murderer" and "Detective", selected by dealing playing cards. The receiver of the Jack of Spades becomes the potential Murderer, Jack of Diamonds the Detective. The Detective reveals who he or she is and who's put. The rest, including the Murderer, separate through the house. All the lights are turned out. The Murderer selects his victim and indicates in some manner that he or she has been "done in". Immediately the victim screams and sits on the floor. This is the signal for the Detective to start counting to ten, out loud. During this period, only the Murderer may move. At the count of ten, everyone turns on the lights nearest them and stays where they are until the Detective has seen their positions. Then the whole party gathers in one room and in a given time, say twenty minutes, the Detective tries to discover the identity of the Murderer by questioning all concerned. Only the Murderer may lie, the others must tell the truth.

SOLUTION TO LABATT'S CHARADE

Just in case you haven't already guessed the answer to the charade in the Labatt's advertisement currently appearing in street cars and buses, here it is. Ita's portraying "said"—you can see how well he feels. She's saying "come". That makes the word "Welcome". You can have lots of fun with charades at your party. Just divide the guests into teams, and let each team act a word that the others have to guess.

MADOC

Co-op Assoc. Observes 10th Anniversary

MADOC — The Madoc Co-Operative Association held its annual banquet and business meeting on Wednesday evening in Trinity United Church parlors. It was also its 10th anniversary.

Following a turkey dinner served by the WA and WMS ladies of the church, Mr. Mac Woods, treasurer, presented the financial statement, showing that the Madoc Co-Op is in an enviable financial position with the best co-operatives in Ontario. Net sales for the year ending Aug. 31, 1958, were $180,897 with a net saving for the year before patronage returns of $14,307. Total assets are $89,554.

President Donald McKinnon, acting chairman for the evening, welcomed the members and their wives. He noted that Madoc Co-Op was celebrating 10 years of progress and achievement. He paid tribute to Albert R. Woods, who, he said, had done "a terrific job."

Head table guests were introduced by Wilfred Forestell, while community singing was led by Mrs. Allan Franks accompanied on the piano by Mrs. Philo Harris. The guest soloist was Mrs. Ross Moncrevich, who rendered two numbers, "It's Beginning to Look Like Christmas" and "A White Christmas."

Mr. Earl Sager, secretary, read the minutes of the last annual meeting.

The guest speaker, Mr. Leonard Harman, assistant manager of United Co-Operatives of Ontario, was introduced by Kenneth Holland.

The speaker referred to the organization of Madoc Co-Op and congratulated them on their success and progress. With 233 members the Madoc Co-Op is one of the 150 in Ontario which owns property valued at $70,000,000.

The speaker recently spent several months in Europe where he visited many co-ops, where they operate 250 factories and is the largest retail business in Scotland.

He felt Canada and the U.S. haven't kept pace with the times during the past 100 years and have missed some opportunities. Introducing the last 30 years co-ops have expanded rapidly and strongly. Co-ops have a well balanced program, building up assets, and should hold well-attended annual meetings and should be owned, controlled, and operated as a democratic organization."

Appreciation was extended by Earl Sager.

A 5 per cent dividend payable in 30 years was approved by the members.

The election of directors was conducted by Mr. McIntyre, with Chris Bailey, Elmar Woods and Cecil Blackburn being elected for a three-year term.

Other speakers were Ray Lougheed, director of co-ops of Ontario; Albert Woods, manager of Madoc Co-Op; Wilfred Forestell, who spoke on the building program, and Gregor Murray, manager of the Toronto-Dominion Bank, Madoc.

A vote of thanks was extended to the ladies who served the dinner and to the entertainers, by Teg Mercer. Door prizes were won by Beverly Ketcheson, Wayne Robinson and Allan Broadworth.

Upturn in Steel Demand Is Gaining Speed

NEW YORK (AP) — Iron Age magazine said today the upturn in steel demand is gaining speed and the big push will take hold early next year.

The nation's metalworking weekly pointed to these developments to support its prediction of a continuing betterment of the steel market:

1. Steel users are rebuilding inventories. This buildup now is barely under way. It will develop a full head of steam in the first and second quarters of 1959.

2. Steel order backlogs are mounting. Shipments also are increasing, but incoming orders are such that most mills will enter the new year with healthy order books.

3. Demand for the auto industry is good, and improving.

4. Demand from stampers and forgers also is improving.

Professional Soothsayers Wrong by Miles in Their Estimate of 1958 Market

NEW YORK (AP) — The 1958 stock market exceeded Wall Street's fondest dreams.

And it marred the records of professional soothsayers who were wrong by miles in their estimate of what the market would do.

The stock market averages hit one record peak after another. The bull market, which apparently died in 1957, sprang to life with a vengeance. Its hoovers trampled into the dust the carefully hedged predictions of expert market analysts.

PROFITS DISCOUNTED

In all fairness, it should be stated that after the collapse of late 1957, Wall Streeters did forecast a stock market rise in anticipation of business recovery—but these predictions were cautious. None had the nerve to foresee the ensuing bull market.

This was a recession stock market whose upsurge predicted business recovery. Some say the rise in stock prices discounted increases in earnings for years to come. Others were not so pessimistic.

Investors and traders bet on a prosperous future even while industrial production was falling, unemployment was rising, earnings were being cut and dividends either reduced or omitted.

This was the fundamental factor in the market's brilliant performance. The hopes, fears, dreams, speculations and calculations of the millions who make the market added up to one things: confidence.

MONEY MANAGERS

This confidence was bolstered by some solid factors:

First was the obvious determination of the federal government and its money managers to fight the recession.

In the early part of the year the Federal Reserve Board cut the discount rate—that is the interest rate on loans to member banks—on three occasions, dropping it to 1¾ per cent from 6 per cent. This made it less costly for business to borrow money. The federal reserve also cut the reserve requirements of members of banks, freeing more funds for lending. It reduced margins for stock buying to 50 per cent from 70 per cent.

At the same time, the administration primed the pump on the economy on a broad front.

SPACE TONIC

Second came the psychological uplift of the successful launching of the first U.S. space satellite, the Explorer, and the subsequent launching of others. To Wall Street, which had been "Sputnikked" the previous fall by the first Russian success in this field, this was a tonic indeed.

Third, even while the economy was in the doldrums, the cost of living was rising. Here was inflation in the midst of deflation, a paradox to be reckoned with. Money in the bank bought less, but money in stocks multiplied by itself, running far ahead of the rise in consumer prices.

This touched off a wave of "inflation hedge" buying of stocks. Some commented that this was the first time the market rose not because of hope but because of fear—fear of inflation. That, they said, was a "flight from the dollar," a decision that it was safer to own things that money bought than money itself.

Fourth, the landing of United States Marines in Lebanon not only bolstered confidence for the safety of U.S. interests in the oil-rich Middle East but also implied that defence spending must continue at high levels, thus giving support to defence-related stocks.

BIGGER BUDGETS

Fifth, the question of how things would shape up after Labor Day was answered with a convincing upturn in business. This gave further strength to the stock market.

The sweeping victories by Democrats in the November U.S. election fed inflation psychology still further. Wall Street interpreted this as a portent of bigger spending by government.

The market moved uncertainly in the first three months of the year, rising in January, falling in February and regaining part of February's loss in March.

Stock prices started a steady, month-to-month advance in April. The rise began as steel output sank to less than 50 per cent of capacity. The upturn in the economy was just ahead.

MARKET BOLSTERED

By Sept. 11 the market had recovered all of the loss suffered in the big decline from July, 1957, to October, 1957, when prices were knocked down to their lowest since early 1955.

The stock market on Sept. 16 set an all-time high in the Associated Press average, topping the previous peak of 491.56 reached in April, 1956. From that point on, the averages went from high to higher until a slight correction, based purely on the desire to take profits, occurred in late November.

Aside from the direct buying of stocks, this year's market was bolstered by institutional investors who accounted for an estimated 70 per cent of stock transactions. Mutual funds, pension funds, insurance companies, banks and other repositaries of the public's money poured into the market when support prices declined enough to seem attractive.

The general expectation on Wall Street is that the stock market will be more restricted in 1959 than in 1958. Further price corrections are anticipated along with a rise in new highs.

Castle Frank May Be Replaced By Apt. Project

TORONTO (CP) — Historic Castle Frank, built in 1732 as a summer residence by Upper Canada's first lieutenant-governor, may be replaced by a multi-million-dollar apartment project.

The National Trust Company, responsible for disposing of the estate, is reported to have granted building promoter Reuben Dennis an option on the land at a price near $1,700,000.

Construction of the 23-storey apartment block, which at built would be the highest in the city, would mean demolition of the old mansion located on eight acres of land off Bloor Street near the Don River in east-central Toronto.

18 DIE IN BUS

QUITO, Ecuador (AP) — A bus plunged into a ravine Wednesday near Ciudad Curaca, about 250 miles south of here, killing 18 persons, press reports said.

Some Trapped Freighters May Be Freed Today

MONTREAL (CP) — Massive ice rafts still held 11 ocean-going freighters in a white prison 30 miles from Montreal this morning but there was hope some might be freed later today.

The hope rests on the prow of the doughty icebreaker D'Iberville which began crunching its way through 15-foot packs Wednesday from Lake St. Peter to Lanoraie, 10 miles away, where the ships are trapped.

But the D'Iberville's work will only be beginning when she finishes smashing a 200-yard-wide channel to the ships sometime today.

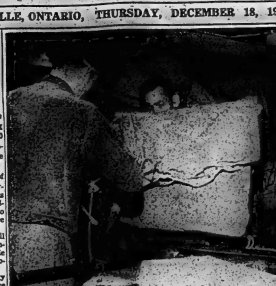
Then she must start the tricky task of making room in the ice for the trapped ships to manoeuvre in—tricky because none of the ships are anchored and will begin to move with the current as soon as ice is cleared away, making collisions an ever-present menace.

EXPERTS' OUTLOOK

At best, experts in the St. Lawrence River ice engineer's office say, the ships may be all moving towards the Atlantic and a winter of sailing ocean routes by Friday.

While the D'Iberville goes about her task two other icebreakers, the N.B. McLean and the Ernest Lapointe, keep a passageway open on the shallow waters of Lake St. Peter. The three ships are to be reinforced later this week by the icebreaker Labrador, dispatchd from Halifax Wednesday.

The Liberian freighter Elmarie, which had been trapped at Sorel, was freed Wednesday, and escorted by the N.B. McLean, made the 40-mile journey down Lake St. Peter to Trois-Rivieres, where she anchored for the night.



The British freighter Sunkirk, which had left Trois-Rivieres in the morning on the 70-mile voyage to Quebec City, was forced to turn back when heavy snow and thick vapor condensing over the water cut visibility to a minimum.

Once the 11 ships at Lanoraie are freed the icebreakers must turn their attention to 18 more grain-laden vessels riding in Montreal harbor and a fresh obstacle —an ice line extending from the eastern end of Montreal Island to Cap St. Michel 10 miles away.

Child Drowned

WALLACEBURG (CP) — Nine-year-old Ronald Shaw, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Shaw, of Wallaceburg was drowned Wednesday night in the Sydenham River.

Police said he was walking on a bridge when it gave way and he plunged into 11 feet of water. His body was recovered.

The mail, as one can well see, is piled to the rafters, well at least to the lights, as Belleville's Post Office workers handle the heaviest flow of Christmas mail their department has ever had. Over 300,000 pieces of mail, excluding parcel post were handled, sorted, delivered, or shipped out by the local mailmen Tuesday —a record high for Belleville. For the complete story on the action behind the scenes, or behind the letter slots, of the local Post Office read the second front page of the Friday edition of The Ontario Intelligencer, which will now include a weekly feature page on the front of the second section every week-end.

It should be noted that for the weeks of December 22nd and December 29 only, the feature page will appear in the Wednesday edition.

Vienna-Born Doctor Believes He Is on Track to Cut Down Death Toll by Heart Diseases

MONTREAL (CP) — Hope of victory against cardiac ailments gleams through the cautious scientific language of a new book about hormones, salts and heartbeats.

Most of the hearts belonged to rats. Treated with hormones and certain salts, they gradually died. Treated with other salts, or electrolytes, they recovered.

Could these electrolytes save human lives?

Dr. Hans Selye thinks so. In fact Dr. Selye, 51, Vienna - born doctor of Medicine, science and philosophy, believes he's on the hottest trail of his distinguished career.

Half the people in North America eventually die of heart disease. If Dr. Selye is right, many would be saved by taking cheap, simple pills.

"It is the first time in my life such an opportunity has arisen," he says.

In The Chemical Prevention of Cardiac Necroses, Dr. Selye says "even the most conservative evaluation of these findings cannot fail to raise the hope that such a protection by electrolytes may also be effective in the prophylaxis of at least some among the cardiopathies 'of man.'"

The 237-page book published in November (Ronald Press Company, New York) was written for physicians in hope some might have opportunity to test the findings clinically.

The Chemical Prevention of Cardiac Necroses is an indirect descendant of a book for educated laymen Dr. Selye published in 1956, The Stress of Life, which popularized stress as the villain in many diseases.

In work with stress, Dr. Selye and his team of researchers at the Institute of Experimental Medicine and Surgery of the University of Montreal were put on the track of the heart remedy.

"We found that rats rapidly develop fatal cardiac necroses followed by myocarditis (inflammation) if they are simultaneously treated with normally innocuous amounts of various corticoids (hormones) and certain sodium salts," Dr. Selye says in his introduction.

But simultaneous treatment with potassium or magnesium salts protected the heart against these death or cardiac necroses, a factor in many heart diseases. The results were confirmed in other laboratory animals, including monkeys.

NEED WIDER STUDY

The findings have yet to be tried on man.

The hormones, which work with sodium salts to cause cardiac necroses are produced by the body under stress. The guilty electrolytes are esters. Ordinary table salt is a sodium compound.

"It is difficult to foretell which among the spontaneous cardiac diseases of man are most likely to be prevented or improved by potassium chloride and magnesium chloride," says Dr. Selye's research.

"... The decisive proof of the applicability of these concepts will have to be furnished by clinicians."

The institute plans no field tests itself, and a funds shortage is hindering all-out laboratory research.

NEEDS FUNDS

Ordinary requirements are met among the institute's $150,000 basic budget, provided by the university and Canadian and United States foundations. Another $100,000 is needed annually for the best research.

Dr. Selye says the needs of the institute are modest compared with the billions Canada has spent preparing for a war that may never come.

West Not Fussy About Defending Edinburgh Cup

EDMONTON (CP) — Initial western reaction is cool to a proposal that the Edinburgh Cup series be revived.

The cup was emblematic of Canadian professional hockey championship and was played for as an East-West challenge.

The playoff was discontinued last season at the request of the Western Hockey League after four years, on the grounds there was no time for it because of the late season out West. With playoff dates are juggled to bypass televised Stanley Cup dates.

Wednesday, Montreal Royals said that they should win the Quebec Hockey League championship, they would challenge the WHL title-holder.

WEST DUBIOUS

In Spokane, general manager Roy McBride of Spokane Flyers said:

"A post-season playoff with the Quebec champions would not be too attractive as far as we're concerned. Baseball is big here and going in late April and weather then isn't good for hockey. Also there is the matter of travel expenses. I don't think we would be very interested."

Gus Kyle, manager-coach of Calgary Stampeders, was also dubious:

"It's too late now to plan that type of series. A challenge of that type should have been issued before the season started. Then the WHL would have been able to cut down the length of time for its own playoffs so as to finish an Edinburgh series the same time we would normally finish our own league playoffs."

Tiger Move Pleases Yost

By HEN OLAN
Associated Press Sports Writer

SOUTH OZONE PARK, N.Y. (AP)—"I read in the papers that Detroit and three other teams were after me. I was hoping it would—be the Tigers. A few days later it happened."

This was Eddie Yost discussing the recent trade that sent him into the Tigers' den from Washington. The 32-year-old veteran third baseman of 12 seasons with the Senators, lives here with his parents.

"It's a good break," added Yost, who is also the league's player representative. "It should give me more of an incentive playing with a better ball club."

"But it certainly will be strange not being with the Senators after so many years. You think back about the many nice things that happened . . . like the day in 1953 when they had an Eddie Yost Day in Griffith Stadium. My mother came to see me play for the first time. I got two hits and got on base four times . . . and we won the game.

"I think the thing I'm most likely to remember, though, is playing under Bucky Harris. He taught me a lot."

Yost batted only .224 in 134 games last season. He led the third basemen in fielding with a .966 mark. His lifetime batting average is .253.

Yost moved to Detroit along with shortstop Rocky Bridges in exchange for infielders Reno Bertoia and Ron Samford, outfielder Jim Delsing and cash.

"I got a call from Johnny McHale (Detroit general manager) the other day and he gave me the impression that he is counting on me as the regular third baseman," said Yost.

Hockey's Big Seven

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Eddy Litzenberger, Chicago's tall centre, was the only one of leading scorers to improve his position Wednesday night.

Litz fired one goal and got two assists to break out of a sixth-place tie and move to a fourth place tie.

Bernie (Boom Boom) Geoffrion of Montreal Canadiens still leads the NHL point-getting list with 17 goals and a league-leading 22 assists.

The leaders:

	G	A	Pts
Geoffrion, Montreal	17	22	39
Bathgate, New York	19	18	37
Howe, Detroit	14	18	32
Moore, Montreal	15	14	29

Villemure, Detroit	12	17	29

SIGN SIX MORE

CLEVELAND (AP) — The Cleveland Indians—have signed six players to 1959 baseball contracts, including recently acquired second baseman Billy Martin. Other players signed up are pitchers Jake Striker and Morris Martin, infielders Billy Moran and Randy Jackson, and outfielder Carroll Hardy.

Valdes, That Is

'My Bum Will Beat Any Bum Including Champ', Says Bob

By MURRAY ROSE
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP)—Straightening up to his full five feet, five inches, manager Bobby Gleason proclaimed, Nino Valdes heavyweight champion of the world Wednesday and dared the world's best to joust with his Cuban giant.

Gleason's proclamation was shortened in the corridors of the International Boxing Club's office in Madison Square Garden.

"The time has come for action," bellowed Bobby. "We can no longer wait for Floyd Patterson and his manager Cus D'Amato to unmask their intentions."

"Effective immediately, they are out. My tiger is in. Our first defence will be against Pat McMurtry at the Garden Friday night. Come one and all, the box office men await."

CAN'T WAIT

What prompted the coup d'etat?

"My old bum just turned 34," replied Gleason promptly. "I am 64. Our blood is thinning. Time is running out on us. And besides my bum is better than the other bums around today."

What if Patterson should decide to fight him?

"We will be fair," said Bobby. "We will fight him. But my guy has punch and Cus doesn't like his guy to fight punchers so it appears very unlikely that the match will be made."

"You who else is there around? Ingemar Johansson (Sweden's European Champion), and those two Britishers, Brian London and Henry Cooper.

"My bum will gladly fight the three of them in one night any time and any place they say. And old Nino will flatten all three in a total of eight or nine rounds.

"You know Nino has had six fights in Europe and if you will check the record book you will discover that he scored six knockouts. The last one was a one-round have of Joe Erskine in 1957.

"Who do you think we used as sparring partners? None other than Brian London and Henry Cooper. I said them $10 a day and they only lasted a day.

"Before the Erskine flirt we were all set to meet that Johansson in Sweden. But after Nino stiffened Erskine, Johansson's manager, Eddie Ahlquist, said his boy was not ready yet. If he's ready now, we'd be more than happy to defend the title in Sweden."

How will Valdes fare with McMurtry Friday?

"My bum will knock him out," replied Bobby.

Gleason cast a fretful eye on his tiger and asked "how about it, Nino?"

"I no say that," said the six-foot, three-inch Cuban. "I respect McMurtry is very good boxer. I hope to win."

"Don't pay any attention to the bum", said Gleason. "He's just bashful. I positively say my bum will stiffen the bum."

CALL MARSHALL

MONTREAL (CP) — Centre Willie Marshall of the Rochester Americans of the American Hockey League has been called up by the Toronto Maple Leafs of the National Hockey League. Marshall is to arrive in Montreal today to be in the Toronto line-up for the Leafs' game against the first-place Montreal Canadiens.

Giants Count On Punter In Big Game

By JACK HAND

NEW YORK (AP)—Who is the New York Giants' best runner? Best passer? Best punter?

It may come as a shock to learn it is one man—Don Chandler.

Chandler carried once this year on a fake punt against Baltimore and gained 15 yards. That stands as his average for the season. He passed once and completed it for a gain of 27 yards and a 1.000 percentage. The average of his 43 punts is 44 yards, second only to Washington's Sam Baker in the National Football League.

Although coach Jim Lee Howell doesn't count on Chandler to do much running or throwing Sunday against Cleveland in the playoff for the eastern division title, he does count heavily on his punting.

"When you have two teams, each of which has a good long field goal man, your punter can be the most important man on the field," said Howell as the Giants worked out at Yankee Stadium.

WEAPON AGAINST GROZA

"Your long punter can put the ball so deep that their field goal man (Lou Groza in the case of the Browns) hasn't got a chance," he said. "It worked the other day in our favor Sunday. Dick Deschaine is a good kicker but he got off a bad one and we were within scoring distance.

"Both Chandler and Deschaine will be very important men in Sunday's game and even more important if the weather turns bad."

Chandler seldom does anything to kick. However, he always has the option from Howell to stand a punt and go against the Colts.

Chandler's longest punt this year was a 65-yard boot against Pittsburgh. He did kick one 79 yards from the line of scrimmage in an exhibition game.

LONDON (CP) — Manchester United parted with wing half Stan Crowther to Chelsea. Crowther joined the crippled first division side just 20 minutes before its first game after the Feb. 6 plane crash which took the lives of eight United regulars. Home Towners Give Archie Hero's Welcome

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — Light heavyweight champion Archie Moore, who was named "fighter of the year," came home Wednesday to a hero's welcome.

Moore, usually a glib talker, was almost speechless after hearing the praise of city and county officials. All he could say was:

"I'm very happy to see all of you here. I had not expected such a turnout and did not prepare a speech. I would like to say now that I'm so full of gratitude that I can't convey my feelings."

Last week Moore turned in what he termed "the most sensational fight of my career" in retaining his championship with an 11th-round knockout of Yvon Durelle in Montreal.

The boxing writers association named Moore recipient of the Edward J. Neil Memorial Plaque as "fighter of the year." The association trophy is awarded annually in memory of the Associated Press writer who died in 1938 while covering the war in Spain.

Jacques Plante, Canadiens' Nomadic Goalie, Turns From Knitting to Brushes and Oils

By W. E. WHEATLEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

MONTREAL (CP) — Jacques Plante, Montreal Canadiens' nomadic netminder whose style has been copied around the National Hockey League, exercises artistic licence.

It has nothing to do with goal-keeping but with brush and oils.

Plante achieved some sort of notoriety and no small amount of needling some years ago for his prowess at knitting.

Sweaters, socks, toques — anything that can be put together from a few balls of wool — were turned out by Plante. He seldom knits now. He found it tiring on the eyes. But he has become an avid artist, purely for pleasure and relaxation.

Plante especially likes to do landscapes — in his cosy cellar den at home, not out of doors. From pictures in magazines or art publications, and sometimes from objects, he assembles his choice into one painting on his canvas.

Perhaps his most satisfying piece of work through this expression of artistic licence was done from three pictures. He fancied a particular landscape scene with a tree predominant. Thumbing through his picture collection, he came across a cast, and then a bird.

"I have been interested in art since I attended College Immaculate-Conception in Shawinigan, my home town. One of the professors there encouraged me. I used to do drawings and sketches at first. Then I took up oils. The professor even arranged for me to get instruction courses by correspondence."

This smart Montreal goalie has done a pretty artistic job in hockey, too. For the last three seasons he has won the prized Vezina trophy as the NHL goalie least scored upon.

Only two other goalies have won the award three times in a row. Both wore the blue-blanc-rouge uniform of Canadiens. Bill Durnan won it four times straight — six altogether. The late George Hainsworth was a triple winner in successive seasons.

Plante became a full - season regular with Canadiens in the 1954-55 season when he was 24 years old. He moved up from Montreal Royals of the old Quebec Senior Hockey League, now the pro QHL.

With Canadiens, he pioneered the spectacular business of making long excursions from the net, AVOIDS REBOUNDS

"If you trap the puck, there's no rebound," Plante figured. "Then you can pass to one of your own men or clear the puck around the back of the net."

Plante, sometimes called Jake the Snake has heard the boos of Montreal fans when infrequently he has made a mistake. Yet nobody can calculate the possible goals he has saved. Smart goalies on other clubs soon took to wandering also, but not in the spectacularly fabulous fashion of Plante.

It was while with the senior Royals, who usually travelled by bus, that Plante did most of his road-trip knitting.

"I noticed my eyes getting tired from it, so I have done very little knitting since coming to Canadiens.

"How did I learn? That's easy. My mother taught me. You see, I was the oldest of 11 children and I was only 13 years old when the youngest was born.

"It was really something to keep that bunch outfitted in sweaters and stockings and toques and all that. Now, do you blame my mother for teaching me?"

Maroons Swat Dutchies 8-3 As Wolves, Greyhounds Win

Kitchener - Waterloo Dutchmen are having a frustrating season in the OHA-NOHA Senior A division.

They've spent most of the season so far trying to catch up with the league leading Chatham Maroons. Every time they gain ground the powerful Maroons widen them back.

Dutchmen took a convincing 5-3 swatting in Chatham Wednesday night as Maroons posted their 12th home victory without a loss. It put them seven points back of the leaders.

In other action Sudbury Wolves edged North Bay Trappers for the second time in as many nights with a 3-2 decision and held onto third place a point ahead of Sault Ste. Marie Greyhounds who belted Windsor Bulldogs 9-1.

The line of Jim Connelly, Ted Power and Gary Sharp produced an 11-point performance for the Maroons. Sharp fired two goals with his mates collecting a each. Al Cleary added two with Fred Pilotich and Ernie Dick adding singles.

Chatham had a 4-0 lead going in the second period before Bill Saunders broke the drought for Kitchener. Power and Connelly went to Dick Mattusi and Don Rope.

At Sudbury, goaltender Ray Fredericks posted the first shutout registered for a Wolves team this season after Joe Zorzi and Bobby Forhan combined to give Wolves an early 2-0 lead that stood up through a hard-fought game.

A pair of goals by Jim McBurney led Greyhounds to victory on their home ice. Jim Farrell got the other.

Windsor scorer was Gil-Mo Moffat.

Durelle Charges Long Counts While Moore Was on Canvas

TORONTO (CP)—Yvon Durelle says he was the victim of two long counts in the first round of his Montreal title fight against Archie Moore last Wednesday and expects to will take the world light - heavyweight championship in a return bout next summer.

Durelle, here Wednesday night for a television appearance, claims that while Moore was on the canvas and referee Jackie Sharkey made two nine-counts the timekeeper counted off "12 or 14 seconds" on each knockdown.

"Sharkey took his own count and not that of the timekeeper," the stocky Maritime fisherman said in an interview. "Also the referee broke up too many times. I couldn't fight inside the way I wanted to."

Durelle had Moore on the canvas three times in the first but Sharkey refused to rule a slip.

Asked about a return bout, Durelle said:

"I'll probably be next summer and I don't care. I fought hurt just as much getting hit in the States as it does in Canada."

"I'll go wherever there's the most money. In Moore's backyard or one of my fishing boats in Toronto or Montreal. It doesn't matter.

"Moore is a great champion and a natural fighter, and I learned more in reading that bout than in winning over the last 13 years. I think I'll take him in our return match."

Durelle said his remarks about the referee were not sour grapes and admitted Moore is "the smartest I ever met but not the toughest."

"I've fought about 25 guys that were tougher but he's harder to hit and harder to keep down."

GAP IN TEETH

In a nationally-televised show from New York last week Moore displayed a gap in his teeth when he smiled. Durelle knew the answer to that.

"I knocked his tooth out—an upper right one — when I connected with a left hook."

Asked if Archie left any marks on him Durelle replied:

"Only inside, where my heart is. It was the only thing marked."

Durelle said he'll train differently for the return bout.

"We figured he'd come to me," cited Yvon, "because how often do you see Moore move away from his opponent? But it wouldn't pay if had to go after him and I hadn't trained that way.

"Next time I'll train to go after him and my sparring partners will be guys who know him."

Name Junior All-Star Teams

TORONTO (CP)—The Ontario Hockey Association has announced all-star team members for its second annual Junior A all-star game Jan. 7.

St. Catharines TeePees now lead the loop, 12 points ahead of Peterborough Petes. They played three players on the first all-star team and three on the second.

Peterborough placed two members on the first team and one on the second.

All-star players who are also members of the leading club will play for their own club and will be replaced by second-team members. Members of an alternate squad will replace the second-team promotions.

Past Year in Hollywood Marked by Tragedy, Scandal

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — What a year!

Not in the memory of this reporter has there been a year for Hollywood so packed with news events.

It was a year marked by tragedy. It was also a year of scandal. There is how the top 10 news events appear from this vantage point:

1. The Johnny Stompanato stabbing by Cheryl Crane. The death was more dramatic than any that ever has occurred for a movie. Cheryl, Lana's daughter, was cleared in Stompanato's death.

2. Mike Todd's death in a flaming air crash. The fabled showman was at the peak of his career when his private plane carried him to his death in New Mexico. It was a crushing blow to his wife, Elizabeth Taylor, who was to write an epitaph to the story.

MARRIAGE BREAKS UP

3. The Lis-Eddie-Debbie triangle. Debbie Reynolds, Eddie Fisher, consoled the widow. They even went to Grossinger's, the honeymoon resort where Eddie had wed Debbie Reynolds. Result: Rich with Debbie and Liz in headlines.

4. Tyrone Power's sudden death. The handsome actor died after dueling his last villain in a Madrid movie.

5. The Dominican invasion. Lt.-Gen. Rafael Trujillo Jr., son of the Dominican Republic strongman, made news with his gifts of expensive autos to Kim Novak and Zsa Zsa Gabor.

6. The surprise Oscars for Joanne Woodward and Miyoshi Umeki. The two young girls were given a chance to win moviegoom's top prize.

7. The death of Harry Cohn, who had ruled Columbia with an iron hand.

SIGNIFICANT CHANGE

8. The rise of the millionaire actor. This was no sudden news event, but it was the most significant change within the movie industry. A dozen big stars — Brando, Holden, Wayne, Cooper, Stewart — seized the balance of power from the big studios and could demand fantastic deals.

9. The death of Richard Skelton. Few events in recent Hollywood times so touched the world as the passing from leukemia of Red Skelton's young son.

AT THE BELLE — Andy Griffith and Rita O'Brien in romantic scene from "Onionhead," Warner Bros. production of hilarious story about the Coast Guard, which opens at the Capitol Today, Friday and Saturday at the Belle Theatre, preceded by three choice color treats.

10. The Jayne Mansfield-Mickey Hargitay wedding. This was the wedding of 1958, a year that wasn't notable for its marriages. Jayne did her darndest to make it a glamorous event.

Writer Receives Eloquent Reply to Dramatists' Views

By CHARLES MERCER

NEW YORK (AP) — A while ago we reported the disenchantment of seven past and present prominent Canadian dramatists with the medium. They expressed it to producer David Susskind in a TV interview.

There comes now an eloquent reply to their views in a letter to this department from Frederick Hazlitt Brennan, a Canadian man of entertaining fiction and the chief editor and major script contributor to the TV series, The Life and Legend of Wyatt Earp. Brennan writes:

"Despite the noble disclaimer of (the seven writers) that they abhor prescribing for a minority cause or trying to reform the cultural taste of 180,000,000 Americans, these things are precisely what they are trying to do.

"Why? TV is a medium of mass communication. Sponsors, advertising agencies and TV producers have no obligation to uplift the cultural standards of the American people by means of programs disguised as coastal criticism, satire, 'worthwhile drama' or other intellectual snobberies.

"Indeed, the Federal Communications Commission might very properly object to special pleading on TV wave lengths which are the property—by government and court decision—of all the people.

"TV writers who feel that they have a 'message' can write for special audiences by way of books, the theatre, highbrow magazines, or even a few movie producers. TV is a medium of entertainment and public information. It is not, rightly, a medium for editorializing on the news or for the presentation of intellectual and philosophical opinion.

"In actual practice, TV has done very well when it comes to freedom of speech and expression of opinion. A mass medium which allows Cora Lansbury, Arthur Godfrey, Edward R. Murrow, Chet Huntley . . . have little to say cannot be accused of strict censorship. . . .

"So long as TV sponsors and producers insist that its programs be entertaining or informational—or both—then it will be fulfilling its responsibility to all the people.

"Once TV is persuaded that it should be a propaganda medium for cultural uplift, we are in for serious trouble. Who is to say what is cultural? One man's culture is another man's boredom. And who will decree what is uplifting?

"Really dig this thing, Mercer. You critics may be tired of westerns. But what if you were forced to watch a daily programming of intellectual snob dramas which dealt with the Negro problem, the Jewish problem, the Catholic problem, the Protestant problem, and the adjustment of frustrated longshoremen to the gardens of bearish ballet?"

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

The whoop-la, battle-cries, cheers and moans of the moppet hockey infantry have been resounding in cities and towns blest with artificial ice for the past month.

The city-slicker, puck-punching half-pints get into organized action some time before their cousins from the back fifties, but that doesn't mean they're any better or more enthusiastic.

Thanks to the unsung heroes of town, village, hamlet and settlement, where they have to rely on the ice-making vagaries of King Winter for playing surfaces, the youngsters from the outlying districts eventually come into their own. And not a few champions are spawned in these areas and communities where artificial ice is not yet available.

Due to the far-reaching tentacles of the Ontario Minor Hockey Association, rural teams and leagues are "ready to go" practically the minute ice conditions permit such-picking activities.

That is the way it has been for years through the OMHA mushroomed from a small compact body of boys-minded men into the largest organization of its kind in the world. That is the way it is this year.

During the early part of the season when artificial-ice cards swing into action, OMHA executives quietly organize the activities of the youngsters who have to wait for the natural kind. And due to the efficient administrative efforts of these men in co-operation with coaches and managers, there is little waiting once the ice is ready.

"Ice-er Canada," as this part of Ontario is dubbed by western members of the OMHA, is fortunate in having two of the most hard-working, efficient execs handling its minor hockey problems.

It is estimated that some 4,000 youngsters from squirt to juvenile will be playing organized hockey between Peterborough and Gananoque.

This number includes the cities of Kingston and Belleville, and various towns which have their own minor hockey associations. The hinterland hockey is handled by team coaches and managers under the supervision of the district OMHA executive members, Doug Patterson of Stirling and Albert Watkins of Peterborough.

There two gentlemen lost no time administering teams and leagues in their various areas, during the Indian summer season. As a result the part of Eastern Ontario ranging from Wellington on the south to Bancroft on the north, with dozens of intermediate points, is now completely organized.

Schedules in bantam, midget and juvenile classifications have been drawn up, and some of the leagues will see action as early as December 25th. A total of 109 games has been scheduled in these three classes. Group schedules will be followed by group playoffs starting February 1st.

Mr. Watkins, who is chairman of the OMHA Rules and Referees Committee, has issued some well-intended words of advice and warning to referees in particular and everybody in general.

He points out that no new rules have been laid down, but present ones must be enforced to the letter if minor hockey is to remain clean with a minimum of injuries.

Boarding and high-sticking are two of the major offenses, Mr. Watkins says, and of the two boarding is the more serious as many high-sticking offences occur when players raise their sticks to defend themselves against being thrown into the boards.

He says a CAHA rule gives a referee all the authority he needs to stop boarding. The referee can use his discretion with regard to the extent of the penalty.

To referees, Mr. Watkins says: "If a player is boarded you immediately give a penalty. Some coaches will be unhappy, but the rule must be enforced if we are to stop the mounting toll of injuries."

He stresses the point that all referees should study the rules until they know them thoroughly, so they can go on the ice prepared to referee a game strictly according to the book.

Lindsay Leads Hawks To 5-2 Victory Over Bruins

Scrappy, Scarfaced Veteran Scores Two Goals and Assist For First Win in 8 Starts

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Ted Lindsay, whose well-known leadership qualities haven't been too prominent lately, reasserted his old fiery self Wednesday in leading his Chicago Black Hawks to a 5-2 win over Boston Bruins.

The scrappy, scarfaced veteran of 13 National Hockey League seasons scored two goals and got one assist in the game, his highest scoring outbursts so far this season.

Lindsay always was a leader. At various times hockey's highest-scoring left wing has led the NHL in penalties, goals, and assists. Two years ago with Detroit Red Wings he scored 26 goals and 35 assists to set a season's record for left wingers.

SHIPPED OFF

The next season he was shipped off to last - place Chicago apparently for leading his Detroit teammates a little too much—he incurred the wrath of management by scorning the head of a player's union.

At Chicago last year, Lindsay scored a respectable 15 goals and got 24 assists, but just couldn't work up enough spark to help the sagging Hawks.

Wednesday, he did.

Early in the first period, he put Chicago ahead by bouncing the puck off the skin of Bruin defenceman Fern Flaman to score his eighth goal of the season.

THE ENGINEER

He engineered Ed Litzenberger's power-play goal to give the Hawks a 2-0 lead. Roc Murphy made it 3-0 before the first period ended, but Boston's Gar Gendron tallied twice in the second period while Chicago's Elmer Vasko sat out a five-minute penalty.

Glen Skov clinched it for Chicago with his first goal of the year and got in on the insurance goal by flipping the puck out to Lindsay in the third period.

The three - point spree gives Lindsay record for the season of four goals, 13 assists for 17 points, still far back in the standings.

The win was an important morale-booster for the Hawks. It was their first in eight games. They had a string of four ties and three losers.

Probe Fails To Change Olson Victory

FRESNO (AP) — California's Athletic Commission has investigated former middleweight champion Bobo Olson's TKO victory Tuesday night but it appeared the verdict will stand.

Olson, now 30 and fighting as a light heavyweight, landed a low blow at 1:23 of the fifth round against Tommy Villa of San Jose.

Before Johnny Reno took a point away from Olson's score and ordered a five-minute rest for Villa, But the Spaniard could he wouldn't continue and Olson was given victory by a technical knockout—his third straight on a comeback trail.

But Olson's $2,250 purse and the one of $590 for Villa were held up pending the investigation of whether the referee was correct in giving the fight to Olson.

Executive officer Jack Urch said the commission is checking with parties involved in the fight but the referee's decision stands and it would be "unusual procedure" to reverse it. He said nothing has been found so far to warrant any reversal.

Macs Defeat Chicoutimi 8-4; Wiener Leads Attack With 3

CHICOUTIMI, Quebec — The Belleville McFarlands, smarting from two setbacks at the hands of Quebec League teams, banded the Chicoutimi Saguenecens an 8-4 defeat here last night to close out their three-game exhibition tour of the professional loop.

"Winnie" Wiener, who has paced the Allan Cup champions' scoring effort throughout the series climaxed his puck-dunking feats with three goals against the Saguenecens. Fleet Coegan added a pair with Floyd Crawford, Eddie Marineau and Jean-Paul Lamirande scoring singles.

Lamirande, who was cleared by professional teams the other day and is now a full-fledged McFarland, was impressive in his debut with the Canadian champions. He makes his first appearance in Belleville tomorrow night against the Cornwall Cheviles.

The McFarlands raced into a first-period 3-1 lead and never looked backward. They outscored the homesters 5-2 in the middle session and held a 2-1 edge in the final frame.

Again the clubs shied away from injury hazards and played a clean fast hockey with only three minor penalties handed out, two of them to the Saguenecens.

The Brown - Hildebrand - McLellan line was again a standout although it was given a stiff run for the money by the Crawford, Marineau, Marineau trio.

Hildebrand's line accounted for four of the first goals with the playing coach getting two assists and McLellan three for a total of nine points.

The other trio was only a point behind, Crawford getting a goal and two assists, Eddie Marineau one and one and Keith MacDonald being credited with three helpers.

Lucas, Caron, Smrke, a brother to Lou, and Amadio were the Chicoutimi goaltenders.

Lucas put the homesters one up after three minutes of play but the Macs upped the pace, and their offensive with Goegan squaring matters two minutes later. Brown made it 2-1 with six minutes left and Goegan scored his second goal of the game with Crawford and MacDonald helping.

Crawford stretched the margin in the second frame but Chicoutimi's Caron got that one back and Amadia added another within two minutes of each other. Brown's second goal gave the Macs a two-goal lead again and Lamirande took McLellan's pass to stretch the gap to 6-3.

Eddie Marineau added another in the third frame with Wiener Brown getting his hat trick before Stan Smrke cut the veterans' margin to 8-4 to end the scoring.

Riders Seek Boston Star

OTTAWA (CP)—Don Allard of the Ottawa Rough Riders knows within a week or 10 days whether he will return to play football here next season, says general manager Jim McCaffrey. The 23-year-old former Boston College quarterback for three years left Ottawa Wednesday with the Big Four team's offer in his pocket after what Mr. McCaffrey described as "pleasant discussions." Terms of the offer were not disclosed.

Ottawa also has strings out for quarterback Randy Duncan, top college draft choice in the United States this year.

McCaffrey said the club already has spoken to Duncan and will invite him to Ottawa for talks after he leads his Iowa State University teammates into the Rose Bowl New Year's Day.

Duncan was first draft choice of the NFL Green Bay Packers, while Washington Redskins made Allard their top choice.

McCaffrey said that if Allard agrees to Ottawa's terms, the club likely would talk to Duncan before signing him.

Rough Riders, who lost out to Hamilton Tiger-Cats in the Big Four final this year, wound up the season with Canadian quarterback Russ Jackson after releasing import Hal Ledyard in second string. Ledyard joined Ottawa from Chattanooga University three years ago.

Perkins Defeats Mexican Champ

WASHINGTON (AP) — Young Eddie Perkins of Chicago opened a mean cut near the left eye of Baby Vasquez and won the mini-Mexican lightweight champion on a technical knockout at 2:40 of the seventh round Wednesday night.

Perkins, a rapidly rising lightweight, weighed 133½ to 133¾ for Vasquez.

British Writers Back Kramer In Tennis War

LONDON (AP) — Professional promoter Jack Kramer found most British sports writers ready to back him in his lawn tennis war with the bosses of the amateur game in Australia.

The Australian Lawn Tennis Association has banned the American promoter from using courts under its jurisdiction. The Australians want the ban extended to amateur courts all over the world.

Basil Reay, secretary of the International Lawn Tennis Federation, said Wednesday: "We can do nothing till we have heard from Australia. Until I get word from the Australians I cannot express an opinion."

But British sports writers found plenty of time and space to express their opinions.

MAN CRAZY

"This ban on Kramer is crazy," said the Daily Sketch. "If they want Kramer to win the war," said Peter Wilson in the Daily Mirror, "Kramer ban would make problems," commented the Daily Telegraph. "Kramer ban is foolish," said the Daily Mail.

British writers claimed that a complete break between the amateur and professional game would make money out of the amateur sport and make it more difficult for the amateurs to continue.

"Almost all the top players are already professionals," Laurie Jade."

Browns' Morale High for Game

CLEVELAND (AP) — Coach Paul Brown may have problems but team morale, he says, is not one of them.

Asked about the mental attitude of Cleveland Browns, sharpening up their attack for Sunday's do-or-die National Football League game against New York Giants, Brown said:

"We are doing. I'm not worried about. Sure the fellows felt badly about losing but they know they played a darn fine football game."

Browns lost 13-10 to the Giants Sunday in a game that forced a playoff engagement to decide the eastern conference champion. The winner meets Baltimore Colts for the NFL title Dec. 28.

Brown joined the Giants in hoping for a dry field at New York's Yankee Stadium. His reasoning sounded similar to that of Vince Lombardi, offensive coach for the Giants.

"We have more team speed . . . so a bad field hurts us more," said Brown. "I believe the Giants are a better team."

Varsity Defeats Dunlops 6-5 In Upset Exhibition Game; Champs' Castoff Gets Winner

TORONTO (CP) — University of Toronto Blues enhanced their bid for a trip to the 1960 Olympics with a 6-5 upset win over the world champion Whitby Dunlops in an exhibition hockey game Wednesday night.

Blues, who have dominated the Senior Intercollegiate League for the last few years, threw a powerhouse defence against Dunlops, leading in the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A series, after grabbing an early 3-0 lead.

Wren Blair, Whitby manager, said the Varsity club is "better than a lot of senior teams in Canada right now."

For Varsity's sake we would like to play them again in January. I think we'd do better next time."

The Blues hope the win will convince the Canadian Olympic Committee the club is good enough to represent Canada in hockey competition at the Olympics at Squaw Valley, Calif., in 1960.

SCORES NEAR END

Ron Casey scored the game - winning goal by beating Whitby's highly-rated goaltender, John Henderson, with barely three minutes left in the game.

The more experienced Whitby forwards outshot the Blues 36-31 but didn't seem to have the same steam in their drives.

Dune Brodie of Oshawa, playing with a torn calf ligament, paced the student attack with three goals. Others went to Dave Stephen, Casey and Howie Roth.

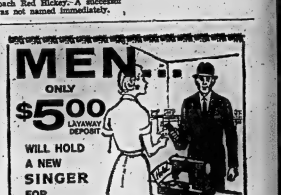
Whitby scorers were Pete Babando, with three, Bob Attersley and Sandy Air.

American League Develops Into Three-Way Race

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

With Cleveland Barons on a hot streak which has produced 12 victories in their last 14 games, the battle for first place in the American Hockey League has developed into a three-team affair.

The Barons moved to within three points of the second-place Hershey Bears and four of the pace-setting Buffalo Bisons Wednesday night when they defeated the Bears 6-2. The victory was Cleveland's fourth straight.



Bob Barlow scored two goals to lead the Barons. Gordie Vejpravs, Don Hogan, Bob Robertson and Mike Labadie got singles.

Hec Lalonde and Danny Nykoluk tallied for Hershey.

In the first period Bob Bailey of Cleveland and Larry Zeidel of Hershey were banished from the game when they slashed at each other with their sticks. Bailey suffered a cut across the face.

STIRLING

Lodge Holds Successful Yule Tea and Bake Sale

STIRLING — On Saturday afternoon members of Stirling IOOF No. 353, Stirling, sponsored a successful afternoon tea and home cooking sale at the IOOF hall. Mrs. Charlotte St.

The room decorated the banquet hall with Christmas regalia and evergreen boughs, and the entrance door was tied with silvery red bows of crepe paper. Little evergreen trees dotted the lawn and were sentinels of welcome to the large group who attended the tea. The men put in several hours of work to make a success of their first venture.

The various booths were decorated on the Christmas theme and the dining table was centred with a pretty arrangement of globes and holly. Each quarter table was decorated with a novel arrangement of globes and small gifts covered all the table decorations were made and loaned by Mrs. R. A. Patterson. Red and white tiered tea tapers added a glow to the scene.

GUESTS WELCOMED

The guests were welcomed in the upper hall by Noble Grand Charles Fargey while Ray Bird acted as treasurer for the afternoon.

The tea room was convened by Roy Tucker and his assistants were Harry Vandervoort, Grant Montgomery, Ralph Ultman, Farley Parnell, Harold Johnson, and Allen McDonell.

Past Grand Robert Rulin invited the guests to the tea room where dainty refreshments were served.

The kitchen was convened by Charles and Marion Carter with Mrs. Percy Ulman, Mrs. Tom Hoskins, and Earl Wallace, assisting.

The home baking booth was laden with pies, plum pudding, fresh baked buns, layer cakes, chocolate cakes, date loaves, various kinds of tarts, cookies, and other mouthwatering goodies. The convenors were Earl Fox and Guy Bradshaw, and their assistants were Gordon Richardson, Bruce Stapley, and Phil Conley.

The farmers' corner displayed rosy apples, cheese, baskets of potatoes, turnips, parsnips, carrots, several dozen eggs, cream, jam, maple syrup and pickles. There were also a few spruce Christmas wreaths and such, for sale.

The afternoon was a success and the proceeds gratifying. Those who planned this unique affair are grateful for all the assistance they received and for all who patronized the tea and sale.

MERRY

Norman Jacques said strike pay has been "running close to $100,000 a week" and the union isn't in a position to hold a party for children.

The Salvation Army plans to distribute 500 Christmas hampers to needy families at a cost of $3,000 but there is still no sign here of any aid from the Canadian Labor Congress, which has said it will act as a clearing house for donations from individual unions.

OUTSIDE AID

Father Delaney said business firms, individuals, church organizations and unions have sent lots of food and clothing and $10,000 in cash directly to the relief depot and it has gone to about 4,000 families.

"We're just providing the bare necessities of life."

Father Delaney said strikers' families are doubling up apartments. Some homes were unheated two or three days at a time in 10-below-zero weather. Bread and potatoes were the basis of many meals.

At one school a small boy stole a classmate's lunch because he didn't have one of his own.

Another Storm Will Moderate Cold on Friday

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

A mild spell that brought warmer temperatures Wednesday was nipped in the bud Wednesday night as the mercury dipped below freezing point in most Canadian communities.

The weather forecaster in Toronto said a series of storms was travelling across the country from southern Alberta through the Great Lakes to the Maritimes.

Warmer temperatures accompany each storm but following cold air quickly brings a return to the December deep-freeze, he said.

In Quebec, today's high was expected to be between 10 and 20 degrees with light snowfalls. Cold air was expected to lay over most of Ontario tonight. Temperatures in the northern parts were below zero and milder in the south.

Today's forecast said the next storm, now in Alberta, will move through Southern Ontario Friday bringing another 1 to 2 g temperatures and snow to southern sections, followed by sharp temperature drops and clearing skies at night. In the north the snow will be lacking and temperatures will remain below zero.

STIRLING

St. Andrew's Holds Candlelight Service

STIRLING — On Sunday evening St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Stirling, was lighted with electric candles. Their yellow rays shone from the window sand from a "Star in the East" at the centre of the church. A large evergreen tree was lighted with blue bulbs and the yuletide decorations were enhanced with a replica of the "Babe in the Manger."

Mrs. Harry Morrow officiated at the console of the organ and a choir of 18 voices presented the lovely cantata, "The Dawn of Christmas."

Mr. Clayton Tummon was narrator and unfolded the story to the audience. This was interspersed with well-known Christmas poems all linked with the cantata music. Several Christmas carols were sung at the service and the pastor, Rev. W. H. V. Walker, gave a brief Christmas message.

There was a large attendance at this evening service which included visitors from many other churches both in the village and in rural areas.

The pastor expressed deep gratitude to all who had in any way assisted with this special candlelight service.

Foxboro

FOXBORO — Mr. and Mrs. Everett Hoard and Johnstown, spent Sunday afternoon with their grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Hollinger.

Mrs. Evelyn Burke and daughter left on Monday for Toronto, where she will enter hospital again. Her daughter will remain here home in Edmonton.

Mr. and Mrs. Bill Armstrong and Darlene spent the weekend in Toronto with relatives.

The annual Christmas concert was held at the school auditorium on Wednesday afternoon.

WELLINGTON

United Church Presents Fine Yuletide Contata

WELLINGTON — Wreaths, baskets of pine boughs and bright-red poinsettias in the choir loft, lighted white candles in each window, and four cedar trees glowing with colored lights around the choir loft base formed an appropriate setting for the annual Christmas Cantata in the United Church on Sunday evening.

The church was fairly well filled as many visitors were noticed in the congregation. Much credit for this enjoyable musical evening is given to Mrs. Jack McNeill, organist and choir leader.

Mrs. C. E. Freeman read the Christmas story which was interspersed with carol singing. Four boys of the junior choir received the offering.

The processional carol, "As With Gladness Men of Old," ushered in the junior choir girls in their pretty blue gowns, followed by six well-dressed young men, and the senior choir in their wine-colored gowns and mortar boards, who wended their ways to their appointed places.

The program follows: junior choir, "O Little Town of Bethlehem"; carol, "Hark, the Herald Angels Sing"; senior choir, "The Angels Song"; senior choir, "Sleep, My Saviour, Sleep"; solo by Reg. Bishop; and quartet by Messrs. C. D. Tripp, Reg. Bishop, Ed. Marshall, Bob Howell, "Because He Loved Us So"; carol, "O Come Upon the Midnight Clear"; junior choir, "Joy to the World"; senior choir, "There Were Shepherds"; solo by Reg. Bishop; junior and senior choirs, "As Lately We Watched"; carol, "The First Noel"; se- lection by the junior choir, "Christmas"; carol, "O Little Town of Bethlehem"; solo, "Bethlehem City," by Marilyn Brimley; senior choir, "Sleep, My Saviour, Sleep"; solo by Reg. Bishop; quartet by Messrs. C. D. Tripp, Reg. Child"; duet, Mrs. Allan Pettigill and Mrs. Reg. Bishop, and the senior choir as "Gather at the Manger"; senior choir, "Peace on Earth", with solo part by Doug. Trumble; carol recessional, "O Come, All Ye Faithful".

As the last member of the choir disappeared down the steps to the Sunday School room, one realized that all their many weeks of preparation had certainly provided a one hour and a half of highest entertainment to be found anywhere.

Favors Port For Canada Through Alaska

WASHINGTON (CP) — Ernest Gruening, Democratic senator elect from Alaska, said Tuesday he sees no reason why northwest Canada should not benefit through the Alaska Panhandle to a "free port" on the 124 Second Ocean.

He added that he felt Canada should be willing to make "some reciprocal arrangements" for Alaska in exchange. He did not elaborate.

Gruening also told his first press conference here he hoped some arrangements can be reached with Canada so there will be no obstacle" to the development in Alaska of water power potential that originates in the Yukon.

Tired, Draggy, Worn-Out, Full of Aches and Pains

This Woman Tells of Grand Results She Got by Taking Syntona.

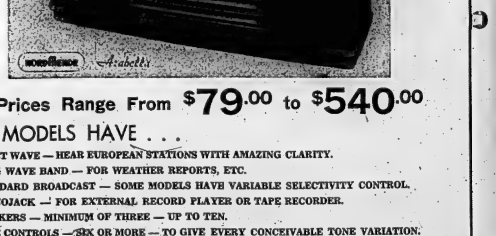
"I suffered with faulty digestion and constipation and I became badly rundown, said Mrs. Eleanor Farris, 103½ Briscoe St. London, Ontario.

"Almost everything I ate gave me large quantities of gas and a heavy bloating feeling. I would get bad attacks of heartburn and a sick, nauseated feeling. I also suffered from rheumatic pains in my arms, shoulders, and muscles, and many days I just felt tired, draggy and full of aches and pains.

MRS. ELEANOR FARRIS

So Much Better Now!

"I decided to try Syntona and it is almost unbelievable how much better I am since. I've been taking Syntona now for a month and I have no distress afterwards. My bowels are more regular, I sleep better at night and am free of headaches. Also the aches and pains are relieved, and I don't feel tired and worn out as I did before.



Thousands of men and women rely on Syntona for minor complaints of the stomach, kidneys, liver and bowels. Syntona helps to restore better digestion, the intestinal system, to aids in the elimination of excess acids and impurities, relieves rheumatic pains and promotes a general feeling of better health.

Syntona is sold and recommended in Belleville by Dale Drugrie.

CAMPBELLFORD

2 Stores Entered By Safecrackers, No Cash Taken

CAMPBELLFORD — Two Campbellford stores were broken into early Monday morning but the thieves were reported to have got no cash.

Transport driver John Bull surprised a man, presumably a look-out, in the laneway at the rear of the IGA store at approximately 4.30 a.m.

Bull asked the man what he was doing in the laneway and was told, "A few of us boys are playing around."

The thieves broke into the IGA store and ripped a safe containing $6,000 in cash and cheques out of the wall. They used tools stolen from a CNR shed at Campbellford, but failed to open it.

They made a second break-in at Pearsall Motors, 200 feet away, and removed two acetylene tanks and other welding equipment. It is believed they were using the equipment on the safe when the look-out was surprised.

Entry to the IGA store was made by forcing a rear loading chute. A rear door was forced at Pearsall's Motors.

The metal casting was ripped off the back and one side, but the thieves could not get the safe open. They also broke off the handle bearing the combinations.

Chief Constable Sam Baird and Constable Clarence Duncalfe are investigating, assisted by the Provincial Police.

DESERONTO

Santa Claus Parade Best In Many Years

DESERONTO — The Santa Claus parade, held in Deseronto last Saturday, was one of the best and most successful held in these parts in many years. There were two bands in attendance, adding considerably to the enjoyment of the occasion. One of the bands was the "Marcella Debs" from Picton, a band composed entirely of teen-age girls who were paid many compliments on their excellent playing and marching. The other band was the Hasty Pees trumpet band, which displayed its usual fine form. A goodly number of floats depicting many fictional characters and scenes of Christmas gave the crowd a great deal of enjoyment. The parade was completed by the characters in costume and the always enjoyable clowns.

After the parade had passed through the main streets of the town, the children were treated to candy by the jovial old Santa.

An extremely large crowd of townspeople and visitors from the surrounding area lined the whole course of the parade. A great deal of credit is due the Chamber of Commerce for the efforts.

Turkeys Reported Plentiful With Prices Slightly Below Levels of Last Season

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Turkeys, traditional Christmas fare in many Canadian homes, are reported plentiful this year with prices slightly below last year's level.

Growers in some provinces expect prices will drop a few cents a pound more just before Christmas when storekeepers attempt to clear out stocks, a Canadian Press Survey shows.

In the Maritimes prices range from 45 to 65 cents a pound while in Quebec province a medium-sized bird runs about 55 cents a pound.

Ontario prices range from 49 to 59 cents. Good birds in Winnipeg and Regina average about 45 cents and are about eight cents less at Edmonton. On the Pacific coast prices range from 55 to 65 cents a pound.

In many provinces chicken, preferred by small families because turkeys are so large, is the same price as turkey. Some Toronto supermarkets are cutting turkeys in halves for small families but say they don't expect any great sales increase that way.

Some shoppers are buying goose instead of turkey for their Christmas table. Prices are slightly lower than those for turkey.

Housewives in Ontario and British Columbia prefer turkeys weighing 12 pounds while most Maritimers like them between eight and 14 pounds. Popular sizes in Quebec are from 12 to 18 pounds. There is a wider average on the Prairies — from nine to 18 pounds.

Vancouver Island growers have about 90,000 birds ready for market on the island and about 325,000 for distribution to the rest of British Columbia. Supply is reported ample with imports from the Prairies expected to fill local gaps.

Quebec produced 1,218,000 turkeys for market this year, compared with 980,000 last year, the federal agriculture department reports. And about 3,750,000 pounds have been imported from other provinces. The main demand is for smaller birds and there may be a surplus of heavies.

CAS WANTS LAW TO GIVE BLOOD IF NECESSARY

Will Submit Request To Legislature

TORONTO (CP)—The Toronto Children's Aid Society wants the Ontario Government to legislate out of existence the right held by parents to refuse blood transfusions for their children.

Children's aid counsel R. D. Poupore said Thursday night the request for legislation to this end will be submitted to the government when a law would mean any child could be given transfusions without parental consent provided two doctors swore that death was inevitable if the blood was not forthcoming.

Mr. Poupore said the society decided to act following the Lesley Lynn Campbell case in which the infant daughter of a Jehovah's Witness sought a court order to only after a court order made her a temporary ward of the society.

WAS NEAR DEATH

The child, born with a serious blood disorder, was said to have been near death when the court acted to override her parents' refusal to permit the transfusions on the grounds they would violate religious beliefs.

The board of directors of the Children's Aid Society met after a submission to the government at a meeting next month.

Mr. Poupore said: "Religion should not enter into this at all. It's the welfare of the child that counts.

"We would like to see legislation that would alter the administration of transfusions to children in cases of extreme emergency on the signed certificate of two doctors, who would swear the children would die if they did not receive transfusions."

He said the legislation as the society sees it would eliminate the need of having to call in the Children's aid or the parents to proceed with treatment in emergencies.

HOW QUESTIONS ACTION

However, Glen How, counsel for the society's Witnesses and a member of the religious sect himself, said it was questionable whether justice was done by the special court convened in the Hospital for Sick Children in the Campbell case.

Mr. How urged government and welfare authorities to adopt a hands-off policy in cases involving the children of his religious cult.

He added that welfare officials had no right to accuse Lori Lynn's parents of neglect merely because they refused to agree to a specific type of medical treatment.

Mr. How said Judge Lorne Stewart, who presided at the hospital hearing, is a United Church minister — whose qualification to sit on such a case were questioned.

Ban Gift Exchange

WATERLOO (CP) — Waterloo public school trustees Thursday night banned gift exchanges in school classrooms.

Oshawa Bus Employees Want To Buy System

OSHAWA (CP)—Employees of the bus division of the Oshawa Railway Company decided Thursday night to attempt to buy the Oshawa bus system on a co-operative basis.

The ORC, a subsidiary of Canadian National Railways, will drop its franchise at the end of 1959. City council earlier this week decided to recommend to Ontario Municipal Board that the franchise be awarded to J. J. Dickson of Windsor.

The employees, number less about 90, said they were not concerned with personal profit but only job security.

The city's proposed agreement with Mr. Dickson set a maximum of $37,000 in annual subsidy.

Train Derailed Near Sarnia

SARNIA (CP) — Five freight cars and a caboose of a 48-car westbound Canadian National Railways freight train were derailed Thursday night just west of nearby Mandaumin.

A wreck was averted by about one minute when an eastbound freight was brought to a halt by the crew of the westbound train, out flagging on the tracks.

No one was injured. CNR crewmen said the derailment was caused when a wheel on t...e 21st freight car, loaded with machinery, broke.

English Grandmother Going Blind To Get Glimpse of 5 Grandchildren

MONTREAL (CP) — A grey-haired Yorkshire grandmother who is going blind to collect a precious Christmas gift — the first blurred sight of her five Canadian grandchildren.

Mrs. Elizabeth Hodgson, 63, who recently learned she will be totally blind in a few months, arrived here last night aboard a BOAC flight from Manchester, England, and a few hours later boarded a train from Montreal to near Kingston, with her pretty, red-eyed daughter, Mrs. J. A. Jones.

Both women wept a little as they got their walking room at Montreal airport for the five-hour bus trip to Glenburnie where Mr. Jones and the children were waiting.

While she waited for her daughter to arrive at the airport by bus from Kingston to join her, Mrs. Hodgson smiled wearily and patiently answered reporters' questions. Her eyes, wide behind thick-lensed glasses, blinked as camera bulbs flashed.

"It is a calm person by nature," she told reporters. "I'm a little tired but I don't mind waiting for my daughter because I've had such a pleasant trip, except over on the plane, oh the...beautiful sunshine!"

Mrs. Hodgson is able to distinguish human figures, she said, and could appreciate the difference in light when the plane penetrated the fog clouds around Manchester and reached fair weather.

Mrs. Hodgson is to stay about three months in Glenburnie.

Her trip is a Christmas present from her Canadian grandchildren—Patricia, 11; Carol, 10; Allen, 8; John, 4, and Pamela 3.

She was to see John and Pamela for the first time. She saw the others when they visited England with their mother seven years ago.

Atlas Brings Space Travel And TV Spies in Sky Nearer

NEW YORK (AP) — Atlas' triumph brings human space flight and astounding space laboratories a big step closer.

Spurred from wellnigh secrecy, it could spur the Russians to push harder and faster in their space plans.

But 14½ months ago, man still was earthbound. Then Sputnik I startled and shocked the Western World.

Now the United States possesses the heaviest as well as the most satellites. It has among two probes nearly one-third the way to the moon.

Temporarily, at least, the U.S. leads.

But Russia could play the next trump soon. Indeed, some space experts are puzzled why she hasn't done something spectacular since the 1½-ton Sputnik III soared into May.

The main significance of Atlas is in advancing the ability accurately to thrust big and heavy satellites into space.

It is big enough to carry men and big enough to watch the world's weather in the making through TV eyes.

Atlas, the smaller rockets staged atop it, also could launch instrumented probes investigating Venus and Mercury or going into orbit as artificial planets of the sun. Shots for Venus and Mars are among U.S. plans.

Much hard work remains to be done.

The U.S. must learn how to recover the protective, well-stocked capsule that can sustain his life within a satellite. Re-entry and medical problems of survival are being vigorously studied.

Rockets and controls must become reliable enough to give any volunteer a really good chance of making the round trip.

Russia already has flung two dogs 280 miles high within a rocket which fell to earth. The dogs parachuted safely within a capsule.

There are guesses the Russians have been trying some kind of space ventures but failed.

The Soviets said Sputnik I succeeded on the first try. But so did Atlas the orbiter.

That may be giving the Russians some concern — that the guidance and control system in a military rocket performed so well.

Report Frost Planning Major Cabinet Shuffle

TORONTO (CP)—The Star says Premier Frost expects to announce Monday a cabinet shuffle that will involve seven members and four senior cabinet posts.

The paper says the senior cabinet posts of treasury, lands and mines, mines and public works, now held by two ministers, will have their own cabinet ministers.

The story says James Maloney, member for Renfrew, and George Gardiner, member for Port Arthur, will likely take over the posts of mines and public works respectively.

The paper says James Allan, senior cabinet minister and deputy premier, will retain the treasury post and relinquish the public works portfolio in which he has been acting minister since William Grieinger resigned.

J. W. Spooner, mines minister, will give up his post to become lands and forests minister, the story adds. Mr. Spooner has been acting in the department since the resignation of Clare Mapleston.

The paper says Provincial Secretary George Dunbar, who at 80 is the oldest member of the cabinet, is expected to go to the St. Lawrence Development Confirmation.

POSSIBLE CHOICES —

It was also reported that John Yaremko, member for Toronto Bellwoods, James Auld, 37, one of the youngest members of the government and a member of the Mr. Lawrence cabinet, or John P. Roberts, member for London North, are possible choices for cabinet posts.

Mr. Yaremko, now minister without portfolio, is expected to become provincial secretary, Mr. Auld is slated to head the provincial parks integration board and Mr. Roberts may become attorney-general.

Douglas Jung Brings English Bride to Ottawa

OTTAWA (CP)—Douglas Jung, 34, first Chinese-Canadian member of Parliament, has returned to the capital from Europe with an English bride.

He was married Dec. 6 at Stanmore, Middlesex, England to Joy Calderwood, daughter of a former mayor of Harrow, England, and a director of an automotive and airline equipment company.

The couple arrived here Monday.

"We're on our honeymoon, trying to furnish a rented house and mailing Christmas cards all at the same time," Mr. Jung said in an interview at his Commons office.

"My first job was to take my wife shopping to get her some warm clothes."

TEACHER IN B.C.

Mr. Jung, Progressive Conservative MP for Vancouver Centre, met his bride in Vancouver about four years ago when she was teaching at a public school there.

"I met her playing tennis," Mr. Jung said simply. "She's a very good tennis partner."

Mrs. Calderwood returned to England about two years ago and the romance was continued by "long distance correspondence," Mr. Jung said.

AT PARIS MEETING

He went to a meeting of the NATO youth conference at Paris Nov. 22 to 28 and then went to his future bride's home and the marriage date was set.

Mrs. Jung, a brunette, has not yet met her husband's parents, who live in Victoria.

Mr. Jung said he plans to remain in Ottawa until the end of the parliamentary session ending Jan. 15 and then go to Vancouver.

Talks About Putting Man Aboard Another "Moon" To Be Sent To Venus, Mars

'Moon' Estimated to Stay Aloft for Twenty Days

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. rocket men have hurled a four-ton satellite into orbit around the earth in another stride toward outer space and man's mastery there.

The feat Thursday night gave the U.S. the biggest known man-made object now swinging around the planet. The new pullman car-size satellite exceeds the 2,919 pounds of Russia's Sputnik III launched last May 15. It encompasses the bulk of the Soviet carrier rocket which went separately into orbit but plunged to its death December 7.

But more significant from the rocket men's viewpoint are two other features.

The space traveller, dubbed Operation Score, carries two-way communications which promise untold practical benefits for the future.

And it was pointed into its path by an internal guidance system, rather than being sent on a preset course like a bullet—a long step toward true space navigation.

Triumphant over the success of their project, American scientists quickly raised their space sights. They began talking about putting a man aboard another such vehicle and sending it to Venus or Mars.

President Eisenhower called it "a distinct step forward — which opens new opportunities to the United States and mankind." The defence department hailed the feat from the peaceful aspects of launching a satellite the size of a Pullman railway car.

But early comment from members of Congress indicated a preference to dwell on what it means in military terms.

The Soviet Union first told its people about the Atlas eight hours after the first announcement in Washington. Moscow radio broadcast it in both Russian and English to tell of the missile advance without comment.

Late evenings on Britain's biggest newspapers revamped their front pages to carry the news.

TELLS DIPLOMATS

Eisenhower broke the news at a White House state dinner for diplomats.

The Atlas intercontinental ballistic missile was launched at 6:02 p.m. EST Thursday from Cape Canaveral, Fla. The whole thing, 85 feet long and 10 feet wide, went into orbit.

It is the biggest known man-made object swinging around the globe. Its weight, 8,700 pounds and 8,800 pounds, nearly trebles the 2,919 pounds of third Soviet Sputnik III, fired last May 15.

Sputnik III's rocket, variously estimated to weigh between two and five tons, trailed it until because of friction Dec. 2.

The Atlas' orbit girdles the earth every 100 minutes at altitudes varying between 118 to 625 miles. It is within a maximum latitude of 32 degrees north and 32 degrees south of the equator.

Most of the United States can see it, flashing across the sky especially at dusk and in the southern states. Its estimated life aloft is 20 days.

Radio signals for tracking purposes are coming from the satellite.

Picture was made from a distance of approximately two miles. (AP Wirephoto).

THE CANADIAN PRESS

It's a space age Christmas for Canadians, with a host of gifts ranging from satellite sets, moon rocket and flying saucers among the most popular purchases for shoppers.

The Canadian Toy Manufacturers Association says mediumpriced playthings are more popular than ever, and sales may reach $80,000,000 in retail value.

A Canadian Press survey shows youngsters can expect some of these things from Santa this year: Do-it-yourself missile sets; a Japanese-made transistor radio shaped like a missile with an earplug receiver phone, dolls with well-stocked wardrobes including high-heeled shoes, girdles and brassieres, a radio-controlled toy tug, and toy bears that blow bubbles, rabbits that drink soda pop, elephants that play drums and dancing denizens of all kinds of gifts.

But no matter how popular the toys, mechanical contraptions are, rootin'-tootin' revolver and rifle outfits seem the most popular purchases for boys.

On the adult side, sales clerks at Winnipeg say men are not so bashful about buying lingerie for themselves as they used to be. Lingerie, furs, cosmetics and jewelry top the gifts men buy for women, and men will still get dressing gowns, slippers, shirts, socks and ties from their women.

Appliances such as electric polishers, cleaners, and dishwashers rank high in gifts for the housewives.

In Ontario stores are staying open longer and hiring more help to cope with a predicted five- to 10-per-cent increase in Yule spending. Cameras and high fidelity record players are popular gifts.

Inco Strike Settlement Is Reached

TORONTO (CP) — A settlement was reached today in the International Nickel Company strike.

TORONTO (CP)—Peace talks in the nearly 7-month International Nickel Company of Canada strike were adjourned until 12.30 p.m. today after a one-hour morning session.

The 90-minute recess in negotiations between the company and the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers (ind.) was announced by chief conciliation officer Louis Fine. He refused to elaborate.

The union and company negotiators also declined comment as they left the Ontario labor department offices.

Earlier, they had spent 20 minutes around the same conference table. The union spent the bulk of a 15 minutes separate conference with Mr. Fine and Labor Minister Daley.

The fourth day in this third government attempt to end the strike, now in its 8th day, had been set for 10 a.m. Conciliators note yet although neither side so far has given any official indication it is prepared to abandon its stand on the wage dispute which caused the walkout.

Union negotiator Albert Roulston of Sudbury said Thursday a board when the strike started and said he would keep it until the strike ended, caused comment today when he appeared at the talks chairwoman.

Canada Ready To Resume Geneva Talks

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Diefenbaker, commenting today on the state of East-West conference on prevention of surprise attacks, said Thursday night Canada is ready to resume negotiations "after a suitable pause."

In a statement, Diefenbaker said it remains the Canadian view that technical discussions on surprise attack are capable of laying a suitable foundation for political negotiations.

"The Canadian government is satisfied that a useful contribution to such a foundation has already been made by the Western side," said Mr. Diefenbaker.

Hockey Officials Concerned Over Support Given Club

TRENTON — The Trenton Flyer officials were concerned over the lack of support given the local team in seven games played to date in the Eastern Ontario Intermediate grouping. In an effort to build the attendance the Gardens management announced that all High School students and also all boys and girls of separate school children will be admitted free on the next game played in the Trenton Community Gardens on New Year's Day at 2.30 p.m. At the time the Kingston Aces club will be the visitors. This is one of the teams that the Trenton club must remain ahead of in their drive for a play-off berth. While the emphasis of the Intermediates only drew 54 paying customers in their last game at home against the Bowmanville-Oronо Combines. The previous week the Belleville Monarchs only 51 were in attendance.

"Although the locals played a bad game last week," said Garnet (Red) Mackenzie, Trenton's manager, "they have played some very good hockey this season and I don't know why they don't support this fast brand of hockey.

The local Flyers are participating in a league consisting of the Ontario championships. Any player who does not give many a service club a good showing. This club has at least two of their senior boys in their lineup. They draw an average of $60 per game. Another club, the Bowmanville-Oronо Combines need no introduction to local fans. They have some of the better players in the district and although they just finished in the cellar in the loop except the local Flyers, they are a strong contender for the championship honors. Port Hope and Cobourg have also shown to be some contender. To date they have downed every club in the league and are favorites to finish in the top two position. The Kingston team are also high scorers and were not expected to be among the loop contenders in the race.

The new Trenton Flyer entry experienced difficulties in the early season start. Lack of outside talent at the beginning of the schedule left them in an awkward state. Player and coach Gordon came home and at the moment the club is in the best shape, physically and mentally. It is set to make a determined effort to grab the fourth and last place and play-off position. At the moment the Bowmanville-Oronо Combines hold down this spot.

At the time of writing Lyle C. Cline was still handling the team on game nights. During the last four games, until Dec. 17th Carr has only had one of those four games. In Bowmanville with a hard-hitting club that ice the visitors 4-4, then at home downed the highly favored Minden Monarchs 6-3 and then in Kingston defeated their Aces 5-4. Their only loss was a 6-5 decision by a 9-2 score.

Bench coach Carr has been using Franklin Lewis and Arden Burleigh from last season's Junior "B" Trenton team on line with Jack Gill from Belleville's Junior "B's". This trio has accounted for two-thirds of the club's local goals. Their hustle and drive proved an inspiration to the entire club. Another trio has veteran Ivan Cole in centre between Jack "Shaker" Baker, and Ken Durst. Although not playing the best at the present time, these boys have been the mainstay or the club in the earlier part of the schedule. In the workouts they show forms of coming back into their own again. The third line has newcomers Gerry Little centering Pat Scott and Patchenicky. The team officials feel this trio will surprise many before they become familiar with each other's style.

On defence only three men are available in Austin Scott, Doug Murray and Bob Brooks. Each man can carry the puck well and lead the attack when necessary which is an asset to the forwards. In goal is Claude Carr who remains among the top four goal-tenders in the league. Claude has proved quick with his hands and has been a sure down on many occasions.

New Year's Day at 8.30 p.m. the town management is hoping the Trenton public will turn out and support the team which is a combination of local and outside talent. A win for the Flyers over the visiting Kingston club would again raise the hopes of the locals in their drive for a play-off position. A win for the locals would all but eliminate the chances of Kingston overtaking the Flyers. The next few weeks will have great bearing on the Flyers chances of moving into the top clubs in the circuit. Vocal support may be the answer to the team drive for a higher position.

Will Reshuffle Pee Wee Teams To Balance Loop

RCAF TRENTON, Ont — Pee Wee hockey have completed three of their nine games each of the first round of play. The first games have shown that there are two real strong teams in the league and this will possibly result in a reshuffling of players to make the loop more competitive. Mr. Lou Knack, league convener, is busily engaged in the midnight oil attempting to sort out players so that they will be able to put up a creasing competition while at the same time maintaining interest in the league.

"It's not easy," says Lou, "but I think we can get around a peak we have to keep games competitive. One or two strong teams could swamp the others and pretty well defeat our purpose. We have to consider the youngsters interest in the game and foster good team play."

Minor League Leader Ross Lemieux, league president, echoed the same sentiments and said "Sport is important and this point must be remembered. Everyone is a member of the All-Stars will not remove a boy from his team. He will play lesser use games and All-Star games as well. The All-Star game will practice once a week from Jan. 8 and they will play exhibition games as directed by the convener.

MANAGERS CONFIDENT

Team managers and coaches are confident regardless of their boys' capabilities, the North Stars, for instance, have more than seven names as rotential All-Star material: Jim Bone, Mike Lemieux, Gord Palmer, Tom Leavy, Tom Glover, Dave Laruah and Andre Lemieux.

The Argus have Wayne Hondros, Bob Ferguson and Bob Craig up for All-Star consideration.

The Chipmunks have put forward the names of five of their players: Ray Hutchison, Al Ferguson, Bobby Benham, Ron Hubbard and Mike Reynolds.

The Packets have Dave Carey, Jim Johnston and Peter Murray on the list.

The Tee-Birds place Ian McCallum, Bill Cole and Wally Alexander at the top of their line-up.

The Dakotas cite Larry Hudson, Doug Quackenbush and Bruce Mallory as All-Star material while the Haywards list Jack MacFarlane, Reg Comfortable and Earl Mullen.

Teams yet to be heard from are the Bombers, Canucks and Otters.

Present standings at the present time are pretty well defined. The Chipmunks lead with nine points and won three and tie Dakotas the same. The Otter Tee-Birds and Packets are tied. Birds have all won two of their three games with the Otters following with one win and the Argus, the Canucks and the Haywards are bringing up the rear with three losses apiece.

Saturday's results at the 8 RD ice pad produced a couple of exciting games: Chipmunks defeated the Packets by a 7 to 5 win with Benham, Hubbard and Ferguson of the Chipmunks each collecting two goals and teammate Reynolds nabbed a single. Johnston and Murray were opposing North Stars were again unscored upon.

Later, the Packets swamped the Haywards with a 5-0 shutout with Johnston scoring assisted by Murray; Johnston receiving the compliment for the second goal, assisting Murray on his marker, the latter getting the other. The Packets was scored by goalie Almond, who completed the goal unassisted.

No Decision Made On Two Problems Regarding Water

TRENTON—The Public Utilities Commission discussed two items concerning water but reached no decision as the only two members present at the meet to vote on the vote until the chairman was present at the next meeting.

One of the problems was created through a letter from the Riverside Dairy over having two meters on lines coming into the building and the bill which were paying seasonal rates.

Mayor Ross Byers said is a matter for the PUC, suggested that perhaps a two-inch line could run into the dairy and have one meter to register the water used. However, no decision was made due to the absence of Chairman Bert Allen.

The second item concerned the extending of a water line to a house which was only a few feet outside of town limits. It was also left over until there was a full attendance.

Several letters from Cole and Sicrris concerning contracts for the fire hydrants were tabled at the meeting but not read.

The other members present for the meeting, was Cliff Baker, who will be the new street commission after the first of the year, Jim Page, manager of the PUC and Jim Bennett.

The Commission passed two resolutions, one expressing thanks to the employees for their work during the past year and the second to them the Commission's wish that they have a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year. The second resolution extended Season's Greetings to the members of the press.

It was also decided at the meeting that the employees of the PUC would be entitled to have the day after New Year's Day off, as it has been proclaimed a civic holiday in Trenton.

Short-Handed Combines Prove Too Classy

TRENTON — Led by veteran winger Syd Arnold, the Bowmanville Oronо Combines trounced the Trenton Flyer intermediate "A" team by a 9-3 score. They had difficulty in unracking themselves all night long as the Flyers gave the Clarke Burleigh came up with his usual performance but the Bowmanville line had one of those nights when everything just went right for them. The local line-up was short three players. Norm Lemieux, Gord Palmer and Tom Leavy, Tom Glover, Dave Laruah and Andre Lemieux.

The Argus have Wayne Hondros, Bob Ferguson and Bob Craig up for All-Star consideration.

Find Goldfine Guilty in Contempt Case

BOSTON (AP) — Industrialist Bernard Goldfine was convicted of criminal contempt for failure to comply with a federal court order to provide to aides of the Labanon Mills, Lebanon, N.H., papers with an investigation of his tax affairs.

At about the same time that Judge Charles P. Wyzanski Jr. was filing his decision here, the White House was pleading not guilty in Washington to a contempt of Congress indictment. The trial will not be March 18.

In Washington Goldfine is accused of flouting Congress by refusing to turn over to Representatives investigators enough about his financial dealings.

New Officers Eastminster Club Are Installed

On Wednesday evening the monthly dinner meeting of East-minster United Church - AOTS Men's Club was held at the church — to the usual potluck fare was added hot roast venison—provided by one of the club's successful deer hunters.

Following reports of the chairman on the activities of their committees, Mr. Ray Donovan, past president of Bridge St. United Church and wife, installed the officers for the year 1959:

President, W. E. Biley; vice-president, C. H. Lusk; secretary, H. G. Farrow; treasurer, J. E. Dodge.

The retiring president, D. F. Lamb, thanked the members for the support given him in the past year. He stated that, with the potential available and under the able guidance of the new executive, Eastminster Club could and would become one of the best in the district. In concluding his remarks, he expressed the hope that every member would practise the motto of the AOTS clubs, "As One That Serves" and by so doing give to his church work the time which it deserves and needs.

Bicroft Workers Retain Union By 252-143

BANCROFT, Ont. (CP) — The United Steelworkers Union (CLC), repulsed a move against one of its locals Thursday and swiftly announced it would counter-attack in January in a bid to dislodge its foe — the Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers (Ind.) — from two neighboring strongpoints.

Workers at the Bicroft uranium mine defeated Mine Mill 252 to 143 to keep the steelworkers representation they have had since February, 1957. The vote was on an application by mine-mill to the Canada Labor Relations Board, supported by 301 employees, that Mine Mill weren't reflected in the balloting.

Ralph Carlin, USW staff representative, said the steel union will start a campaign of organization "to remove the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers as bargaining agents at the Faraday and Grey-Hawk uranium mines," also in this region 80 miles north of Peterborough.

The members of the first executive and board of directors of the newly formed Quinte District Home Builders' Association were elected yesterday evening. They will have an organizational and planning meeting and report back to the district builders on the January 7th meeting. From row (left to right): Pat Halloran, treasurer; Earl DeMille, first vice-president; Charles Lambert, president; Stan Wilkinson, second vice-president; Bert Houston, director. Back row: Bernard Dafoe, secretary; Ernie Jones, director; Albert Horlock, director.

Charles Lambert Head First Executive Builders' Group

Yesterday evening a marked advance was made in the development of a Quinte District Home Builders' Association.

Speaking at the meeting, which was chaired by Bob Clark, of Kingston, of the Frontenac Home Builders' Association, were Tom Thompson, Toronto, of the National House Builders' Association and King Gander, Kingston of the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation. Mr. Allen Connell of the Peterborough office of the CMHC and Mr. Gander spoke on the co-operation which existed between the NHBA and CMHC and the expedience of dealing with just one representative or group rather than having to handle the same problem many times through dealing with individual builders.

Mr. Thompson explained the advantages of builders forming a local association in affiliation with the national body. The NHBA attempts to foster and maintain a healthy environment for mortgage investment, to raise the standards of Canadian housing, to promote the exchange of information on housing between its members, and to generally protect the interests of the home building industry, including builders, suppliers and subtrades.

Dave Mitchell of the Peterborough Home Builders' Association and Bob Clark of the Provincial Home Builders' Association, gave brief accounts of the progress of their local associations and the advantages which their members had derived from both the local and the national associations.

WELCOMED BY MAYOR

Mayor Gerald Hyde welcomed the visitors to Belleville, the home of the Allan Cup Champions, and expressed his feeling that the formation of a Quinte district association would be very beneficial to all concerned, especially the municipalities involved.

Following an intermission, during which the local builders had a chance to discuss matters they had with the visiting NHBA members, an election of officers was held to form the first executive of the Quinte District Home Builders' Association. All positions were contested with the exception of president, to which post Charles Lambert was unanimously approved. Also elected were Earl DeMille and Stan Wilkinson, first and second vice-presidents; Douglas Black, secretary; Pat Halloran, treasurer; Bernard Dafoe, Ernie Jones, Bert Houston and Albert Horlock, directors. The positions for two directors have been left vacant until such time as there is greater representation from the outlying area so that two may be elected from this group.

Police to Take Action Against Bulb Snatchers

City residents with a liking for outside lighting during the Christmas season are reporting instances of vandalism and the disappearance of colored Christmas lights.

Many complaints have been received by city police, particularly from the East Hill district where lights have been reported broken and also stolen.

Latest report of colored lights disappearing from this evening from the Moira Street fireball where about 25 bulbs were taken from an outside Christmas tree.

One resident on the East Hill complained of about 150 bulbs taken.

City police warned that stern action would be taken against offenders caught smashing or stealing outside Christmas lights.

New Body Will Be Helpful to Home Builders

The establishment of a Quinte District Home Builders' Association will prove advantageous to Belleville and district residents. This was the conclusion arrived at by this reporter during an informal discussion with Alex Watson, seller of Ireland's builder magazine, Tom Thompson of the National House Builders' Association, and King Ganong of the Kingston office of the Central Mortgage and Housing Association.

Members of the association will have a code of ethics to maintain in their business dealings. The control, in part, quality construction, fair prices, and proper financing. A prospective home builder or buyer can be confident that he is dealing with a reputable firm when he knows that firm to be a member of the NHBA or its local home builders' association. One of the duties of the local association is to police the local membership to ensure that they maintain and live up to the association's code of ethics. There have been several instances where a local association has expelled a member firm for unethical practices or has refused the membership application of a firm because their reputation was not of the best.

The Quinte district association was sponsored by the Frontenac Home Builders' Association. The next meeting will be held on January 7th, 1959 at which time it is expected that the first executive will announce a proposed agenda of activity for the Quinte district association during the forthcoming year.

FLOWER FROM U.K.

LONDON (Reuters) — The flow of British immigrants to Canada in 1958 is expected to total less than one-third of the figure set last year, the British government migration board said Thursday. The board said in its annual report that "for the time being, the best estimate we are able to give is that United Kingdom emigration to Canada in 1958 is unlikely to exceed 33,000."

Authority Will Consider Using Area for Scouting

Possibility of the Belleville Boy Scout Association being given a long-term agreement allowing use of the Col. Roscoe Vanderwater Conservation Area at Stanleybaro for increased Scouting activities, will be considered by the Moira River Conservation Authority at its annual meeting in January.

At an executive meeting of the Authority held last week at Madoc a letter from the Scouting association was read asking some kind of a long-term agreement which would guarantee continued use of the Col. Vanderwater area for Scouting activities.

During the past year Scouts from the Belleville area used the Thomasburg property for camping purposes and are now desirous of adding certain facilities. These would include digging of a fresh water well, and possible erection of a cottage or cottages for camping use by the Scouts.

The Authority executive agreed in principle to the request and a covering recommendation will be up for ratification at the Authority annual meeting in January.

A proposed Authority budget for next year was discussed by the executive, it being pointed out that maintenance of properties developed was now taking close to a third of the annual budget.

The executive members were told that a total of 1,258 acres had been purchased for reforestation purposes in the watershed during the past year. It was recommended that the present rate of land acquisition should be maintained.

Arrest J. Brett For Posing as Medical Doctor

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver police said Thursday a 25-year-old layman who claimed he hoaxed St. Paul's Hospital here by passing himself off as a doctor last April was arrested by city police in Regina, charged with dealing in a forged document.

They said Jack Brett, alias Dr. Jack Harris, formerly of Oshawa, will be returned to Vancouver for a trial. He was arrested on a warrant charging him with dealing with a forged document and obtaining money by false pretences.

Vancouver Detective Jack Butchart will return here today with Brett.

Brett formerly resided in Belleville.

Brett announced in July that he had helped deliver babies in St. Paul's while posing as a doctor.

The charge is that between March 27 and April 5 he dealt with a forged document that it (it) was genuine. The document was an application for internship, Vancouver General Hospital's secretary of intern committee in the name of Dr. John Kenneth Harris.

The second charge against Brett alleges that between April 2 and May 1 he unlawfully obtained $95 in wages from St. Paul's.

Damage Heavy In 4-Car Crash

Property damage amounting to approximately $1500 resulted late Thursday afternoon in a four-car collision involving no. 2 highway in front of the Bernard Collins' residence, five miles west of the city.

Provincial Police said that Mr. Bernard Collins was westbound and was intending to make a left turn into his driveway when he was struck from behind by a car driven by Fred Upton, R.R. 4, Trenton.

The force of the impact forced the Collins car into the path of eastbound vehicles driven by Harry Waller, Albert St., Belleville, and by Carl Malcolm of Trenton.

The 1954 model car driven by Mr. Collins was almost a complete writeoff while heavy damage was also caused to other vehicles. Mr. Collins escaped with a minor cut on the face.

Provincial Constable John Fullerton investigated.

Soon the stockings would hang

But what to put in them?
We feel sad and despair.

The children were nestled
All snug in their beds,
What to buy? Where to shop?
Buzzes through our poor heads.

Mum with her hair net,
And Dad just confused,
Had just settled down
Not too enthused.

When out of his chair,
Dad rose with a clatter,
Mother surprised, said,
"What is the matter?"

The light from the lamp
Lit the floor up below,
Where Dad dropped the "Intell"
His face all aglow.

Then to my wondering eyes did appear
An ad in the paper that made it all clear.

As rapid as eagles our ideas all came,
We whistled and shouted as we checked off each name.

WILL THIS SETTLEMENT WORK?

Prof. Harry S. Crowe has been reinstated by United College at Winnipeg and will resume his duties immediately.

In a statement issued by Allan Watson, chairman of the board of regents of the college, it was said: "The board hopes that all concerned will now unite in an effort to enable United College to continue its rightful place in the academic world."

The unbiased outsider may be pardoned for wondering whether there is any sound basis for expecting such an outcome, desirable though it may be.

Compromise and appeasement are words which, in recent years, have acquired an aura of disrepute. Yet, in many instances, compromise and appeasement remain the essential ingredients for the civilized conduct of indispensable enterprises.

There are occasions, though, when matters of principle are involved, when compromise is as unlikely to achieve any worthwhile result as is an attempt to blend oil and water.

The Crowe case seems to us to be one of these incidents.

Those who supported Prof. Crowe contended that under no circumstances should the privacy of a personal letter be violated.

Those who supported the board of regents maintained that it was its duty to see that harmony prevailed and that all members of the staff were fitted in every way to perform their duties.

If the principal of the college, Dr. W. C. Lockhart, was wrong in reading and taking photostats of a letter written by Prof. Crowe to a person at the college, his action remains wrong even when Prof. Crowe is reinstated. If the board of regents, which by its action in dismissing Prof. Crowe implied approval of Dr. Lockhart's actions, now feels these actions were deplorable, it owes Prof. Crowe more than reinstatement -- it owes him an apology. The members of the board owe something more than this to the college itself -- they owe resignations.

If, on the other hand, Dr. Lockhart was justified in reading and photostating the letter because the welfare of the college transcended the principle of privacy with respect to personal letters, then the board of regents is now losing and remaining a court of appeal, a decision which its members then felt, and presumably still feel, was justified.

Peace is wonderful, but it can be bought at too high a price and that is the abandonment of principle. If Prof. Crowe had been dismissed and the original decision of the board of regents had remained unchanged, or if Prof. Crowe had been reinstated and the board of regents had resigned, one would know where the United College stood. Right now, it is difficult to tell whether it is flesh, fowl or good red herring.

COUNT YOUR BLESSINGS

Into each life a little snow must fall
But I see no dog-gone reason
Why my walk should get it all . . .

Poetic Bellevillian with a weak back.

Seriously, though, even a snowdrift has a silver lining. So far this winter we have been spared the sound of nostalgic yearnings for yesteryear. Almost nobody has said anything about old-fashioned winters. It is possible, of course, that somebody has mentioned the fact that winters are not what they used to be, out of force of habit, and has been pushed into a snowdrift as punishment for his sins, there to lie hidden until spring, or until we get an old-fashioned January thaw.

But we will face that worry later. As for the present, sufficient unto the storm is the evil thereof.

COULD THE ICE BE CLEARED?

Lloyd "Red" Ivan, director of recreation, arranged to have Adam Stalker, superintendent of public works, check the thickness of ice on the Bay of Quinte. They found it thin in spots and issued a warning. They are to be commended for their foresight. There is here, too, a timely recognition that much of the best recreational activity is unsponsored. We wonder, though, whether, once the ice is thick enough, it might be worth the recreation committee's while to have certain safe areas of bay ice cleared of snow with a jeep and plow. The cost would not be great, but the value of these "rinks" would be high.

A GREETING

By EDGAR A. GUEST

What should a Christmas greeting be?
A printed card where friends may see
The thought that as they pass our way
We wish them well for just a day?

But feebly do the types express
My wish for others' happiness;
It does not seem enough to say
To friends: "A Merry Christmas Day!"

If I could crowd into a line
A wish for everything that's fine,
A life no rain should fall upon,
I'd print it big and send it on.

If this old battered heart could speak
Day after day, week after week,
I would run the year of friendship through
And still not tell its love to you.

My Christmas wish is always this:
That never any joy you'll miss,
That with the birth of each new day
Life will grow more and more like play.

Letter To The Editor

Abnormal Children Need Loving Care

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer.

Sometimes we come across in our travels acts of greatness which go unheeded in the modern hum-drum of the world today. That is only natural because in the main we are mostly concerned with our own lives and the way we live. In our families and our near and dear ones and how we get through our daily routined. We are accustomed to these mundane things because they are the accepted way to toil and fight. We take these so much for granted that at times we get away from realties of other walks of life.

Not long ago I visited, just outside Belleville, The Home for the Mentally Retarded Sick Children. It was a cold day and the wind really blew around outside. Inside there was such a completely different change of atmosphere. I spoke with Mr. and Mrs. Velleman who are in charge of the home and the background to this would hear the noises which emanate from children who wailed and screamed and made clean. They sounded so natural those noises. After words with the principals they invited me to tour the confines of the home. Something I had never previously been through one of these homes. What did I expect? I don't know. For seven years I served in India as a missionary and therefore I do not remember seeing the parallel of what I saw at that home. These are children who are completely dependent on the goodness of others. Lovable . . . yes, Mrs. Velleman demonstrated. Even when we visited up several of these youngsters and cuddled them just as if they were our own. Only a great Christian and noble character could have the love for these children. Because these kiddies are abnormal in every sense of the word. Young in years but old in body. To be denied the sight of beautiful nature around us, to be denied the strength of the limbs taken away as well before they have even developed to be able to help themselves how to fend for themselves. Unbelievable sadness. Have you ever seen a child fourteen months old with a head the size of double the normal size? Mrs. Velleman showed me the youngest inhabitant. A baby just a few months old. It was locked up in a normal body until it was rid of the many things wrong. Hope for the child? I do not know. I only know that I left that sacred home I looked at my two girls and thanked God, for the gift of children. The time of joy and good cheer. As I travel, my mind constantly goes back to these innocent babies in those hard cots. To those children who have never perpetrated harm to anyone but who will suffer for many many years to come.

You see there is nothing that can be done for these children to make them feel wanted. As if they belong to someone. Not to belong to someone as a child can make them so unhappy. I saw the look of recognition when they were picked up by the nurses or by Mrs. Velleman. They knew the touches of love. They know how to reciprocate by showering their arms around the neck and burrowing the head into the shoulder. What has happened to them is not their fault. These are innocent children. Why should they be? What is the object of this letter?

Instead of shopping for Christmas, let's stop and think awhile. Let's stop and put one more gift down on the list. Let's think of the joy that our own youngsters get at Christmas morning when they come down to their presents. When we sit down to our Christmas turkey and Christmas pudding let's think for just a while of those other small fry. Let us ask ourselves if we have been able to contribute of the bounties of God to other innocents.

Indeed—let this be the season of Goodwill to all men.

THE PACKSACK -

By GREGORY CLARK

In the restaurant, there was a family party at the next table to us: an elderly woman and six younger people, her children, obviously, and their wives and husbands. They were having a midday meal.

Mamma was playing duchess. She was rather a homey old gal, all dressed up for the occasion, which is a very mean description of the type who have not often got out socially. She had on her best hat, best coat. And oy o you could see they were her best.

In a rather loud voice, she was instructing the waitress. She explored the menu thoroughly, enquiring about various items. She suggested substitutions. She was having a whale of a time. She was behaving the way, in all her lonely hours, she had imagined ladies behave in high society. She was entirely oblivious of the snigglish of her children at the ladies ill, which is the feminine form of snigger over the waitress and all her company. It is language-ladies-only, a little conspicuous, and I caught the eye of one of her children. He gave me a sardonic look.

Their party broke up when mamma got her order and the hat check counter. The y o u n g fellow who had winked at me drew me aside.

"Really," he said, "she is a wonderful old girl. We love her. But when she gets loose, like this, she's awful. She gets delusions of grandeur."

"Take her out ofener". I said. For I don't like sardonic winks.

Comment Misleading

On Wednesday an editorial from the Windsor Star on fire insurance coverage was reproduced on this page. Subsequently the Star discovered that much of its comments were based on a misinterpretation of the word "vacant". Herewith is reproduced part of a second editorial in which the Star corrected the erroneous impression left by the first comment on this question:

"Take the term "vacant," as applied to the average house with a knowledge of English, would interpret that as meaning simply a house with no one in it at the time. Apparently, however, the insurance purpose it has a legalistic meaning that doesn't quite mean a house temporarily unoccupied, as when a family is away for a vacation, but rather one unoccupied a longer (or different) basis.

"Principal Hall says he can undo, must rest on the Canadian Underwriters Association. One would think it could be done on one to put its jargon into language people can understand, and issue comprehensive statements so they will understand. The manner in which it handled the latest changes is inexcusable from the public point of view.

In the meantime those in doubt about what their new insurance policies mean had best get in touch with as insurance people they can trust, and have confidence. He ought to be able to explain. His explanations should not have been necessary, if the industry had issued intelligible explanations in the first place."

Horseshoeing Is Lucrative

Stratford Beacon-Herald

Even in this age of auto and plane, a boy could do much worse than take up horseshoeing. That is the conclusion opening in the U.S., it seems. Good horseshoers are making up to $10,000 a year. Ralph Stole University and Colorado State University, Cornell University and Oklahoma College of Technology provide formal classes to turn out horseshoeing experts.

The Wall Street Journal, New York, which has looked into the business, reports that students who graduate as horseshoers don't head for the village smithy jobs. They go to big cities — and most of the jobs are where there are big race tracks. There the attempt is to join the exclusive International Union of Journeymen Horseshoers. With a union card, a fellow can thick leather apron and a heavy hammer, a journeyman horseshoer can earn up to $100 a day.

Michigan State's horseshoeing instructor, who teaches a class of 12 students a year, says that most men are strong enough to keep up the $100 a day pace. It's strenuous work wrestling with hooves of heavy horses. And he warns his students that the work is nothing so hard that there's an occupational hazard in the form of the temptation to ease the burden with liquor.

The race track isn't the only place to find employment either. The United States still has about 3,500,000 horses and mules — down from 14,500,000 in 1940. The Wall Street Journal reports. And, of course, there are mated 250,000 riding horses in stables and private estates.

The Horseshoers Union has about 250 members and retirements provide about 15 openings for new smiths a year. And the group recruits from those turning up. So, if your son says he intends to become a blacksmith, don't be too upset. He has gone the way of the buggy whip salesman.

There's money and a future in it.

Rider of Bus Not 'Mean'

Ottawa Journal

A writer in the London Spectator wrote a musing piece in which he was thinking aloud about when a man could be called mean. He said he was parsimonious. A friend of his wrote the example of a typical magnate in "our City," who invariably rode to work in public buses. Was he mean for that reason? Possibly he was greatgrandson, two of his fellow citizens, to escape from the ivory tower of his office.

Rt. Hon. Vincent Massey, Chancellor of the University of Toronto, always used the Ottawa street cars to come and go from work. Finance Minister Walter Harris, Minister Gregg. The present Minister of Finance, Hon. Donald Fleming, does them one better at times and is often seen walking to work — usually late at night—and to the Confederation Buildings. Mr. A. D. P. Heeney, chairman of the Civil Service Commission's often seen boarding a bus only about a quarter to six in the evenings, homeward bound.

Mean? Not a bit of it. They were and are down-to-earth residents who have made the prestige of a limousine. Besides, the Ottawa public set the unvoting public cotton to those in high estate who show no sham or snobbishness and about a single afoot or a-bus with their fellow citizens.

Jet Age

Things will have come to a pretty pass when it takes longer to get from downtown to a Canadian airport than it takes to fly from that airport to Britain on a jet.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

GROWTH TOWARD SILENCE

Youth expresses itself. It is young with thoughts, and also in action. Age is more reserved, more stodgy a goodly number. But with the oncoming of maturity one usually thinks more and talks less. There has been growth toward silence. We listen to the eloquence of a statesman like President Franklin D. Roosevelt as he was called on radio by Wendell Holmes and found him translating one of his favorite phrases. Asked by the President why he was engaged in this occupation Holmes replied: "I exercise my mind." I have noted how our great thinkers do no talking except when they have something to say that they deem important. Many have a way of thinking in silence. So it is that our great men and women express growth toward silence.

That famous saying "Silence is Golden" is literally true, and more so than any of us appreciate. Travelling as I have, b u t largely in the past, I have liked resting in the lounge, where so many are to be found, listening to the talk, which may be interesting, but I single out the ones who don't talk at all. They are usually the ones who have something to say, but don't choose to express themselves.

President Lincoln was noted as "the Silent President" because he was a man of few words. When Marshall Field, t h e founder of the great store in Chicago, died, I read of the tribute paid to him. I have forgotten the exact words, but I recall this one: "He was a man of few words." Silence has power behind it.

The silent man or woman is the most difficult of acquisition. The interesting talker is the one who has something to say, b u t who waits until the time seems ripe to say it! Silence is the important time for quiet and relaxation. For meditation — and prayer.

To Your Good Health

By Joseph G. Molner, M.D.

HEATERS AND STOVES SHOULD ALWAYS HAVE VENTS

Dear Dr. Molner: We have a one-burner kerosene heater that we use at night in cold weather. It has no vents or pipes. Is there any danger or harm from fumes? It is not in our bedroom, but an adjacent room. — F. C. H.

Yes, it's dangerous. It doesn't matter whether you burn kerosene, coal, wood or some other fuel. All fires requires oxygen. If enough oxygen leaks into the room — fast! But if, especially in cold weather when everything is closed up tight, the flame does not get enough oxygen, it will throw carbon monoxide into the room, instead of carbon dioxide. And carbon monoxide is a dangerous poison. You can't smell it or see it, but it is deadly. Always provide a flu or vent for any heater that burns fuel.

"Dear Dr. Molner: My mother is taking parsley tea, made from fresh parsley and boiling water. She also takes lithia tablets in water, an old remedy someone told her about for weak bladder. If you tell me I's wrong. I'll tell her so. I'm sure she does not help her any. — Mrs. C."

You don't need to have me tell you — you've already answered the question: "It does not help her one bit." Parsley tea, of course, that it doesn't help all that much, but it is ridiculous to expect that these remedies would help. It'll probably take another 100 years or so for this hopeful, usually useless, old home remedy to die out.

"Dear Dr. Molner: I recently read in a magazine that insect sprays, when slightly inhaled, are dangerous to one's health. What is your opinion? I have a pest letter I asked you if it was possible for a girl 10 to get pregnant if she is a virgin. I would appreciate it if you would answer both of these inquiries. — S.L."

And I would appreciate it if you would quit asking that second question, because you know the answer as well as I do — maybe better, since your son persistent. Enough said. Let's forget it before.

Anyway, I don't know of any special peril in hair sprays, but my advice is to use them on your hair instead of your insects. As to the second question, technically it is possible for a girl to happen — but not unless the girl has been exposed to the possibility of pregnancy and has been doing things she knows she shouldn't.

"Dear Dr. Molner: You once mentioned a drug which would make a person violently ill within an hour. Please tell me what it is? 2. Can it be given without the knowledge of the patient? 3. How much can be given without danger? 4. Can it be given in coffee or milk? 5. Can the drug be obtained without prescription? — J. C."

The drug is sanabuse, and I'm sorry I mentioned it. I said at the time that it wouldn't make sober people out of drunks unless they want to stay sober. And in that case they don't really need the medicine.

The most important element of breaking the alcohol habit, bar none, is wanting to break it. Dosage varies according to the individual; it certainly could not be given wit ujnobeet lastin the given without the patient's knowledge and permission, for legal, moral and medical reasons. You can get it only by prescription, because too much can be dangerous. In short, it's nothing for an amateur to fool with, and it rarely is useful for the average person.

"Dear Dr. Molner: Do grape cherry, orange and other small fruit seeds help to clean out the intestines? — M. E."

No. The notion of "cleaning out the intestines" has no basis in fact. You don't have to "clean out your throat" after you eat dinner. The same is true of the intestinal tract.

Crowd More Into Less

Windsor Star

There has been a contradictory trend in the home during the past generation. Kitchens have been getting smaller and smaller though expected to hold more and more equipment. The modern wife may have all her kitchen tools plus a modern kitchen room for the use of them.

In most modern homes all the dishes, cups and pans are kept in the kitchen. So are all the mechanical appliances such as mixers and other electrical appliances. So are all the foodstuffs. There is only a stove but a refrigerator and, of course, the ubiquitous and useful mechanical dishwashers. There are shelves in every available nook.

The old-fashioned kitchen this wasn't so. Many contained many a shelf, supplemented by "kitchen-cabinet" to house the immediate household utensils. The pots and pans were sometimes hung behind the stove.

There was plenty of room for large table to seat a large family. There would be a comfortable chair where a man could relax without going into the parlor. There was a working chair for two and, frequently, a cradle for the latest offspring. Yet it wasn't crowded even by a large family. A woman had room to move about.

The explanation, of course, was the pantry. It housed all the foodstuffs, except such as might be stored in the cellar. Frequently it also housed the sink, where the dishes could be washed. A man could wash his hands. The kitchen thus had a much more important role in family life; it wasn't just a place in which meals were hurriedly prepared and hurriedly eaten so the family could move elsewhere.

Strength for The Day

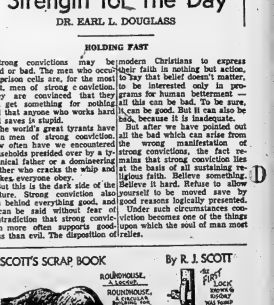
DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

HOLDING FAST

Strong convictions may be produced as God. The men who occupy strong convictions, the part men of strong conviction. They are convinced that they can get something done for God, and that anyone who works hard and saves is successful.

The world's great tyrants have been men of strong convictions. How often these men have enconvinced households presided over by a tyrannical father or a domineering mother who cracks the whip and makes everyone obey.

But this is the dark side of the picture. Strong conviction also lies behind everything good, and it can be said without fear of contradiction that strong conviction more often supports goodness than evil. The disposition of trifles.



Strong convictions may be produced modern Christians to express their faith in nothing but action, but that faith is going to be found to be interested only in progress for human betterment — but that is the faith. To be sure, it can be good. But it can also be the cause of the most terrible

But after we have pointed out all the bad which can result from the wrong manifestation of strong convictions, the fact remains that strong convictions lie at the basis of all sustaining religious faith. Take something I believe it hard. Refuse to allow yourself to be moved away by rational reasons hurriedly presented.

Under such circumstances convictions become one of the things upon which the soul of man most

Bid to Overthrow Mine, Mill, Smelter Union in Nickel Belt After Strike Over Is Likely

By PETER STEPNOWICH
Canadian Press Staff Writer

SUDBURY (CP) — Another bid to overthrow leaders of the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter (ind.) seems likely in the Nickel Belt.

Labor observers say it is doubtful the rival United Steelworkers of America (CLC) will lead a revolt but formation of a new union is considered a possibility.

A group of women, wives of strikers in the 87-day International Nickel Company walkout, began agitating last week with a mass meeting in Sudbury Arena. Talking openly of "wiping out communism" in the union, they won approval of a resolution calling for a membership vote "unperverted by men and women of integrity" to end the strike.

AWAIT STRIKERS END

Little has been heard from the men so far. It's difficult to approach members of a long-time dissident faction among the workers. But it is understood there are awaiting the end of the strike before taking any action.

"A lot of the men are not too happy with the situation in Local 598 but they have to stick together until the strike is over," said one dissident, suspended from the union two years ago with 16 others who published a newspaper advertisement aimed against the union.

Leader of the 1956 revolt was James Kidd, president of Local 598 in 1945 and 1946 but now a steelworkers' organizer.

The steelworkers, locked with mine-mill in a struggle for power in Northern Ontario and elsewhere in Canada, are given little chance of taking over in the Nickel Belt. Organizers were beaten up the last time they came here.

PLAN CLC AFFILIATE

The dissident source said plans are being made to organize a new local affiliated directly with the Canadian Labor Congress.

"It won't be easy but I think it can be done," he said.

Since mine-mill was certified in 1943 it has won a $2.20 average hourly wage for nickel workers, one of the highest in Canada. This is its first strike.

Mine-Mill was expelled from the CLC in 1949 on grounds of Communist leadership and because it refused to yield jurisdictional rights to the steelworkers. Nels Thibault, mine-mill's Canadian president, says none of the leadership belongs to the Labor-Progressive party anymore.

Mr. Thibault took over the presidency of Local 598 from Mr. Kidd in 1947. He was succeeded by Mike Solski, who faces another election after the strike is over. Elections are usually held in November or December each year.

Mr. Solski has won acclamation nearly every year since election in 1952. In that year Mr. Kidd unsuccessfully tried to regain the presidency by campaigning on a "white slate" opposed to the so - called "red slate."

The Inco strike, called when the company was able to continue selling from a 150,000,000-pound stockpile, has cost the union $13,000,000 in lost wages and increased dissatisfaction with the leadership seems likely unless the union manages to get a really good settlement.

About 2,000 of the 14,800 workers voted against strike action and union opponents say many of those voting in favor never thought there would actually be a strike.

Any revolt could draw support from the so-called "rank and file." Inco workers who pay dues on a checkoff system but are not members of the union. Mine-mill officials estimate their number at three per cent or 500 workers but other estimates range as high as 25.

It is difficult to assess the feelings of the membership, employed at four mines, two smelters and a refinery situated up to 25 miles apart. But one mine-mill striker buttonholed in a beer parlor had this to say:

"I'm a 100-per-cent union man but I am willing to admit Solski and his boys may be defeated after this is over."

Labor Determined to Seek Higher Wages Next Year

OTTAWA (CP)—Canadian labor is determined to seek higher wages and improved working conditions and social legislation in 1959, Stanley Knowles, executive vice-president of the Canadian Labor Congress, said Thursday.

"Let there be no misunderstanding on that point," he added in a speech before the Canadian Club of Ottawa.

In some minds, Mr. Knowles said, inflation calls for a hold-the-line policy and curbs on the power of the labor movement.

But despite these arguments and pressures, the CLC would continue to seek better wages and living standards for the workers it represented.

LABOR DEFINITION

Mr. Knowles defined inflation as a state in which the people who produce the goods are unable to buy them back.

Thus the economic aim must be better distribution of good and higher productivity. Labor was serving not only its own ends but the ends of the nation as a whole.

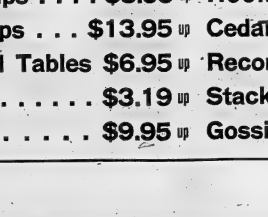
Club members, mostly business men, gave the former CCF member of Parliament a round of restrained applause at the end of his speech.

Next scheduled speakers before the club are Prime Minister Diefenbaker Jan. 14 and Liberal Leader Pearson two weeks later.

Mr. Knowles said, labor, like other Canadians, is concerned about the Canadian economy, the menace of unemployment and inflation.

Labor was conscious that if it is going to achieve higher wages it must help to achieve a better national economy.

PURCHASING POWER



If labor obtained higher wages and better working conditions there was a better chance of avoiding a situation in which Canadians were unable to buy back the goods they produced.

Referring to the preliminary attempts of the CLC and the CCF to form a new political movement, Mr. Knowles said that in 1958 Canadians had a wider effort at the "grass roots level" to think through the problem of a new political party and of shaping a constitution for it.

Many Canadians would not agree with this program but at least they would recognize that it would be good for parliamentary democracy.

Harvey Homan Chosen for Trip To Kingdom

Popular young Thurlow township farmer, Mr. Harvey Homan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Seldon Homan, Wallbridgville, has been chosen as one of two young Canadian farmers to spend six months in the British Isles next year as a Nuffield Foundation scholarship winner.

Harvey will go overseas as the Nuffield scholarship representative from Eastern Canada. Representing Western Canada will be Harold Hildebergen of Neepawa, Manitoba.

Each year the Nuffield Foundation set up by the British automotive manufacturer, provides for two young farmers from Commonwealth countries to spend six months in the British Isles gaining practical experience on farming. Time is spent on farms in England, Scotland and in Northern Ireland.

The young Thurlow township farmer will leave about the last of February and will be away from Canada for seven months.

Mr. Homan is a brother of Kay Homan, president of the Ontario Junior Farmers' Association.

Members' Desks In Chamber Being Wired

OTTAWA (CP) — The House of Commons chamber is undergoing some alterations, but when the job is finished only habitues of the place will know the differences.

The work, involves the wiring of all 265 members' desks for a simultaneous English-French interpretation system and the construction of two booths for interpreters.

Workmen say the job will be finished in time for the opening of Parliament Jan. 15.

The basic wiring, hidden under the chamber's green carpet, was installed before last summer's session to permit the installation of hearing aids at each desk. A number of MPs, including Prime Minister Diefenbaker, used the hearing aids, which supplement the chamber's general sound amplifier system.

Now each desk is being equipped with carefully-hidden switches that will permit an MP to listen through an earpiece either to a speech in the language in which it is being delivered or to the interpreter's version of it.

The press gallery also is being wired for simultaneous interpreting, but the newspaper men will have heavy earphones instead of the detachable lightweight earpieces given MPs.

The reason for the installation is that less than half the MPs are bilingual or at least fluent enough to understand both English and French speeches.

Either language may be used in the Commons. In the past, MPs had to wait until the next day to read a Hansard translation of a speech given in the language other than their own.

A team of eight interpreters to work between the $6,840 and $7,560 now is completing specialized training in simultaneous English-French interpretation.

Leonard Harman Addresses Madoc Co-operative at Annual Meeting

The tenth annual meeting of Madoc Co-operative Association was held recently in the basement of the United Church, in Madoc when the ladies of that church catered to a most generous turkey supper.

Don McKinnon, president of the Co-operative for the past four years acted as chairman.

In his opening remarks, Mr. McKinnon said that Madoc Co-op ranks with the best in Ontario and paid a special tribute to Mr. R. C. Woods, manager, and also to the patrons and staff.

Head table guests were introduced by Wilfred Forrestal. Mrs. Ross Moorcroft was guest soloist and sang two numbers with Mrs. Philo Harris as accompanist at the piano. Mrs. Harris also played the piano for community singing at Christmas songs, led by Mrs. Allan Franks.

The financial statement was given by Mr. Max Wood, and showed that the Co-operative has had the best financial year of its history.

Although sales were lower the net profit was the highest ever. Sales were $189,897 and net profit before storage returns was $14,397. Total assets at end of fiscal year August 30th were $88,554.

A 6 per cent dividend payable in 5 years, was approved by members present.

The guest speaker, Mr. Leonard Harman, assistant general manager of U.C.O., was introduced by Mr. Kenneth Holland.

Mr. Harman congratulated the co-operative on the success it had achieved in the past ten years and pointed out that the 233 members of the local Co-op were also members of the U.C.O. and along with members of 154 other local co-ops across Ontario valued at approximately 75 million dollars. He referred briefly to the many lines of business that United Co-operatives were undertaking.

Mr. Harman had recently returned from an 8-week tour through Europe and told of his findings of the Co-operatives in several Scandinavian countries, co-operatives own and operate 250 factories in England and is the largest retail business in that country.

In Denmark Co-ops process 77 per cent of the hogs, 96 per cent of dairy products and 80 per cent in Sweden.

He said that Canada and the United States had fallen far behind in Co-ops, but had grown rapidly during the past 20 years.

He concluded by saying that Co-Ops should be well balanced, owned, controlled and operated as a democratic system.

Earl Sager extended thanks to Mr. Harman for his address.

Others speaking briefly were: Albert Woods, manager of the Co-Op; Mr. George Murray, local bank manager; Wilfred Forrestal and Ray Lougheed, a member of the board of U.C.O.

Don McKinnon, Ken Holland and Ed. Robinson were retiring directors, all of whom had served six years as directors and were accordingly not eligible for re-election.

New directors elected were: Elmer Wood, Christie Bailey and Cecil Malcolmson.

A vote of thanks to the ladies of the United Church for their splendid supper and to the entertainers was extended by Ted Morrow.

Mrs. Perry Bronson responded ed for the ladies.

Bulganinn Makes Confession Of His Crimes

MOSCOW (Reuters) — Marshal Nikolai Bulganin, deposed former Soviet premier, made an abject confession to his "crimes" as a member of the "anti-party group" before a meeting of the communist party's central committee Thursday.

Bulganin, who was replaced as prime minister in March by Nikita Khrushchev, said everything Khrushchev had charged the "anti-party group" of doing was correct.

The official Soviet news agency Tass said Bulganin told the central committee that as prime minister he virtually became the leader of this group.

DENOUNCES PALS

He denounced four former top Communist leaders who were purged from power in 1957.

Bulganin described ex-premier Georgi Malenkov as "an intriguer, capable of any dirty trick and any abomination."

He said former foreign minister Vyacheslav Molotov was "a man estranged from life and the people, who knew nothing of industry and agriculture."

Former first deputy premier Lazar Kaganovich, said Bulganin, was "a man adept at fine phrases who occupied himself with hindering by his long and confused speeches."

"When in 1957 the anti-party activities of Malenkov, Kaganovich, Molotov and former foreign minister Dmitri Shepilov actively developed I joined them. I supported them and became their partisan and accomplice."

NOMINAL LEADER

"Being then Chairman of the council of ministers, I not only became their accomplice but was nominally their leader. The anti-party group met in my office, and there concerted their anti-party fractionary work."

Bulganin spoke to the committee's plenary session only a few hours after he was himself denounced by other speakers as being a member of the "anti-party" group.

Last month Khrushchev added Bulganin's name to the disgraced ranks of Malenkov, Molotov, Shepilov and Kaganovich.

Christmas Party Held by Quintena Lodge

Tuesday night, following the regular meeting, Quintena Rebekah Lodge held its Christmas party. The opening lodge in the regular form, Sister Alice Adams, Noble Grand, welcomed visitors from Tweed and Stirling and proceeded to regular business, which was quickly disposed of so that all might receive the supper which was daintily decorated with red and green streamers centred with a huge many-candled cake, "Peace on Earth" was rendered by Sister Dorothy Webber, which was enjoyed by all.

At this time word was received by Santa would be delayed as he was stuck in a huge snowdrift in his way from the North Pole. To wile away the time while waiting Christmas cards were sent. Finally, the jolly old gent arrived with his pretty "to-be" and his ma-and-pa-in-law. He gave each one a gift from under the tree and wished all a very Merry Christmas and left, after partaking of a cup of tea and a mince tart. After all the excitement everyone was glad of a cup of tea and light refreshments prepared and served by Sister Phyllis Burley and assistants. Several more carols were sung and as all left for their homes "Auld Lang Syne" was played out on the still cold air, ending another evening of Odd Fellowship.

During the evening several flash snaps were taken of the tree and Santa, who was assisted by Pearl Wilson.

Front Road W.A. Elects Officers

Once again, near the close of another year, the December meeting of the Front Road W.A. was held at the home of Mrs. Clinton Brown and Mrs. Thomas J. Brown, on Thursday afternoon, with a goodly number present.

The president, Mrs. H. McSkelleh opened the meeting with a Christmas greeting, welcoming all present. A hymn, "Hark the Herald Angels Sing" was sung, and a prayer was offered. Fifteen members answered the roll call, and there were three children present.

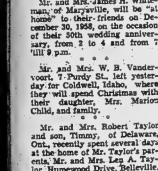
Mrs. McMullen thanked the hostesses for opening their home and Mrs. T. J. Brown had charge of the devotional. "Christ-Mas-Is-Faithful," was followed by the Scripture lesson, taken from Luke 2:1-20, read by Mrs. Clarence Mrs. Brown read the "Story of Christmas" as taken from the Bible, program. The Rev. W. E. G. Dovey gave a reading, "Song of the Child." The true "Christmas Story," taken from Luke 2:14, was given by Mrs. E. Greaves. Mrs. Preston also read a poem entitled "Bethlehem Anew."

Mr. Brown extended greetings and Mrs. Clifford Reid read a poem, "Christmas Meditations."

A sing-song of Christmas carols followed with Mrs. McMullen at the piano, with many old familiar carols being enjoyed.

Mrs. Brown thanked all who had helped with the devotional and wished all the season's greetings.

The meeting was given back to the president for the business portion, and the election of officers. The financial reports of the year was given by Mrs. Clarke and was most gratifying, as were all branches of the work.



OFFICERS ELECTED

Mr. Dovey took charge of the election of officers: president, Mrs. Hugh McMullen; 1st vice-president, Mrs. Clifford Reid; 2nd vice-president, Mrs. Gordon Bray; secretary-treasurer, Mrs. Roy Clarke; card convener for sick and shut-ins, Mrs. Donald Bradshaw; Christmas card, Mrs. Clinton Brown; auditors, Mrs. Whittle and Mrs. C. Brown; press reporter, Mrs. Thomas J. Brown.

These officers were duly inducted to their offices by Mr. Dovey.

A social half hour was enjoyed and dainty refreshments served by the hostesses, assisted by Mrs. Whittle.

An exchange of Christmas gifts brought a pleasant afternoon to a close.

Wife Preservers

Clever little Christmas gifts can be made by adding one teaspoon of detergent with three teaspoons of vinegar or powdered paint, then painting metal objects. A frozen pipe can also become a paint brush for the holiday.

Wedding

RICHARDS — McKEOWN

CAMPBELLFORD— St. John's United Church, Campbellford, was the scene of a quiet wedding on Saturday, when Olive Gertrude, daughter of Mrs. Ida Keown of Campbellford, and the late James E. McKeown, became the bride of Edward James, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. William R. Richards of Bowmanville. The Rev. D. Mansell performed at the double ring ceremony.

The bride wore a beige American lace sheath dress, with thigh length jacket and flower-petal sleeves. A fall rust French feathered headband was worn on a profile, long shirred beige gloves and rust leather shoes completed her accessories. She wore a corsage of bronze and gold baby mums.

The bride's only attendant, Miss Jean Miller, of Peterborough, chose a two - piece wool crepe suit in Dior blue, featuring the new shoulder jacket in blouson style, with three-quarter sleeves. The straight cut skirt had a sun-ray pleat in the centre back. Her hat was of Dior blue, and three clusters of dusty pink, with corsage of variegated pink carnations.

Mr. Gordon Jollow, of Bowmanville, was groomsman.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of the bride's mother, those who were the many lovelies corsage dress with black accessories and a corsage of pink and white rosebuds.

For their wedding trip to the United States, the bride wore a dress with matching embroidered sheath dress, charcoal-grey coat, and winged collar accessories. Her corsage was of mums.

On their return, Mr. and Mr. Richards will reside at 42 Jane Street, Bowmanville.

Bride-to-Be Honored by Alpha Lambda

The regular meeting of the Alpha Lambda Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi was held at the home of Mrs. R. Laughlen.

Miss Carol Rutherford, expecting the usual business meeting, was pleasantly fooled on a shower. On her arrival she was greeted with a toast by everyone present, after which Mrs. R. Smith pinned on a lovely corsage of red carnations.

Mrs. H. House extended Christ-"best wishes" to Mrs. R. Smith the girls and presented her with an attractive carving set and stainless steel, in the sorority colors, Black and Gold.

After a few interesting and amusing games, each girl gave the bride-to-be her favorite recipe.

Among the guests were: Mrs. J. L. Smith, Mrs. W. McLeod, Mrs. H. Hasley and Mrs. John Lewis.

Refreshments were served by the hostess, Mrs. R. Laughlen, and co-hostess, Miss Joan Brownlee.

Mrs. R. Ketcheson poured.

Heir to the Danish Throne Known as Farming Princess

COPENHAGEN (Reuters) — Princess Margrethe, 18- year -old heir to the Danish throne, is gradually taking o n more responsibilities in the royal household. She now is known to Danes as their "farming princess."

During the absence of King Frederick and Queen Ingrid on a two-week vacation in Egypt, Princess Margrethe, fair - haired princess acted as "regent. She performed public duties, including the launching of a new ferryboat for use on the service between Denmark with the vivacious charm that Danes have come to love.

Princess Margrethe's private life is not one long whirl of dances and parties. She loves to be out of doors. And now one of her chief shooting interests is to be "down on the farm"—her father's farm in the agricultural heart of Zealand, easternmost of Denmark's islands, on which the royal family stands.

PASTORAL PRESENT

The farm, complete with livestock, was among many presents received by the princess on her 18th birthday this year. It was given to her by Danish farmers. Nordgarden, as it is called, is in size a typical example of the country's 200,000 farmholdings. It stands in pleasantly undulating countryside not many miles from Copenhagen and is quite close to a former royal residence.

Although the crown once possessed about 40 per cent of all land in Denmark, no sovereign exercised the right in 1188-01 this 18th birthday this year. It was given to the Danish farmers.

Life on a farm suits the princess and always has been noted for her good health and out-of-doors interests. She loves swimming, and is still an excellent long-distance runner. As a girl she excelled as a school girl. For several weeks last summer, she joined girls of her age group at a women's air corps camp near a Danish air force base.

District Scouting Staff Enlarged Due to Growth

The steady growth of Scouting in Belleville means more leaders and the district commissioner has increased his staff to eight. District headquarters members are: D.C. P. C. Allcorn; ASC A. L. Boyce; ASC (Cubs) A. Jamieson; DCM Harry Smith; DCM M. J. McClelland, and other new members, Mrs. Lillian Ashley, William Sweet and Bob Williamson. These Scouters will no longer hold their former ranks as Akela 8th Belleville, Scoutmaster 14th, ASM Avondale respectively. The groups concerned will relinquish them with regret. Mrs. Ashley has been Cubmaster of the 8th for 13 years. Her "family" of Cub Scouts number many hundreds. She will be sorely missed by these young Scouters.

INSPIRING CEREMONIES

Inspiring ceremonies were held at each of the investitures. Attending were the group committees, Wolf Cubs, Scouts and the district staff, President F. J. Lancaster and secretary J. J. Lodgson represented the Local Assn.

The new members were divested of their insignia and cuff-plume, scarf and shoulder badges and after solemnly reaffirming the Scout Promise were presented with new hat plumes and necessary scarf, gold green and "District Headquarters" shoulder badges, provided by the local association

THE FAMILY COUNCIL

EDITOR'S NOTE: The Family Council consists of a judge, a psychiatrist, three clergymen, a newspaper editor, a women's editor and two writers. Each article is a summary of an actual case history. The Council reports on problems that have been dealt with by responsible agencies and counsellors.

Mrs. L. K. — She has to face the music.

Harriet K. — I want to get away from it all.

Mrs. L. K. — I am so upset about my daughter. The last things Harriet I hardly know what to do.

Six months ago she broke an engagement to a very nice young man she had gone with for four years. She broke it just out of childish foolishness. She met a man of 30, who happened to be good-looking and a slick talker and she fell for him head over heels. Within two months he got tired of her and now she's all set high and dry — just as I told her she'd be.

The big problem now is that all her old friends — boys and girls — are disgusted with her and won't have anything to do with her. She's out of the swim. She wants to go away for a while and visit her aunt. I tell her there's no hiding place. She has to face the music.

Harriet K. — I don't know how I'm going to face the music for my body even asks me not to face it. Even my best girl friend turned against me. My ex-fiance is very popular with our whole crowd. Everyone feels sorry for him in a raw deal. We had gone steady since our high school days.

I realize that I made a bad mistake, but what am I supposed to do about it? Leonard wouldn't have me back even if I begged him. Anyway, I'm not sure I would want him again even if he asked me.

My mother doesn't want me to visit my aunt because she is a career woman who never married. Mother knows that I admire her for her success and she's afraid I'll get "foolish notions." I don't think I will. I just want to get away from it all for awhile.

The Council: Both mother and daughter could use some important factors in this situation. These factors may influence their outlook on the immediate future.

The most significant factor is that Harriet is not guilty of any serious crime and doesn't deserve to be treated like a culprit. She should not have to "face the music" or to "get away from it all." Her friends are dead wrong to boycott her. They can sympathize with her ex-fiance, but it is not up to them to pass sentence in this very personal matter. Eventually one or all of them will realize it.

Harriet and her mother seem to have accepted the verdict of this "crowd" — that she has done a terrible wrong in breaking the engagement. They fail to recognize that the wrong preceded this event. Harriet undoubtedly is a quite a bit of uncertainty about her engagement to Leonard. If she weren't shaky in her feelings about him and her approaching marriage, she would never have allowed another man to enter the picture. It is quite likely that she used the second man as an easy and irrational way out of her commitment to Leonard.

A girl who has gone steady for one man since the age of 19 may well have misgivings about marrying him. Harriet must have wanted to know others and to put her feelings to the test. She should have done it before she got engaged, but she probably didn't permit herself to feel her own doubts until she was faced with the actuality of marriage. At any true friend should understand this.

A period of separation may do both Harriet and her friends some good, but Harriet should recognize that she has no reason to hang her head in shame.

YOUNG WIDOW WANTS CHURCH WEDDING, WITH MASS

Dear Mrs. Beekman:

I am a widow, 29 years of age. My fiance, also 25, has not been married before. Must our wedding be informal? We would like to have a church wedding, with a Mass. Would this be correct? (My first wedding was a formal church wedding.) Would a reception after the ceremony be in order? — L.

I am sure you may, under the circumstances you name, have a church wedding, with a Mass and I most sincerely hope so. Of course you would talk over all your plans with the priest who is to perform the ceremony.

Since you are still in your twenties, and the bridegroom has not previously been married, you may prefer to have a semiformal wedding, which probably would particularly please your bridegroom, his family and relatives and friends. Or you may, of course, have an informal wedding. But you, as a second marriage, may not wear white or a bridal veil. You may have one attendant, perhaps a sister, if you have one, perhaps, and very appropriately, a married sister as matron of honor. Your bridegroom would have a best man, and possibly two ushers . . . although not one usher for every pair of guests invited. And yes, indeed, it is proper to have a reception after the ceremony — a semi-formal reception if you choose to have semi-formal wedding.

NEW YEAR'S CARD TO DOCTOR AND WIFE

Dear Mrs. Beekman:

I would like to send a New Year's card to my doctor. I have never met his wife, so would it be proper for me to address the card to him only and send it to his office, or should I address it to "Dr. and Mrs. Smith" and send it to his home address? I am a widow. Should I sign the card "Mrs. John Brown" or "Mrs. Elizabeth Brown"?

— Reader

Sending this card of New Year greetings is a social gesture, and you should address it to the doctor and his wife: Doctor and Mrs. Jonathan Smith, and to their home-address. Whether you sign your name to a printed greeting, or write your own greeting, sign your informal name: Edith Brown. (No title is included in a signature.)

For Ukrainian Canadians And Others Who Care To Join

by Mary Moore

For nightcap reading it is not unusual for me to pore over a cookbook but when I look at the clock before turning out the light and it is 2 A.M. that is unusual.

The new cookbook which so-thralled me, "Traditional Ukrainian Cookery" by Savella Stechishin, is charming. The warmth and experience of the author is disseminated through every page of the beautifully illustrated volume. The nostalgi- customs of these traditionbound people made me yearn for a more religious observance of our Christmas in Canada.

Recently I gave you in this column a recipe for Cabbage Rolls called Holoubsti and had so many requests for additional copies of it that I am going to give you Mrs. Sterbishin's method from "Traditional Ukrainian Cookery". Her spelling is Holubsti. It has many variations, for ode I am going to try come January, calls for buckwheat groat instead of rice Holubsti is included in a list of suggested entrees for a Christmas Eve supper. I would add my recommendation Canadian cooks to use this delicately flavored, economical dish on their holiday tables. This is the type of thing that boosters your reputation as cook and hostess.

HOLUBSTI:

(Ukrainian Cabbage Rolls, courtesy Savella Stechishin) Ucliubsti means "little pigeons" which is what they look like in their wrapping of cabbage leaves. One large head cabbage, Meat and Rice Filling (see below), 1 to 1 1-2 cups tomato juice, 1-2 cup sour cream (optional, 2 tablespoons or more butter or bacon fat, salt and pepper. Remove the core from the cabbage by cutting around it with a sharp pointed knife. In deep utensil pour boiling water into hollow . to cover completely. Let stand until leaves are . . . pliable. Drain and take leaves apart without tearing. Trim off hard centre ribs. Cut large leaves in 2 pieces. Line the bottom of pot (roasting pan) with a few leaves. Place a generous dessertspoonful of the filling on each leaf, roll lightly (folding in sides) and arrange in layers. Sprinkle each layer with salt. Combine tomato juice (or stock or water or canned tomato soup) with sour cream, melted fat and seasoning. Pour over. It should barely show between rolls. Cover with a few large leaves then the lid. Bake at 350 deg. F. for 1 1-2 to 2 hours (or in a Dwer temperature longer). Serve with chopped crisp bacon or sour cream or tomato sauce.

MEAT AND RICE FILLING:

One cup each raw rice and boiling water, 1-2 teaspoon salt, 1 medium onion chopped, 4 tablespoons fat, 1-2 lb. each ground beef and pork, 1 egg, salt and pepper. Wash rice, add boiling water and salt; boil 5 minutes. Cover turn off heat, allow to stand until water is absorbed. Gently saute onion in fat until tender. Add the meats and stir and cook until lightly browned. Combine with the rice and cool slightly. Mix in the egg and season with salt and pepper. Fill cabbage leaves with

Sunday School Lesson

What Christmas Is Not

By ROY L. SMITH

We can leave it to the theologians to argue such questions as the incarnation, the virgin birth, the atonement, and other such matters. But as common people, we can settle some other — and perhaps more serious — questions associated with the Christmas season.

NOT DATE ON CALENDAR

First of all, let's get it straight, that Christmas is not a date on the calendar. As a matter of fact, the choice of December 25th was more or less the result of an accident. No one knew, precisely, what the date of Jesus' birth may have been, and so they settled it in reference to some ancient dates. But the calendar has changed a number of times since that morning when the baby's first cry was heard from the stable of the Bethlehem Inn, and it is impossible to be sure of dates.

Moreover, it is a matter of experience that Christmas is celebrated in the heated season in one part of the world and in the frigid season in another part of the world. Quite evidently the temperature has nothing to do with the festival.

On the lawn of a beautiful home in Panama, in an area of the world where snow has never been seen, there stood last Christmas-time an elaborate reproduction of the traditional Christmas scene. There were reindeer, singing angels, a chimney, little children, and a tree loaded with gifts. All about on the lawn, covering the grass, was a coating of cotton designed to give the appearance of snow drifts!

As if Christmas and snow were a part of the same thing. And as if you could not have Christmas without snow!

But the good news contained in the angels' song is in no wise dependent upon snow, or any other trappings, for that matter.

CHRISTMAS NOT GREETINGS

There is something very beautiful about the custom of sending Christmas greetings to friends and loved ones, but the anxiety with which we compile our mailing lists — fearful lest we may have omitted a name, thereby given lasting offense — is no part of Christmas.

The Uniform Sunday School lesson for December 21: "JOY AT THE SAVIOR'S BIRTH," Luke 1:26-56; 2: 1-20.

No, in it any part of Christmas that we do our giving on a barter basis. When we celebrate the birth of one who gave his life for the redemption of mankind, seeking something in return for giving is utterly alien.

CHRISTMAS NOT DISSIPATION

Nothing could be farther from Christmas than the office party that sends fathers home in no condition to help their children celebrate the birth of the Son of God. And nothing could be more alien to Christmas than that party which sends a mother home to her little ones drunk, or even partially drunk. We would not tolerate a communist celebration of the Fourth of July, and we cannot paganize Christmas without paying for it at the cost of our very souls. Christmas is too sacred to be paganized.

CHRISTMAS NOT MASTERY

Christmas is a recognition of the solemn and majestic fact in history that God did something spectacular and stupendous for mankind — something so amazing that even the angels stopped their song and went down to the hills of Judea to sing their exultation.

It was the biggest news event

RAWDON

WMS Holds Yule Meeting At Parsonage

RAWDON — Mrs. W. G. Fletcher was hostess at Rawdon parsonage on Wednesday for the Christmas meeting of Mount Pleasant Rawdon Women's Missionary Society. Eighteen members and two visitors were in attendance.

The home was decorated for the yuletide with a lighted Christmas tree.

Mrs. Kenneth Weaver presided in the absence of the president, and the pianist played Christmas music.

The Moderator of the General Council of the United Church of Canada wrote a special message for the Missionary Monthly and this was read. He said in part: "May I congratulate you missionary-minded women of our church on your past achievements, and call on you for greater sacrifices, gifts, and prayers for the future."

All sang "O Come to My Heart" and read a prayer of general thanksgiving.

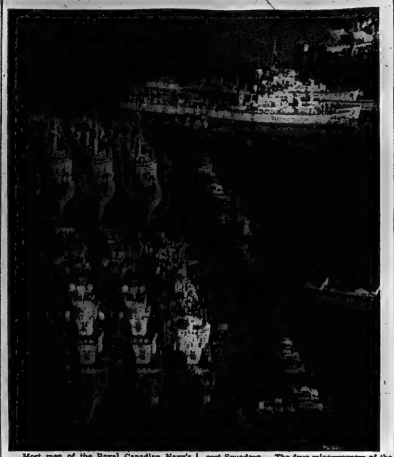
PRESENT PROGRAM

Mrs. Ross Jeffs presided over the program and read a poem, "He Took Them In" from the Monthly. Mrs. John Mulheron gave the history of various Christmas carols and told of their origin. Several were sung and included, "O Come All Ye Faithful," "Christmas Awake," and "Silent Night." The closing was a Canadian carol, "'Twas in the Moon of Wintertime," and this was sung by Mrs. Carleton Potts.

A resume of "How Christmas Is Celebrated Across Canada in Some of Our Mission Stations," as written in Missionaries Reports, was most interesting. These included "Quebec," read by Mrs. Harry Middleton; "Manitoba," read by Mrs. Frank Spencer; "Saskatchewan," read by Mrs. Burton Sharpe; and "British Columbia," read by Mrs. Eric Summers. The program closed with a hymn and prayer.

The business portion followed. Mrs. Percy MacMuller gave her report and read the November letter slate. Mrs. Carleton Potts reported a total of $281.95 as of the end of November. Mrs. Will Potts read a letter of thanks. Mrs. Milford Wrightman read a letter from Mrs. H. M. Davis, Presbyterial Stewardship secretary.

The allocation will be the same — $440. The missionary for prayer will be Miss A. Blanche Gerkard, R.N., associate worker in the Drumheller Valley at Newcastle, Alta. The citizenship secretary read a letter from Mrs. Nesbitt McKibbon, presbyterial secretary urging that all phases of the Christian citizenship department be studied. The Mission Band leader reported $160. to date. The literature secretary asked that each member telephone number of books read so the total could be compiled. The friendship calls in homes and hospitals were recorded. The mite-boxes were counted by Mrs. Rolls Jeffs. The offering was gathered by Mrs. Robert Merrick and dedicated by Rev. W. G. Fletcher.



The next meeting will be held on January 14 at the home of Mrs. Eric Summers and each officer will give her year's report.

Thanks were expressed for the hospitality and program and the service closed with a benediction from the Hymnary.

The hostess and lunch conveners served light refreshments.

Most men of the Royal Canadian Navy's three operational squadrons on the west coast will spend Christmas at home, at the close of a thoroughly operational, hard-working year.

Some officers and men of the ships are enjoying a leave period over the holiday season, in preparation for long months at sea-to come in the New Year.

MARMORA

Santa Claus Parade Largest, Best, Held Yet

MARMORA — Marmora Santa Claus parade on Saturday was the largest and most picturesque yet held, with 22 floats of merchants and organizations taking part.

Mr. R. K. Frost was chairman of the committee which represented the Chamber of Commerce, Legion, Kiwanis and Unified Steel Workers, No. 4854, of Bethlehem Steel.

The parade was graced with Miss Dickey's Majorettes of Belleville, in costumes of black and white, twirling their batons in to time to Madoc Army band, which followed.

Among the floats were noted the Snow Queen, pictured by Dianne Edwards; Fairy Princess, Linda Mcllkjohn; "Old Lady Who Lived in a Shoe," Mary Louise Brady, a clown who (apparently) walked on his hands, besides horses, elephants and prehistoric animals, all of which were wearing hoods.

Prizes were awarded to: first prize, Boy Scouts, "Nativity Scene"; second, Girl Guides, Santa's Toy Workshop; third, Cubs with camping scene; fourth CGIT carol singing and Christmas tree; fifth, High School honor rugby team.

Following the parade the children of the village and the surrounding countryside were treated to shows at the Plaza Theatre and at the town hall. 1900 bags of treats were given to the children.

The organizations and their committees were well pleased with the interest taken by everyone.

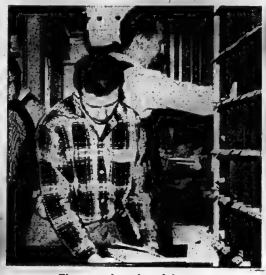
Record Season For Belleville Post Office Staff

Sing a song of letters
A writer at his best

A vendor at her wicket
For stamps and all the rest



Then to the opening marked "Letters"
And drop them through the slot

Into box upon row of boxes
As the mail adds up to a lot

Then to the machine and SMACKERS!
They cancelled that one, they did!?

Then on to the racks and the sorters
So much mail they's sometimes hid

Now comes a laddie to tie them
From the racks into bundles so quick

Then they are tossed into bags
And piled into heaps high and thick

Behind the Letter Slots With Belleville's Postmen

Ever wonder exactly what happened to your letter once you dropped it through the slot in the Post Office or a mail box? Well a lot of people have been dropping letters and parcels into the hands of the Post Office personnel over the past few weeks, in fact, on one day of this week they handled over one quarter of a million pieces of mail. This was a record high for the Belleville Post Office staff during a season in which mail has been the heaviest to date.

Behind the scenes, however, the forty-seven regular staff members and the one hundred and fifty seasonal employees are handling the incoming, outgoing, and local mail in an orderly albeit sometimes rushed manner. Under the direction of Postmaster Albert Clare and the assistant postmaster, John Henry Smith, the modus operandi has been well worked out and all operations move along quite smoothly.

Through the use of a primary sorting procedure on all incoming mail it has been possible to cut down the working day during the Christmas rush from eighteen hours to twelve hours for the individual regular employee. This combined with the "mail early" program of the Post Office has resulted in Christmas mail being cleared and delivered much more quickly than in the past. Other countries, such as the United States, are just starting the "mail early" technique in an effort to expedite the overload of the holiday season. Canada's Post Office has been using this method for the last ten years. Most local and domestic mail will have been delivered by the twenty-fourth of the month, although there will be some left over until the twenty-sixth. Foreign mail is still expected in fairly large quantity, however, since very few other countries use the "mail early" system.

However, back to the mailing slot. After your letters drop through into a bin they are taken over to the "facing up" table. Here all letters are lined up in a certain manner prior to their being run through the cancelling machine. Once the stamps have been cancelled the letters are given over to the primary sorters. Letters are here sorted for local delivery, for the various provinces, and for the various towns in Ontario by letters of the alphabet. First and second class mail are also sorted here as well as foreign and domestic bound mail.

Local mail is then sorted out by another contingent of employees who file the letters into racks of pigeonholes according to the initial letter of the street. Others then file these groups into the individual streets and other sorters break up the letters according to streets into the different "walks" or routes, of which there are fourteen in Belleville. During the Christmas rush the regular mail carriers bundle the letters for their walk and pack them into the carrier bags. The helpers then deliver the mail along the route. There are usually several relay boxes along the route, so the helpers start off with only the mail for the first part of their walk. They will pick up mail for the remaining sections of their walk at the relay boxes along the way.

Besides the local walks there are 8 rural routes which are handled by carriers in cars. Parcel post deliveries are handled by a separate contractor who is currently operating on a fifteen-hour day to keep up with the season's rush. Delivery is steady throughout the day on city delivery with the more heavy walks being covered twice a day. Special delivery mail is handled by a separate contractor but all registered mail is delivered by one regular Post Office employee during the holiday period.

And if you wondering as to what happens now,
There's a door to door postman who tramps through the snow.

To bring to your door, cards and letters, quite a lot
And dashed if he doesn't drop them through a slot!

Poesy and photos by Phippen

As many as one hundred registered mail deliveries are made each day. The heaviest periods of the day occur at 6.00 p.m. for incoming city mail and 4.00 to 5.30 a.m. for incoming mail and parcel post.

Besides local mail there is also the outgoing mail. Some goes to other cities and towns in Ontario, some to the other provinces across Canada, and yet some to the United States and other foreign countries. Air mail, first, and second class mail are all separated. Air mail, depending on whether it is eastbound or westbound is sent to either Montreal or Toronto. First class mail is also sent by air, where practical, within the territorial limits of the Dominion. Second class mail is always shipped by rail. Outgoing mail leaves Belleville to the east, west and north, and is carried along both railway and highway.

Ontario bound letters have been separated into the city or town of their designation at the local Post Office and are dispatched to their destination without much more handling, although some sorting may be done by the railway mail sorters. Mail to other provinces, with the exception of the larger cities, is usually separated while travelling the rails. Letters bound for the United States are grouped into states and the larger cities within these states where practical. Overseas mail and letters bound for South America are sorted by countries and broken down further, if necessary, at the major relay points for outgoing foreign mail — Vancouver, Toronto and Montreal. Most of the foreign-bound mail has already been cleared away as early as last month to ensure delivery before Christmas.

Letters to the North Pole

(INTERCEPTED BY THE EDITOR)

Dear Mr. Santa Claus:

What I do NOT want for Christmas are the following:

A RHINESTONE-STUDDED DOG COLLAR—especially since I don't have a dog.

All of THE WORKS OF ARNOLD TOYNBEE—I barely have time in my busy daily schedule to read the newspaper.

A BUDGIE BIRD—there isn't room in my apartment for another tenant.

An LP RECORD ALBUM—by Elvis Presley, Fats Domino or Bill Haley and his Comets. I like music too well.

The NEWEST CHRISTMAS RECORD on the market this season, called "The Chipmunk Song." Who needs David Seville? I can get the same effect by playing a 78 r.p.m. on 45 speed.

A WOOL SWEATER—I've got sensitive skin.

A COFFEE PERCOLATOR. I'm an "instant" gal myself. Ever since I started watching a TV show called "December Bride."

A set of WATERLESS COOKWARE. Having just learned to boil water without burning it, I don't want to undo what I've taken great pains to learn.

A set of GOLF CLUBS. I do enough walking without chasing a little ball around a 10-acre field.

A pair of FIGURE SKATES. Have enough trouble trying to navigate on icy city streets.

A complete "pan-cake" MAKE-UP KIT. Wouldn't do any good.

A pair of the latest in milady's footwear—POINTED TOE SHOES. They might have been in high style in the Gay Nineties, but to me, they're not conducive to the modern, Atomic Age. Besides I don't have pointed toe feet.

A full length MINK COAT. I think it would look better on the mink.

An ENGAGEMENT RING. I enjoy the state of unmarital bliss. Besides why spoil five beautiful friendships?

Yours,

MERRY MARGARET.

Dear Mrs. Santa Claus:—

What I DO NOT want for Christmas:

An ASSIGNMENT the night before.

BOOKENDS—I have nothing to place between them. Likewise earmuffs.

NYLON SOCKS—My varicose veins already make woollen ones look like washboards.

AN INVITATION OUT TO DINNER—I eat my bird Henry VIII style.

A NEW RADIO—My wife wakes me, makes the coffee, and who wants to rise to the hideous cacophony of "Honeymoon Waltz" or "Brahms Lullaby"?

LONG UNDERWEAR—I was never any good at solving trap-door combinations.

BOW TIES—With my pointed ears I would look like a pet. tom-cat—and who wants to lap milk on Christmas?

SUSPENDERS—My pear-shaped physique erases all necessity of pants-holding devices.

CHRISTMAS CARDS—From the guys and gals I forgot to remember.

DRIP-AND-DRY SHIRTS—I never remember to hang 'em up, let alone wash 'em.

TIES WITH FLORAL DESIGNS—They would clash with the black and white stripes of my bedroom wallpaper.

INDIAN BLANKETS—I have the one I used in school football which I wore so long on the bench they wouldn't sell me a liquor permit when I became 21.

CIGARS—Unless they're proven. I've been around too many politicians, sudden poppas, and wrestling rings, not to know the ropes.

WORKSHOP TOOLS—Out of the question, I'm so mechanically inclined we have to bring in a carpenter to hang the New Year calendars.

A NEW CAR—It would mean clearing the garage of the old pool table, the antique piano, grandfather's clocks and other nostalgic bric-a-brac, not to mention the current 1937 model.

Yours,

LONESOME GEORGE.

As Puck Player Durelle Is A Good Boxer

MONCTON, N.B. (CP)—Yvon Durelle, Canadian and British Empire light-heavyweight boxing champion, switched to hockey Thursday night.

He huffed and puffed his way through a hockey game which ended in a tie in his first try at organized mayhem on ice.

"The difference between this and boxing is that nobody hits you back," Durelle said.

Durelle, who lost to world champ Archie Moore in Montreal Dec. 10, got his stick on the puck only three times during the game. Twice he lost it immediately and once managed to carry it out of his own zone.

Still, his Moncton Hawks teammates could do no better than a tie in the North Shore New Brunswick senior game with St. Thomas Tommies.

SHARES IN SWEAT

Manager Chris Shaban, who sweated freely as a small fortune in boxer sipped back and forth on alcazar, said:

"I'm glad he didn't score. If that guy had scored a goal, wild horses wouldn't have been able to keep him off the ice. I think we'll stick to boxing."

Several times the eager Durelle, from Bale Ste. Anne, N.B., leaped to the ice from the bench before he was supposed to.

"Gee whiz," he said later, "I was more nervous there than in the ring."

He shrugged out of his shoulder pads. "I don't like all this equipment. It bothers me."

ROCKET UNCHALLENGED

Observers said Rocket Richard of Montreal Canadiens had nothing to fear from Durelle—at least on the ice.

It was the big fisherman's first go at ice organized game. His previous ice experience was limited to amateur, unorganized hockey back on the Bale and a game with a group of reporters. It was a big victory at the gate. The North Shore League usually draws about 800 relatives and friends.

More than 2,150 turned up to see Yvon.

Says Suspension Was Suggested Not Advised

WINNIPEG (CP) — Ken Yost of Winnipeg, secretary of the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada, says only an informal suggestion—not a recommendation—was made at an AAU meeting in Vancouver to suspend an athlete because of his department on a British Empire Games trip to Britain.

He was commenting in an interview on reports that a date between runner Joe Mullins of Glace Bay, N.S., and an air force girl in London had prompted a recommendation that the athlete be kept off Canadian track and field teams for a few years.

Bob Osborne of Vancouver, Canadian B.E.G. team manager, was quoted as saying after the Vancouver meeting Dec. 3, that he had made such a recommendation. Osborne did not identify the athlete in question but Mullins later volunteered the information that he thought he was the one.

Yost said Osborne made a passing remark at the meeting that he thought "maybe some consideration should be given" to suspending athletes whose conduct was detrimental to sports and to Canada.

WENT NO FURTHER

"Osborne did not elaborate, nor did he mention any names," Yost said. "It never even got into the minutes of the meeting."

Yost said it is "not an AAU matter at all. It is all up to the B.E.G. association."

In an interview from Lincoln, Neb., where he is a junior at the University of Nebraska, Mullen said there was no grounds for seeking the suspension from the AAU.

"I'm not quite positive that Osborne was talking about me," Mullen said. Even if he was not, the runner added, he is standing by his criticism of team officials. He claimed the officials were incompetent and that the team organization was very poor.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

The hard-hitting, rib-lolting Cheviots of Cornwall provide the loyal opposition to the McFarlands tonight, and the improving Seaway City club will be out to give the Hexmen the battle of their lives.

They tied the Allan Cuppers on their home ice a week ago and have since trounced the Hull-Ottawa Canadiens, conquerors of the Whitby Dunlops.

The Macs, fresh from their won-one-lost-two tour of the Quebec professional league, will be anxious to pick up their league thread. They have won 11 of their last 13 loop outings and indeed bettering that record tonight.

Jean-Paul Lamirande, newly acquired defenceman who impressed all and sundry in his showing against the Quebec League clubs, makes his McFarland debut tonight. On his record "Lanny" should be a decided asset to the Macs' blueline corps and will make his presence felt against the Cherries this evening.

The draw for the two tickets to Prague for the world hockey tournament will be made during the game tonight, and as a last-minute reminder all ticket salesmen are requested to turn in their "takes" at the Front Street stores of Don Stanton and Jock Diamond.

Gordie Howe, the Red Wings mighty winger, has probably parked that jock labelled "No. 400" with a hundred and one other souvenirs of the Rocket chase.

And while he probably will never forget his arch-rival for super-star honors, the equally mighty Rocket Richard, he will get a fresh reminder of the Canadiens' fabulous star every time he looks at the "400" puck.

For the Rocket should, indirectly, be given an unwilling assist on the famous goal, inasmuch as he was part and parcel in the scoring of it. Had the referee heeded one of the Rocket's favorite penalty-warranting gimmicks, Howe might still be looking for the coveted "400th."

Elmer (Montreal Star) Ferguson's story of the ironic hockey incident is another observer-puk it, highly educational in that it shows how an attacker can score even when he is being illegally interfered with, and cannot pry his stick off the ice.

Wrote Mr. Ferguson:

"Undoubtedly the height of irony was achieved when Gordie Howe, great Detroit Red Wing, scored the 400th goal of his career Saturday night on the Forum freeze. Ironic, because Rocket Richard, Howe's great rival, was in-part responsible.

"There was nothing wrong with the goal, and it did, indeed, become dramatic height. Because Howe had heard the jeering of the crowd prior to notching the milestone marker, and had brushed it off. And much more dramatic than that, was the fact that Howe was jeered everywhere but in their own dressing room. Howe had invaded the realm of his greatest rival, the Rocket, to score the goal, at a time when dissension over their respective merits, had been renewed with considerable heat.

"But the irony was that Richard himself was partially responsible for Howe's big goal! In the dressing room after the game, we asked Jacques Plante, Canadien netminder, how the goal was scored. Plante with a routine question of 'how it came.' Plante grinned, which isn't routine when a scaler has been beaten for a big marker, one that also tied up the game. He should have been downcast, but the irony of the thing struck his sense of humor.

"'Howe was standing there in front of the goal, while some pressure was on,' said Plante. 'So the Rocket wheeled over, put his stick on Howe's leg to prevent scoring. Now, when you have a player's stick checked, because the Rocket is one of the strongest men in the game, with a tremendous pair of wrists.

"'So Howe couldn't move his stick. But George fired the puck, it struck Howe's [illegible] stick, and shielded right past me. That's how the goal was scored.'

"We're not trying to take a thing away from the goal. Probably all goaltenders of note have had similar breaks of luck as they piled up their totals. But this, from the players involved, was more than a little off the beaten path and into realm of ironic oddities."

Durelle Long Count Charge Ridiculous, Says Timekeeper

MONTREAL (CP) — Eddie Kane, timekeeper at the bell for the Aurelio Moore-Yvon Durelle fight, says referee Jack Sharkey was absolutely correct in his knockdown counts and any suggestion of a "long count" in the first round "is so ridiculous it isn't funny."

Kane worked with timer Alphonse Halbot and knockdown timer Maurice O'Connell at the Dec. 10 fight in Montreal Forum. Moore won by a knockout in the 11th round.

Durelle was quoted as having said in Toronto Wednesday night that while Moore was down and Sharkey made two nine-counts, the timekeeper counted off "13 or 14 seconds" on each knockdown.

"A long count would have been impossible under our set-up," said Kane, who has worked at fights for the Montreal athletic commission for 12 years.

"I was checking Maurice with my own watch as he shouted the count and-struck with his hammer on each second. I was also checking, second for second, each fall of Sharkey's arm and his call was the same as Maurice's. Sharkey was taking our count correctly on every knockdown."

Kane added: "I guess Durelle has no other excuse. He'll probably be blaming us timekeepers next."

Howard Wants To Play Behind Plate

TRANEKN, N.J. (AP)—Elston Howard of New York Yankees, the outfield star of the last world series, looks forward to a laughy star in the major — as a catcher.

"I heard that Casey Stengel is planning to play Yogi Berra at first base and have me do most of the catching in spring training," said Howard.

"I feel better behind the plate. Doghiddenders don't bother me. In fact, I can remember catching three doubleheaders in a row in the International League a few years ago."

Howard, 26, was with Toronto Maple Leafs in the International League. He had his best season with the Yankees in 1958, batting .314 in 103 games, hitting 11 home runs and driving in 68 runs. His prevous batting marks with New York were .305, .302, and .333.

Little Gump Feeds Watson Fresh-Laid Detroit Egg

Plays Finest Game of Season In 2-0 Shutout Over Wings; Canadiens Crumple Leafs 4-1

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Little Lorne Worsley, the netminder with the little grin and the big wit, is having his most successful National Hockey League season yet.

Not only is Worsley compiling what could be his best full-season goals-against average since joining New York Rangers, but coach Phil Watson hasn't once this season threatened to send him out of the league.

Thursday night the Gump turned in his finest game yet this season—a 2-0 shutout over Detroit Red Wings on their home ice that saw him stop 38 shots.

In Montreal the league-leading Canadiens stretched their lead to eight points over second-place Detroit by disposing of last-place Toronto Maple Leafs 4-1 on three first-period goals.

HAS FINE AVERAGE

Worsley now has a personal goals - against average of 2.70 which, if continued, would be the best since he began his erratic NHL career with Rangers in 1952, when he won the Calder Trophy as the best rookie.

Sharing the honors with Worsley Thursday night was Andy Hebenton, who scored both Rangers' goals—his 11th and 12th this season.

Worsley stopped 14 shots in each of the second and third periods including breakaways by Alex Delvecchio and Red Kelly, while New York had a man in the penalty box.

By contrast the Montreal game was a duel in the nets. Richard, defencemen Bob Turner and Claude Provost scored in the first period to give the Habs a comfortable margin. Bert Olmstead scored for Leafs in the third after a scoreless second period but Dickie Moore put the game on ice with his goal at 15:09.

Canadiens' Jean Beliveau saw action for the first time in more than two weeks after being injured in a fall giving him trouble and the big centre saw only limited action on pickup lines.

Teeps Extended To Beat Petes; Irish Win

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Toronto St. Michael's Majors took over second place in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A circuit Thursday night, edging the leaderless Hamilton Cubs 3-1 at Hamilton.

In other OHA Junior play, the top-flight St. Catharines TeePees worked hard to hold a 3-2 margin over Peterborough Petes on the latter's home ice. The St. Michael's win over the Cubs was all the Petes needed to drop into third place.

The third game of the night saw the visiting Toronto Marlboros put on a third-period drive to gain a 6-4 tie with the Flyers at Barrie.

Jack Costello and Larry Keenan scored for St. Michael's. Pat Baker got Cubs' lone goal. Ron Ellis Peterborough. Don Grosso fired two for the TeePees and Bill Mahoney rounded it out. Larry Babcock and Bill Mahoney registered the Petes' goals.

Danny Patrick scored three goals for the Flyers at Barrie and Gaetan Socaris got No. 4. Jim Murchie fired two for Barrie. Terry Sawchuk and Sonny Osborne and Brian Walsh got the other two.

Giants Not Real Good Team, Just Determined, Says Coach

NEW YORK (AP) — Jim Lee Howell looks just straight in the eye when he says nobody is more surprised than he over New York Giants' sudden climb into a first - place tie with Cleveland Browns in the National Football League's eastern division.

The tall, genial Giant coach expressed some private thoughts Thursday after watching his squad in a workout at the training camp here at Pawling, N.Y., before tackling Cuban cakes on the stylish Yankee Stadium gridiron in Sunday's playoff game for the right to meet Baltimore Colts in the NFL title game next Sunday at Cleveland.

"This is not a real good team," he said. "It's a determined, fighting-spirit group I've ever coached but it still makes mistakes. We have to work hard. It's still learning. I honestly thought we'd never get as far as we have.

"When the season started I didn't think we'd win more than four games. And if I had known about all those injuries I'd have said we'd be lucky to win more than two games."

DEFENCE IS GREAT

The way what did he attribute the Giants' record of nine wins and three losses including one victory over the Browns and one over the Colts?

"Several things, of course. A great defence, a good bench, good spirit, hustle, will to win, increasing confidence and a real victory harmony and unity.

It's a real team in every sense of the word. Every player is a coach. They help each other, correct each other, point out each other's mistakes. They make it easy for the coaches."

Howell proudly noted the Giants were first in the league in defence against rushing and second against passing.

"I showed those figures to the boys just a few minutes ago," Howell said. "I'm also pleased to see Jim Patton was No. 1 in pass interceptions. They were mighty proud of that."

LUCKY? HE LAUGHS

Howell is being hung out of stories from Cleveland quoting Browns' coach Paul Brown as crediting the Giants' lucky to win last week's game. The Giants defeated the Browns 13-10.

"That shows that Brown may be a little worried about us," he laughed.

"I wonder what he's going to say next week if we should beat him a third time?"

McMurtry Gets Big Chance Against Valdes

NEW YORK (AP) — Nino Valdes risks his lofty ranking and Pat McMurtry gets his big chance tonight when the bulking Cuban takes on the stylish Irishman in a 10-round heavyweight boxing bout.

Nino's voluble manager, Hoobey Gleason, who has claimed the title for the six-foot-three giant with the 81-inch reach, Gleason's reasoning for stripping Floyd Patterson of his title after he knocked out Ingemar Johansson in three rounds, but his voice is clear and loud.

McMurtry's manager, his father, is particularly upset because his son didn't make the top 10 in the National Boxing Association ratings after he whipped Gene Carlo of Toronto here Oct. 17. Ring was more impressed, giving him No. 9 among Patterson's contenders. Chuvalo had been No. 10 but was dropped.

"I'm ready for the champ right now," said McMurtry. He is 26 and owns a fancy left that has been compared in an orgy of enthusiasm to Gene Tunney's.

Against Chuvalo, McMurtry from Tacoma, Wash., was able to call the shots after being staggered in the first round. The left jab carved out an easy unquestionable decision. It was McMurtry's fourth straight win of the year after dropping a decision to Will Besmanoff Feb. 4.

McMurtry's career record is 30-2-1. He has scored 23 knockouts and lost only to Besmanoff and to Willie Pastrano.

Nino, rated No. 2 by Ring and No. 4 by the NBA, is really taking a chance. After dropping a questionable decision to Alex Miteff in February, he has won eight in a row. He hasn't fought since Aug. 15, but is a 7-10-5 favorite.

Bulldogs Snap Trappers 4-3

NORTH BAY (CP)— Windsor Bulldogs came up with a three goal third period Thursday night to post a 4-3 win over North Bay Trappers in the Ontario Senior A circuit.

The last-place Trappers, who now trail Bulldogs by eight points in the league standings, grabbed a 2-0 lead in the first period but couldn't meet the pace in the final minutes.

Wally Pawliyshyn broke the ice for Windsor early in the third period but North Bay stormed back with Ken Gribbons scoring to make it 3-1. Then Windsor crammed two goals into a four minute onslaught and pewed up the decision.

Murray Costello, ex - Trapper John Ulendale and Joe Lukacs got the other Windsor goals. Gribbons got two for North Bay with Gerry Cabana getting the other.

Weird, Delightful Plays Marked College Games

NEW YORK (AP) — The 1958 football season is the one on which United States college coaches took free rein to their imaginations and came up with a weird and wonderful assortment of offences.

Army's celebrated lonely end attack, the increased use of flip type offences and slot backs were just some manifestations of the freedom.

Such words as wide - open, spreads and multiple offence cropped up frequently in the replies.

But the last couple of years the trend most frequently noted by the experts has been toward session football and conservative but rather colorless split-T offences.

The methods used to open up college football varied considerably and the answers of the experts varied even more. But the general idea they got over was that coaches no longer relied upon one particular type of style of play—especially those who had been using standard versions of T formations.

NEW YORK (AP) — Harry Wills, heavyweight boxing's Panther in the 1920s, is ailing and undergoing a series of exploratory tests in hospital. Mount Vernon authorities said Thursday night Wills, 66, was in fair condition. Wills had more than 100 fights in a 21-year career that began in 1911 in his hometown of New Orleans.

Peewee Reese Quits Play, Named Coach

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Capt. Harold Pee Wee Reese was named Thursday to the coaching staff of Los Angeles Dodgers and apparently ended the career of the brilliant playing careers in major league baseball is at an end.

Vice-President E. J. Buzzie Bavasi announced the shift from the active list of the 37-year-old veteran, and added:

"We are proud of the wonderful record of Pee Wee Reese. He could have remained on the active roster for another major league club. But the Dodgers, in rebuilding their club, must make room for another young star."

The little Louisville, Ky., slugger, who holds all major records except the all time active years with the Dodgers, joins Chuck Dressen, Cory Snyder and Rube Walker in the coaching corps assisting manager Walt Alston.

"It won't be surprising to see Reese back in action next season if an injury or a problem develops at shortstop.

Pee Wee starred in seven world series for the Dodgers, dating back to 1941, played in eight all-star games from 1943 to 1953, and was selected for the 1954 squad.

He replaced another famous Dodger, Leo Durocher, as shortstop and neither time nor talent could force him out of the job until injuries sidelined him in 1957.

His lifetime major-league batting average is .269.

He was-and is-a tremendous individual player, but a team player as well, and a gentleman on and off the playing field.

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Jake Gaudaur, one-time hard-rock centre with Hamilton Tiger-Cats and a better-than-average all-round athlete in his day, deserves special treatment from Santa Claus this Christmas.

He's the only pro football club official in the country to do something concrete about continuance of the weather - jinxed East-West all-star Shrine game.

"It is imperative that the game be played in July instead of early December," Big Jake said a couple of hours after the frigid all-star game at Hamilton earlier this month. Game proceeds go to aid shrine hospitals for crippled children and Jake declared it must be kept alive.

Football officials East and West pussy-footed around the subject of a pre-season July game. They weren't sure coaches would go for it. The risk of injury to key players was, they thought, too great.

Now comes support for Gaudaur from Dick Beddoes, fourth-high Vancouver Sun sports columnist who says the game "should not be played."

"It should be a prelude to the football season, not a kick-around after-thought." Beddoes goes on to deflate the dimension.

"Coaches insist an all - star game in July would disrupt their training camps. They overrate. Only five or six or eight-players from each club would be absent for a week for all-star preparations. (In many cases, there would be only one or three).

"Some coaches fear their stars might be hurt in the Shrine skirmish. Some stars might. You cannot forecast injuries. But there is no more chance of casualties in the Shrine game than there is in the many exhibition games every club plays.

"The chance is worth taking, it says here. It would prove football isn't all take and no give."

Fans around the Ontario Hockey League circuit who remember the dippy - doodling of Max Bentley with Chicago Black Hawks, Toronto Maple Leafs and New York Rangers should be interested to know he's still in the game.

Cam (Saskatoon Star-Phoenix) McKenzie reports that Max is making a comeback this year with Saskatoon Quakers of the Western Hockey League. "Bentley . . . was sharp as a razor on several occasions," McKenzie said of a recent game.

Coach Russ McQuarrie of the Quakers told McKenzie that Max, who quit his big-time career in 1954, will "shift WHL defencemen out of the hot spot too."

On the subject of hockey, NHL headquarters in Montreal point out that the only goalkeeper to coach an NHL team after retirement since 1917 is Hughie Lehman.

Lehman, who makes his home in Toronto, replaced Barney Stanley behind the skipper of Chicago Black Hawks for the last 12 games of the 1927-28 season. Turk Broda, Leach of Toronto Marlboros who guided the junior club to two Memorial Cup championships, was considered a contender for the Toronto job when Billy Reay was fired earlier this season, but apparently the Leafs didn't approach him.

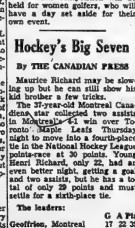
CUBS SIGN CONTRACTS

CHICAGO (AP) — Outfielder Walt Moryn and pitcher Harry Perkowski signed 1959 contracts Thursday, bringing to 17 the number of Chicago Cub players in the fold. Moryn batted .264 last season. Perkowski, 36, a lefty, won 12 of 16 decisions with Fort Worth.

On the Tracks

ARCADIA, Calif. (AP) — Round Table, "three-of-the-year" for 1958, has been assigned 123 pounds for the $145,000-guaranteed Santa Anita Handicap, second highest impost in the history of the 1 1-4-mile classic.

Racing Secretary Frank E. Jimmy Kilroe set the figure Thursday, along with weights for other candidates for the rich purse.



Second-highest weight of 119 pounds went to Maine Chance Farm's Jewel's Reward, a coming four-year-old who defeated Kentucky Derby winner Tim Tam in the Flamingo Stakes last winter, only to be disqualified for a foul in the stretch.

Round Table's 123 is the highest for the Santa Anita Handicap since Calumet's Citation raced with 123 pounds and finished second to the Irish-bred Noor in 1950.

Round Table, whose earnings to date are $1,336,964, won the Santa Anita last year in track record time of 1:59 4-5 with 120 pounds.

Weighed down the scale were Tempest II, with 114 pounds; Warhead 117, and Terrang, 116. Four stiglides, including Silky Sullivan, were bracketed at 114.

The race will be run Feb. 28.

Approve Plans For Best-Ball Club Title

TORONTO (CP) — Plans for a Canadian best-ball club championship have been approved by the executive of the Canadian Professional Golfers Association.

President Lou Cumming of Toronto at a meeting Thursday proposed the competition for all members of the 250 golf clubs in Canada which have CPGA pros.

It calls for 18-hole play for all member entrants from any club, with the best-ball score of each club in one day to count. The Toronto club, which will be declared Canadian champion, will be the one whose total membership has the best-ball score which is the most strokes under its own course par.

In addition to the Canadian championship, champions of each province or state will also be declared. A trophy will be presented to the championship club.

Cumming said "Clubs can name their own date for the competition, with a tentative deadline of June 15."

Each member will pay a fee of $1 and the funds will be used for the development of CPGA membership, including assistants. Cumming added.

A similar competition will be held for women golfers, who will have a day set aside for their own event.

Hockey's Big Seven

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Maurice Richard may be slowing up but he can still show his kid brother a few tricks.

The 37-year-old Montreal Canadiens' star collected two assists in Montreal's 4-1 win over Toronto Maple Leafs Thursday night to move into a fourth-place tie in the National Hockey League point race at 30 points. Young Henri Richard, only 22, had an even better night, getting a goal and two assists, but he has a total of only 29 points and must settle for a sixth-place tie.

Yanks Take Two From Italians

By WILL GRIMSLEY

PERTH, Australia (AP)—The U. S. Davis Cup tennis team swept the Italians 5-0 here over Italy in the interzone final today behind the sparkling play of Ham Richardson and a gritty rally by collegian Alex Olmedo.

Hintery, unsettled and hapless for most of the first two sets, the Peruvian - born Olmedo fought back to crush Italian champion Nicola Pietrangeli 5-7, 10-8, 6-0, 6-1 for Richardson made it an opening - day sweep with a 4-1, 6-2, 7-5 rout of Orlando Sirola. The U. S. can clinch its 15th straight appearance in the challenge round against mighty Australia with a doubles triumph Saturday. The task belongs to Richardson and Olmedo, another pair against today's losers — Pietrangeli and Sirola.

Two more singles matches will be played Sunday with today's opening round four-man swapping opponents.

The interzone winner will challenge Australia for the cup at Brisbane, Dec. 19-21.

LEAVE HOCKEY LEAGUE

EDINBURGH (CP) — Edinburgh Royals, successful on the ice but not at the gate, are dropping out of the British National Hockey League, it was announced Thursday. The decision of the Scottish club, which made its league debut this season, leaves the league with four teams — Paisley, Hockey Lions, Nottingham Panthers and Brighton Tigers.

Red Schoendienst Hopes to Play Next Season

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Milwaukee Braves' second baseman Red Schoendienst, confined to a St. Louis hospital with tuberculosis, was quoted Thursday night as saying he hopes to be discharged in March and back on the diamond by July.

"Anyway that's my thinking," Red said in an interview with Lou Chapman, baseball writer for the Milwaukee Journal.

"That's how good I feel," the 35-year-old infielder continued. "I feel so good it scares me. But we've got to wait and see how I look. My doctor is encouraging. He knows I want to get out and play and I just know I'll be able to get out of here and play again next season."

When Schoendienst's illness was diagnosed last month physicians said they did not expect him to play during the 1959 season.

ADVOCATES SERIES

EDMONTON (CP) — The University of Alberta athletic directer says that if a collegiate hockey team is going to represent Canada at the 1960 Olympics there should be a series between the East and West to decide a national champion. Dr. M. L. (Maury) Van Vliet of Edmonton, University of Alberta director of the school of physical education and athletics, said Thursday he doubts whether the University of Toronto Blues are the best collegiate team in Canada.

High School Activities

With Christmas almost upon us, there has been a flurry of festive activities at Quinte Secondary School.

To put students in the holiday spirit, the art classes under Mr. Smyth's guidance have done some interesting modern decorations throughout the school. The panes of the front doors bear patterns of candle, bell and wreath. The display case, decorated by G10C, shows four Christmas scenes of sports, the Nativity, a street scene and a bundle of Quinte spirit.

One of the most striking effects is in the hall of the new wing. The glass panels of the door show two medieval saints depicted in the style of a stained glass window. Lorne Hall, Hazel Hillgartland and Ted Spicer deserve much credit for this unusual and effective work with its traditional theme and modern treatment.

To further the holiday mood, there has been happy singing of carols in the gymnasium the last few mornings with music by the band, under the energetic direction of Mr. Schroder.

The students are showing that they have the true spirit of Christmas by providing for a needy family. From their own funds, they provided clothing and food and they have placed a box in the front hall to receive similar gifts from the students for this family.

Even the teachers have caught the jingling spirit with their gala party on Thursday night. Miss McEwen's social committee provided an interesting variety of activities, including cards and games and Mr. Cochrane directed a very popular chicken shoot.

There were also some humorous playlets provided by those staff members with a flair for dramatics, and these added to the gaiety of the evening. Santa Claus made his traditional appearance with presents for all. A bountiful lunch was served by Miss McEwen and her assistants, and there was time for holiday chatter over the coffee cups and mince tarts. A special gift was presented to Mr. J. Musgrove, who is leaving his position as vice - principal of QSS to begin his duties in the new year as principal of Moira Secondary School.

With so many innovations at school this week, it did not seem unusual for the boys of G11 and G12 shop option and the girls of Grades 11 and 12 Home Economics option to switch classes, causing some confusion, to be sure, but creating a lot of fun.

The girls donned smocks of their fathers' old shirts and entered Mr. Nightingale's mysterious realm of the metal shop. Here they observed the operation of standard metal working machines such as the lathe, drill press, milling machine and the welding apparatus as demonstrated by Bob LaRocque, Jens Hansen and Stan Draper. In addition the girls made aluminum bracelets of which they were quite proud. They agreed that their work was fun, but slightly dirty.

The boys were divided into two groups for their visit to the Home Economics room.

One group, under the direction of Beth Clarke and Julia Savage, operated sewing machines and sewed samples of various types of seams. The second group prepared and served a full course meal for the members of the class. The menu consisted of Swedish meat balls, mashed potatoes, buttered carrots, with apple crisp for dessert. Miss M. Vittle reported that the boys were very skilful at their work and left the kitchen in apple crap order. For both boys and girls, this exchange of classes was sbobh educational and enjoyable.

The tractor club turned its first organizational furrow this week by electing its officers. Ken Claus was named president and Ken Rowe secretary-treasurer. Bradford Fireman. was burned when a piece of blazing tarpaper fell on him. Bradford is 20 miles north of Toronto.

Fact-Finding Mission Report Will Be Given

WASHINGTON (CP) — Representative Frank Coffin (Dem., Me.) says the House of Representatives foreign affairs committee plans to issue this week a voluminous report covering virtually every facet of Canadian-American relations.

Coffin said Thursday the report, expected to cover 40 to 50 printed pages and to be made public Sunday night, will be based on the 7,000-mile trip he and Congressman Brooks Hays (Dem., Ark.) made across Canada in the fall as a fact-finding mission for the congressional committee.

Among other things, said Coffin, the report will deal with wheat, oil, lead and zinc tariffs, business relations, cultural relations, transportation, power and fisheries.

The two congressmen were the co-authors of the Coffin - Hays congressional report of last spring which criticized the U.S. government, the state department and their press for a "patronizing" attitude toward Canada and things Canadian.

That report recommended, as a result of which 10 U.S. committees could take to improve relations, including establishment of consultative committees of the Canadian Parliament and the American Congress.

The committees since have been set up and will hold an exploratory meeting early in January.

CROSBY ADOPTS SON

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Dennis Crosby, Bing Crosby's son of singer Bing Crosby, became a father Wednesday by adoption. Dennis, a disk jockey, adopted seven-year-old Gregory, his wife's son by a former marriage. Mrs. Crosby, former showgirl Pat Sheehan, is expecting a child in January.

Gary Moxom of G10E, has been appointed by the Ontario Boys' Work Board to represent the United Church of Belleville in the Older Boys' Parliament to be held at McMaster University from December 28-31.

Although all the students and teachers have enjoyed the merry aspects of Christmas with its parties and gift-giving, Quinte did not forget the true meaning of Christmas. The Christmas pageant of the Nativity scene, enhanced by carols and hymns of the choir and the beauty of the Christmas story as told in the Scriptures was presented on Friday afternoon. The whole school attended and participated in this service before breaking up for the holidays. The Bible Club, under the guidance of Mr. Matthews, once again presented this pageant with simplicity and dignity.

And now in the final words of this column for 1958, the students and staff of Quinte would like to wish each other their friendly rivals at BCIVS, and the citizens of Belleville, a most old-fashioned Merry Christmas and hearty greetings for the new year.

Nuclear Tests Talks Recess

GENEVA (AP) — The three-nation talks on a nuclear test ban adjourned today for a two-week Christmas recess.

At the last meeting before the recess, U.S. delegate James J. Wadsworth submitted a technical program for the staffing and control of a worldwide chain of observer posts. It will be discussed after the conference resumes Jan. 6.

Many serious obstacles remain to be overcome before the agreement can be reached on anything so detailed as the organization of observer posts.

The Russians have shown no inclination to give the observer posts the truly international, impartial basis which the United States and Britain regard as essential. Soviet delegate Semyon Tsarapkin has been equally negative toward the permanent mobile inspection teams demanded by the West.

The conference has approved sections of a draft treaty for a controlled prohibition of nuclear weapon tests. These provide a framework for an international control and inspection system to prevent secret violations.

The agreed articles, hammered out in seven weeks of hard bargaining, have no validity until the whole treaty is completed, signed and ratified.

Holland Landing Warehouse Burns

BRADFORD, Ont. (CP) — A three-hour fire Thursday night ripped through a nearby produce storage firm, destroying packaging, machinery and thousands of dollars worth of farm produce.

Fifty men packaging potatoes, carrots and onions escaped unscathed from the burning building at Holland Landing near this village 31 miles north of Toronto.

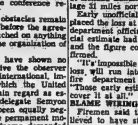
Early unofficial estimates placed the loss at $400,000 but fire department officials said no official figure had yet been made and the figure could not be confirmed.

"It's impossible to tell what the loss will run into," a Bradford fire department official said. "Those early estimates may not cover it at all."

BLAME WIRING

Firemen said the blaze is believed to have started in faulty wiring to a block heater element. The fire destroyed the Everard Farms Limited building, owned by Latchman Brothers of Toronto, and a trailer unit worth $9,000.

The Federal Farms Limited personnel were packaging potatoes, carrots and onions when flames spurted through the 300-foot - long building, destroying part of the concrete block walls.



Firemen from Bradford, Queensville and Holland Landing kept the fire from spreading to buildings nearby.

Edward Bulpell, a 21-year-old

Don't Go Looking for Smell With Match, It May Be Gas

By THOMAS VIRANT
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO (CP) — If you smell a skunk in your house don't go looking for it with a match. It may be natural gas.

This is one of the factors that make natural gas more dangerous than manufactured gas, says Arthur R. Crozier, chairman of the Ontario fuel board. People are not used to the smell and may not recognize it easily if there are in recently - converted areas.

In Southwestern Ontario, where natural gas has been used up to about 30 years, the danger is smaller.

Mr. Crozier said in an interview that if there are equal amounts of the two gases in two rooms equal in size, natural gas is many times more explosive than manufactured gas.

There is also a greater danger with natural gas when there is a leak outside or in the ground because the same volume of natural gas produces more than twice as much heat when ignited as manufactured gas.

Most explosions have occurred in areas in Ontario where there are old cast iron pipes in the ground, he said.

Cast iron pipes are still used in Toronto, Ottawa, Brockville, Cornwall, Trafalgar Township, Oakville, Bronte, Georgetown, Milton, Acton, all near Toronto, and in Burlington, near Hamilton.

Cast iron pipes are brittle and break when there is movement

He said the matter is serious but natural gas can be used safely. It depends on keeping tab on the practices of the various public utilities commissions, observing standard and generally closer inspection.

There was no provincial inspection until 1954 and the inspection of some pipes and valves in Ontario was bad, Mr. Crozier said.

Natural gas now is supplied to all municipalities in Ontario except Peterborough and Sault Ste. Marie. They have propane gas and coke oven gas, respectively. Peterborough is to be converted in a month or two, Mr. Crozier said.

Astrological Forecast

By CARROLL RIGHTER

Saturday, December 20

Aries (March 21 to April 19) — By first concentrating and planning your day, you can then follow through with determination and make this a great day of accomplishment. Impress other persons with your true friendliness, and you will inspire theirs. P. M. rest.

Taurus (April 20 to May 20) — A fine day for exchanging gifts with comrades, or for collecting monies, owed and paying bills. Later, get together with congenial pals and have a nice evening of fun and telling jokes. Nothing like a joke to relieve tensions.

Gemini (May 21 to June 21) — Attend to any political or charitable work that has been neglected of late, and thus help raise your prestige immeasurably. P. M. entertain your partners and beloved comrades, for they are very tired and will appreciate this.

Moon Children (June 22 to July 21) — Pals understand your greatest qualities today and quickly give support now; however, you must be equally interested in helping them in some way. A word of praise, a cheerful mien — these are wondrous things. P.M. excellent for social time.

Leo (July 23 to Aug. 21) — Don't grumble about having to work on Saturday, or put in extra hours, but do your best work and gain approval and later benefits thereby. P. M. give your boss a break. Cook him a good dinner and let him have fun with the kiddies.

Virgo (Aug. 22 to Sept. 23) — Get your important money and job matters, housework done early, then be off to a charming spot or sports roundup for a spending good time. You may learn a great deal thereby and also pick up plenty of vital information.

Libra (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) — Cement better relations with all associates first, then put in motion whatever policies have been decided upon and you are sure of with them quickly. P. M. you now understand personal relationships much better.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) — Put duties behind you quickly, do shopping. Later it will be possible to be with delightful and intelligent partners for an enjoyable afternoon and evening. Get into civic affairs, too. Activity is the keynote today.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) — Morning is the ideal time to attend to personal matters, such as wardrobe and hair, treatments, etc. After lunch, be active in business affairs and get approval of associates, friends. Deal with authorities.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) — Put abode in perfect order during the morning. Then the afternoon is free for interesting affairs that will ultimately bring you greater prosperity, or for taking in the sports and recreations impossible to you during busy week.

Aquarius (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) — Many chances today for you to run out and buy figurines, gifts of all sorts as Christmas presents. Then be sure there is perfect order around the house and you have added the touches that increase charm of home life. Rest in P.M.

Pisces (Feb. 20 to March 20) — Set up a more flexible and practical budget for yourself early this morning. Then look after any health problems. Latter part of day is fine for doing last-minute shopping that is a must. Don't neglect this.

If your child is born today ... The child born today is the sweet type of youngster who soon steals the heart of all. So, it is important you teach your progeny as early as possible to become self-sufficient, or the childhood coddling will mar the rest of his or her life. Thus you start your youngster on a wonderful career that brings wealth and there will be much generosity to family and kin shown.

In its modern fleet and trained personnel lies the strength of today's Royal Canadian Navy. HMCS Margaree, at left, is a proud example of the Canadian-designed and built anti-submarine ships of a fleet which this year saw service in waters across the world. At right, top, is HMCS Bonaventure, at Malta during fall NATO exercises in the Mediterranean. Below her are HMCS ships Skeena, Fraser and Margaree at Saigon, South Viet Nam, during a spring training cruise to the Far East. Typical of the younger personnel who man the ships of the fleet are: centre, top, Middshipman Mark L. Crofton, 20, a 1958 honor graduate form HMCS Venture, junior officer training establishment, and centre, bottom, Ldg. Sea. Donald B. Richardson, 23, one of the RCN men selected to serve in the Royal Yacht Britannia during Her Majesty the Queen's 1959 visit to Canada. (National Defence Photo).

11 Ocean Vessels Move 60 Miles Behind Breakers

MONTREAL (CP) — Eleven ocean ships moved 60 miles downstream Thursday in a cautious procession, dark dots against the flat white countryside and the frozen St. Lawrence River.

Escorted by the icebreakers Ernest Lapointe and N. B. MacLean, they left icy berths that had held them for five days at Lasorale, 30 miles downriver from Montreal, and sheltered for the night at Trois-Rivieres beyond Lake St. Peter.

Ahead of them is a hazardous 70 miles to Quebec City, then 650 miles through the St. Lawrence estuary and the Gulf of St. Lawrence.

The vessels were trapped last Saturday as they attempted the downstream run from Montreal. The icebreaker, D'Iberville, Canada's most powerful, sprung them Thursday.

19 STILL TRAPPED

But 19 other ocean ships were still trapped in Montreal harbor by a 16-mile jam of rafted ice extending from Montreal Island to Cap St. Michael.

The D'Iberville was to attack that jam today, and the weatherman promised warmer weather to help her.

Today the mercury was to rise to a forecast 30 degrees — any higher would cause a fresh thaw and from shore ice breaking free.

BOUNTY REINSTATED

WINDSOR (CP)—Essex County council has reinstated a $5 bounty on foxes discontinued nine months ago when hunters were alleged to be bringing in pelts from neighboring counties, thus collecting a double bounty. Fear of the spread of rabies into the country prompted the move, recommended by council's agricultural committee. Council was told neighboring Kent and Elgin counties will slit the ears of the foxes on which they have paid the bounty.

Supreme Court Takes Power From Policy Chief

OTTAWA (CP)—The authority of Montreal's police chief to approve restaurant licences before they are granted has been taken away by the Supreme Court of Canada.

The court ruled in a five-to-three decision Thursday that a provision in a Montreal by-law was constitutionally invalid since it represented a delegation to the police chief of powers belonging only to city council.

This provision of the restaurant licensing by-law was employed by Pacifique (Pax) Plante, former assistant Montreal police director, during his anti-vice crusade in 1955 to enforce provincial laws governing legal hours of serving liquor in restaurants.

The deadline for serving liquor is 2 a.m. weekdays and midnight Saturdays, provincial laws stipulate.

The Canadian Press erroneously reported Thursday that the judgment ruled invalid a municipal closing by-law governing restaurants that sell liquor with meals.

The judgment was on an appeal by operators of Vic's Restaurant Incorporated of Montreal, licensed by the Quebec liquor commission to serve drinks with meals but refused a licence by the city to operate a restaurant.

The court ruled that the restaurant was improperly refused the city permit.

Effort to End Newspaper Strike Fails

NEW YORK (AP) — Mayor Robert F. Wagner and three international and city mediation officials meet today to discuss the nine-day strike against nine city newspapers.

Peace talks broke down Wednesday. Groups representing publishers and the striking newspaper union failed to agree on a resumption of negotiations as they met with federal mediators.

"We see no point in an early meeting," a spokesman for the publishers said.

The Jones children asked their parents for a record-player for Christmas, but when Mrs. Jones heard that her mother would soon be visiting, the children offered to go without their present if their grandmother could come to see them.

Mr. Jones obtained a loan from a fellow worker to help finance the trip.

Mrs. Hodgson lives in England with her only other child, Mrs. Pamela Bailey of Bradford, Yorkshire, who has two children, aged seven and three.

During the reunion at the airport, Mrs. Jones told her mother: "I was just all shaking on the bus to Montreal for fear you'd wonder where I was."

Mrs. Jones had been told the plane was due today and had learned only at noon Thursday that her mother was due to arrive early Thursday night.

"You needn't have worried, Elsie," smiled Mrs. Hodgson. "It's one of the best Christmas presents I ever had."

"I can't say anything more than that I'm very happy."

Mrs. Hodgson brought each of her Canadian grandchildren a Christmas present.

"Torches (flashlights) and toy guns for the boys, manicure sets for the girls and a doll for the baby."

Christmas Celebrations Will Glow in Dark, Steely Cold Of Many Northern Outposts

By ARCH MacKENZIE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Christmas cheer will glow Dec. 25 in the dark and steely cold of the Arctic, warmed with food aplenty, special worship and often the stomping square-dance beat of scaldish-shod feet.

Celebrations range from the remote weather station at Alert, squatting near land's end on Ellesmere Island about 550 miles from the North Pole, down through the archipelago into the sub-Arctic regions of the provinces.

From Tuktoyaktuk on the western Arctic coast to Pangnirtung on Baffin Island in the east, many a remote mission settlement's population will swell with the arrival of outlying Eskimo families.

PROVIDE HOT FOOD

Bubbling pots will provide stew, beans and other hot fare to go with quantities of tea, cocoa, bitter coffee and candy. There will be special Roman Catholic and Anglican observance of Christmas worship.

Once cleared stretches of ice, there will be dog sled races, contests to choose the best crackers of the long rawhide dog whips, and other games.

Flying Boxcars of the RCAF Air Transport Command left Edmonton and Toronto as usual in December, loaded with Christmas mail, Christmas trees, gifts and other Yuletide essentials to be delivered by air drop to remote weather and radar line posts or isolated communities.

Many of the North's 12,000 Eskimos, with no traditional feast days of their own culture have adopted the idea of Christmas festivities with gusto.

PLAN TURKEY DINNER

At Rankin Inlet on the west coast of Hudson Bay, site of a nickel mine 140 miles below the Arctic Circle, about 400 Eskimos and 100 whites plan a roast turkey dinner, complete with Santa Claus and a square dance to old tunes provided by two melodeons.

Across the bay at Great Whale River, a radar site, RCAF personnel will hold a hangar party for 400 Eskimos and Indians.

The same type of celebration is customary at Frobisher Bay on the southern end of Baffin Island, an international airport and radar site where United States and RCAF personnel contribute to the fun.

Generally, about half the outlying Eskimo population tries to get to the nearest settlement for Christmas, joining the missionary, the RCMP constable, the northern service officer the trading post factor, the nurse and school teacher.

Certain Workers Will Accept Inco Pact At Meeting

Three-Year Agreement Closes 87-Day Strike

TORONTO (CP) — A 12-man union negotiating team headed back to Sudbury Friday night, confident of winning membership approval of a strike-setting agreement reached with International Nickel Company officials.

The agreement, ending the long and costly walkout by nearly 13,000 at Inco plants in Sudbury and Port Colborne, will be put before mass membership meetings of the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers (Ind.) Sunday.

Terms of the three-year pact were not disclosed but there were reports that it provides about 11 cents an hour in wage increases spread over the contract period, plus several welfare benefits.

Settlement came on the 87th day of the strike and the fourth day of government-sponsored talks. The parties were believed to have made concessions under a formula advanced by Labor Minister Starr.

"I can't tell you how happy I am," Starr said in announcing the success.

A union statement said the agreement provides for some new gains and greater benefits than previously had been made possible only by the determined stand of the strikers of Sudbury and Port Colborne.

Inco spokesman declined comment.

The settlement was believed to include a $25 Christmas bonus which Inco had earlier announced it wouldn't pay to strikers but would pay to employees on hour week. Before the strike Inco was working a 32-hour week, 4th critical of the Canadian Congress of Labor for failing to organize assistance for strikers.

Mr. Tilbaudi said his union would "go back into the CLC, which expelled mine-mill in 1949 because of Communist leadership and for failure to yield jurisdictional rights to the United Steelworkers of America (CLC.)

The steelworkers stood by during this strike hoping to pick up the pieces," Mr. Tilbault said, "but they like vultures."

Crucial issue in the dispute was the union's insistence on a wage increase during the first year of the contract. Inco had offered a three-year agreement with increases in the second and third years.

It was believed this was resolved by a small increase of pay-ing two men $3,000 in a conspiracy to kidnap and murder her son's Canadian-born wife.

The wife, Mrs. Olga Duncan, 30, has not been seen since June 17. She and her husband, Frank Duncan, 30, separated two weeks after their marriage last July. Duncan has said he believes she is still alive.

Charged with conspiracy to commit murder and kidnapping are Mrs. Elizabeth Duncan, 54, Augustine Baldanada, 25, and Moya Baldanada, 24. Bail was set at $100,000 each. All were arrested under arrest on other charges.

Moya and Baldanada were arrested earlier this week after police impounded a car they rented from a woman acquaintance. Detectives said they found traces of what they believed to be human blood on the upholstery.

The complaints, filed Friday by District Attorney Vern Thomas, assert that Mrs. Duncan and the two men entered her daughter-in-law's apartment shortly before midnight Nov. 17 and kidnapped her.

Thomas quoted a cafe owner, Espero Gonzalez, as saying that Moya and Baldanada appeared at his home later that night in disheveled and bloody clothing and told him:

"We have Mrs. Duncan's job done; they can't find the witch, but they'll be beyond a pipe."

Baldanada then was quoted as had to hit that witch. That witch is determined."

Police have ordered workmen to dig excavations for a swimming in front of the missing woman's apartment. The excavation has been filled in, but final paving of the street hasn't been completed.

Mrs. Duncan, in nearby Vernon Jail, also accused of faking an annulment by posing as her own daughter-in-law. Baldanada and Moya are in jail here.

The charges filed Friday eliminated a month-long investigation in the case of Mrs. Olga Kupcyn Duncan, 30, born near Dauphin, Man., the wife of Mrs. Elizabeth

1,500 American Airlines Pilots Out on Strike

CHICAGO (AP) — A strike by some 1,500 pilots today shut down American Airlines, a grounding in second of the nation's major air carriers in the U.S. on the eve of the holiday travel rush.

The pilots, members of the Air Line Pilots' Association, struck American at midnight Friday night.

Negotiations in Chicago broke down with an ominous statement from an ALPA spokesman that "it looks like a long, hard strike."

The American strike, following an 18-month dispute, posed a headache for the Christmas season air passenger travel.

Eastern Airlines is in the throes of a 36-day strike, initiated Nov. 24 when flight engineers and machinists walked out over wage demands.

In New York, American Airlines spokesman said the pilots, one hour before the strike deadline, had rejected a demand for a 75-hour work month instead of an 85-hour month for pilots on jet aircraft.

C. R. Smith, president of American said in a statement:

"No responsible air line could agree to the unreasonable demands the Air Line Pilots Association. The demands are arbitrary and unjustified. There is no good reason for a reduction in hours. At this time, some of the pilots are flying 10 days a month, with 20 days a month off, and it would be difficult to improve these working conditions."

The airline announced that all flights were cancelled through next Friday. An embargo was placed on all air freight and air express until further notice.

The company said it would keep open ticket and reservation offices to help passengers arrange alternate travel arrangements.

An American airlines spokesman said that as much as one-third of U.S. daily air travel is affected by the two strikes now in progress.

Stern Sentences Handed Out

MONTREAL (CP) — Two convicts who pleaded guilty to armed robbery and theft without violence were sentenced Friday by session Judge Orville Boyer to penitentiary terms of 30 and 25 years.

Court officials could recall no equal sentences in recent years for similar crimes.

Rene Sauve, alias Real Joseph Sauve, native of Valleyfield, was given four-concurrent 30 - year sentences. Charges are for theft with violence and the others for armed robbery.

James Donald Milley, alias Jim Milton, 26, was given three concurrent 25-year sentences, also for theft with violence and the other two for armed robbery.

Judge Boyer made the sale as the prisoners as he imposed sentences, said: "You had loaded potential assassins, roaming the city with gun in hand, robbing and beating."

THE WEATHER

TORONTO (CP) Synopsis: — Temperatures dropped rapidly overnight as readings of below zero were reported throughout Southern Ontario this morning. The only exceptions were areas between the east end of Lake Erie and even here they dropped to 10 above. The centre of this cold air lies to the west of the Great Lakes, and is expected to pass to the south of the lower lakes early Sunday.

A patchy area of cloud and snow is expected to work its way southeastward to the west of this system, to give some light snow over southwestern Ontario Sunday.

FOUR MEMBERS OF RCAF KILLED NEAR EXETER

Four Others Injured In 2-Car Crash

EXETER (CP) — Four members of the RCAF were killed and three others severely injured in a head-on collision early today a mile and a quarter south of here on Highway 4.

The four dead men were in one car travelling south on the highway, while two of the injured, a man and a woman, were in the other vehicle.

The crash occurred just south of a high spot in the straight stretch of road. The mass of tangled wreckage backed 1,000 up along the highway for more than a mile.

SEATS WRENCHED FREE

Seats of both cars were torn free by the terrific impact.

Both motors were pushed far enough back to buckle the floor boards to an upright position. The fenders and hood collapsed like an accordion—right back to the windshield.

Provincial police at first believed the RCAF men were on duty. Clearing away the rubble, Constable Ross Goddard found two more bodies beneath the seats.

ROUND ON HIGHWAY

One of the five men in the car travelling south was found lying on the highway, apparently thrown through a window.

Provincial constable and a private care rushed the injured to hospitals in Exeter and London while a hearse took the dead men away.

The woman was taken to St. Joseph's Hospital and the men to Victoria Hospital. Both had all were later removed to Westminster Hospital by an air force ambulance.

The Dinning Funeral Home in Exeter identified the dead airmen as Leading aircraftsman Ronald Bell, 20, of Sudbury Local 598, said he was sure the membership would approve the terms. "It's a good settlement," he said.

Names Withheld

Both he and Nels Thibault, Canadian president of Mine-Mill, were critical of the Canadian Congress of Labor for failing to organize assistance for strikers.

Charge Mother Paid 2 Men $3,000 To Kidnap and Murder Wife of Son

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — The mother of a Santa Barbara lawyer has been accused of paying two men $3,000 in a conspiracy to kidnap and murder her son's Canadian-born wife.

LISTENS TO SATELLITE MESSAGE

President Eisenhower listens closely to a recording of his own voice as broadcast from America's new 41½ ton satellite orbiting in outer space. The broadcast of Eisenhower's Christmas peace message from the satellite was picked up at Cape Canaveral. It was recorded there, relayed to the Pentagon, then to the White House. There the President heard the playback of the message while seated in the office of Press Secretary James Hagerty. Associate Press Secretary Anne Wheaton stands by.

Sudbury Breathes Huge Sigh Of Relief as Strike Settled

SUDBURY (CP) — There is no extra cash in the wallets and handbags of Sudbury district shoppers, but there are thousands of happy smiles and quips on the faces in the streets today.

It has been that way since Friday morning when word was received from Toronto that the strike against the International Nickel Company was settled.

The strike had lasted 87 days, the costliest and longest industrial dispute in Canada this year.

It did not have anything like the catastrophic economic, social and psychiatric effects on the population that were described in some reports published outside Sudbury. But it was felt. No community can lose $1,000,000 a week in buying power and not feel it.

Even with the four-day week that was in effect when the strike was called Sept. 24, the average Inco worker was making just above $70 a week.

It will be 13 weeks since the strike was called before any of the men are back at work. By that time, Christmas the average wage figure as a yardstick, each worker will have lost more than $900 in wages.

When the men will return to work is not known. A previous Inco announcement had stated that some might be called back to job within four days. But the

Take Close Look at U.S. Seaway Shipping Subsidies

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian shipping interests are taking a close look at possible U.S. government subsidies if American deep sea vessels using the St. Lawrence Seaway when it opens next April, are treated differently from Canadian ships.

John J. Mahoney, manager of the Dominion Marine Association, said in Toronto Friday that such a U.S. subsidy would not affect Canadian shipping.

"It would be different if we had a deep sea fleet," he said.

W. J. Fisher, manager in Ottawa of the Canadian Shipowners Association, commented, however, that the U.S. government pays American operators in a competitive position because Canadian shipping interests could not match under present government policy.

Because Canada has no Canadian flag coastwise ships, Mr. Fisher, it will have to sit back and watch the ships of other countries reap the benefits of a seaway Canada paid two-thirds of the cost to build.

At the other hand, a federal government official said he can foresee no effect on Canadian lake carriers, since any U.S. subsidies would be paid for shipment of U.S. goods from American lake ports to overseas destinations.

But in Montreal, a past president of the Shipping Federation of Canada saw economic dangers for this country if subsidized American ships call at Canadian ports for cargo.

The comments arose from Washington news report that U.S. ocean shipping firms have filed claims for huge subsidies to government subsidies on cargo routes between the Great Lakes and European, Mediterranean and Scandinavian ports.

Under the Merchant Marine Act of 1936, the U.S. government pays huge subsidies to U.S. shippers to permit them to compete with foreign vessels able to operate more cheaply.

One American subsidy application is for a proposed cargo route between Chicago and Europe that would include Toronto and Montreal as ports of call.

Eric Reford, president of the Reford Corporation Company Limited, Montreal, said American-subsidized shipping will hurt Canadian

INTENSE COLD WAVE STRIKES MOST OF CANADA

Ontario Readings Coldest of Winter

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Most of Canada remained gripped in bone-chilling weather today as cold air swept down from the Arctic regions. Only the coastal centres escaped temperatures that hovered around zero or dipped well below it.

Early morning temperatures in Southern Ontario were the coldest this winter, except for a few localities under the lake.

In Toronto the morning temperature was four degrees below zero, colder than the last Feb. 18, when it was eight below. At Hamilton it was three below, London seven below, Ottawa and Peterborough 16 below, Trenton 18 below, North Bay 18 below and Sudbury 17 below.

FEW ABOVE

Moosonee, eight above and St. Catharines were among the few Ontario centres to have temperatures above zero. The most severe weather was reported north of Ottawa, 32 below, and White River 23 below. The mercury went to 32 below at White River overnight.

The weather forecaster said the cold air mass is expected to start to climb a little in the afternoon.

The 65-foot Atlas, visible to the naked eye, is the brightest satellite of the U.S. on some of its rounds, flying at 17,000 miles an hour and out of radio control from the United States as to orbit followed more southerly trails.

The borzer - sized satellite is the Douglas Cloudburst satellite of San Diego, Calif., at 7:03 p.m. EST.

Roy Johnson, head of the defence department's advanced research agency, which figured it would be 1 p.m. today by the time Atlas soared within range of four army tracking stations across the South. Some stations have the code equipment to trigger Atlas' tape recorder.

CAN ERASE AND REPLACE

Johnson said it will be decided by then whether to touch off Eisenhower's pre-launching recording a few more times or go to the next step—erase and send up another message for playback.

The plan was to send back the first message before further use until after Christmas.

ALPA officials indicated they wanted more precise information on Atlas' travels by the time it is to be used for recording. They hoped for a total 72-hour orbit data sometime today or tomorrow. The first official predictions of the satellite's future path during its estimated 20-day life.

As of latest word on Saturday, Atlas was "in the geographic globe every" 161 minutes, 14.4 min. a day, at heights from 114 to 928 miles. Its track ranged from 32 degrees north—roughly Highway 17 across Ontario to Savanah, Ga.—to 32 degrees south of Sydney.

Eisenhower's Voice Broadcast From Satellite

Plan to Erase Message Then Send up Another

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States Atlas soared high around the world today as its plastic disclosed to again broadcast from outer space President Eisenhower's Yuletide message of goodwill.

They said it would be early afternoon before they decide about retriggering their talking satellite to broadcast the tape-recorded message.

Atlas at 3:15 p.m. Friday, while zipping at 17,000 m.p.h. over Cape Canaveral, Fla., rebroadcast as scheduled a short Eisenhower message recorded Tuesday and carried aloft in the nose cone.

The next time the satellite dips flare they have enough initial data in hand, will be to erase the message and send up another to be released by remote control as the four-ton Atlas continues its travels.

REVOLUTIONARY PROJECT

This second phase of the pioneering project promised to point the way to a revolution in communications. It could mean broadcasts of sound and pictures to anywhere in the world through a satellite network.

More Odd-Shaped Atomic Furnaces Will Soon Dot British Countryside

LONDON (AP) — They are an eight, three - storey steel and concrete demijohns which loom above the ancient countryside of Britain, like monsters from the heart of an Englishman, for they point to a new British leadership in the atom.

In many ways, Great Britain's nuclear power program is already finished during the half - century. But the English are keeping their lead in the race by rapidly developing and mapping a future powered by the atom.

For the last two years, power from one atomic station—famed Calder Hall—has pulsed into factories and homes, turning the wheels, lighting streets and cooking meals.

A network of these stations is planned, stretching from the bleak north of Scotland to Sussex in the south. The second will open Jan. 1. Four more are under construction. In eight years there will be a dozen of them turning out a quarter of all the electricity British needs.

It's the same old electricity. It doesn't make lights shine any brighter or the toast radioactive. Basically, an atomic power station works on the same principle as any conventional station.

Instead of using coal or oil to fire its boilers, it uses a nuclear reactor. The heat to run boilers is produced by nuclear fission—the splitting of atoms.

Because with the new stations under construction, Calder Hall is the "baby" among the atomic watts.

A new plant rising at Bradwell in Essex will have a production of 300,500 kilowatts when it is completed in 1960. One at Hunterston will be dwarfed.

When the network of 12 stations is completed in 1966, it will generate between 5,000,000 and 6,000,000 kilowatts.

The stations will cost £1,000,000 each. Another 18,000,000 tons of coal a year while reducing its fuel bills. And eventually, the British housewife's fuel bill will be lower.

But the atomic power plants will bring no sudden prosperity. It will take scientists at least 12 years more before they can produce atom - made power more cheaply than through conventional processes.

Shotgun-Armed Posse Traps Two Bandits

TORONTO (CP) — A pair of bungling bandits were reduced to helpless confusion Friday when they found themselves pursued by a 13-man walking posse armed with their own shotguns.

The two entered a construction office in suburban York Township, held up president Colin Grant with a sawed-off shotgun and snatched 24 pay envelopes from a desk.

The envelopes held $22.22 in silver. About $4,000 in bills which had not yet been placed in the envelopes lay in the desk.

The men tied Mr. Grant and fled. He quickly freed himself and called three employees in the area. One slapped a motorcycle and trailed the two men. The others joined the procession on foot.

At one point 2 men and the car were following the two suspects, by now becoming completely confused. Then the two tossed the unloaded shotgun over a fence. A 13-year-old boy picked it up and gave it to the man following.

The suspects got into a car and sat there until two armed detectives arrested them. The tracking party watched the arrest, then disappeared.

Douglas Fraser, 28, and Metro Pretula, 24, were charged with armed robbery.

Possible Bomb Caused Death Of Five Persons

MEXICO CITY (AP)—Police investigated today the possibility that a bomb caused an explosion that killed five persons in a crowded restaurant and cafe.

Thirteen persons were critically injured in the blast and one of them was believed to be an American or a Canadian. Ten dead persons are believed to have been a U.S. citizen.

The explosion occurred at La Ronda, a popular tourist attraction in the hotel and night club district of this city.

Hospital attendants said one of those who escaped had a fractured skull and was not expected to live had been identified only as a blond citizen of the U.S. or Canadian citizen.

Police Gen. Luis Cueto said thre. of the dead were restaurant employees, two of them musicians. The others identified only by a ring with the initial RCAF were Canadian air force employee also.

Cueto said there was an unidentified woman who was not a Mexican. U.S. consul Charles Credeau said he thought he was an American but this was uncertain.

A party of Cubans was among the patrons, leading police to speculate that a few might have been intended for them. Among them was Cuban President Fulgencio Batista of Cuba and his rebel opponent Fidel Castro live in Mexico City.

School Board Seeks Approval Of Procedure

The Belleville Public School Board will make formal application to the Ontario Municipal Board to have that body confirm the procedure used for the election of public school board trustees at the Belleville municipal election on December 1st.

At that time, due to the amalgamation of two city wards and the wish not to unseat any board members whose terms of office had not been completed, it was decided that for the next year there would be three members for the two amalgamated wards and one member each for two new wards in the annexed area.

During the latter part of this week there were rumors to the effect that an application for an injunction to have the school trustee election declared invalid had been made before Judge J. C. Anderson.

Friday afternoon Judge Anderson said no formal application had as yet been received by him.

Last night members of the public school board met in a special session and passed the resolution asking the Ontario Municipal Board to confirm the procedure taken at the last municipal election.

Drive Carefully Warning Issued By Inspector

An appeal for Belleville district motorists to drive carefully over the festive Christmas and New Year's holiday season was made today by Inspector A. McDonald of Provincial Police Headquarters at Belleville.

He noted that the Belleville area had a fine record of no serious accidents last year and assured that his department would be much appreciated if the same thoughtful co-operation in driving habits as was received last year.

"Keeping out of accidents is simple matter," the Inspector went on. "It simply calls for staying within the speed limits and obeying all stop signs and other rules of the road."

"And above all it calls for keeping your eyes on the road when driving."

Highways in the Belleville area will be constantly patrolled during the holiday season with every available man on duty, the Inspector said.

But patrolling the highway means but little if we do not have the co-operation of motorists," he said.

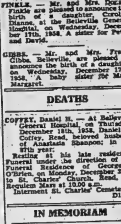
New Contract Ends Dispute

NEW YORK (AP) — Major radio - television networks and union representatives of actors and other performers have agreed on a new contract, ending a dispute that once threatened a strike.



Donald F. Conaway, national executive of the American Federation of Television and Radio Artists, announced the agreement Friday. He said a principal gain was a provision to control use of TV kinescope recordings of performers.

The union represents 12,000 announcers, singers, dancers and other performers. Most of the membership is concentrated in New York, Chicago and Los Angeles.

The contract terms include an increase in the base guaranteed annual pay of announcers from $10,000 to $11,000. They also will get extra pay for overtime or three-lance work.

Total Volume of Business Will Equal That of Last Year

Belleville merchants scot out, as S.O.S. to the weatherman Friday to get rid of the snow and give them clear weather for the last four shopping days before Christmas and today it appears their prayers have been answered.

The majority of local merchants contacted by the Ontario Intelligencer Friday felt the early shipment of snow and the frequent storms like they have experienced this past week have been partly responsible for "slow buying down" Christmas shopping trade this year.

"The stormy weather we've had this past week has prevented many rural and outlying shoppers from coming into the city to do their Christmas shopping," one merchant told us.

On a general survey of local merchants, representing the various types of business in the city, the Ontario-Intelligencer received a variety of comments — from "business this year is exceptionally good," to "business is poor".

The majority of merchants estimated the volume of Christmas retail trade to-date is slightly down from that of the same period last year. They were optimistic, however, that with a "break from the weatherman", and with the extra shopping days before Christmas this year, the total volume will about equal that of last year.

"We're not weeping," said one merchant. "We're holding our own," another stated.

Most are hopeful the weather will be favorable this weekend an dthat a "last-minute rush" will result.

Local Christmas trade this year has been "spotty" merchants state.

"We started out o.k. then had a big slump, then it started picking up again," is how one local merchant described the Christmas retail trade this season.

People are buying more carefully this year merchants disclosed.

The trend in buying is toward the smaller, more moderately priced articles.

Most merchants feel that money is a little tight this year. However few people are asking for credit, merchants say, they state.

"The bigger, more expensive items are not selling as quickly as the more inexpensive items this year', a local merchant said.

"The average sale is around $4 or $5 — and usually not over $5", another stated.

The majority of local stores have taken on additional temporary staff during the Christmas season. One store doubled its staff, hiring some 22 people.

Mrs. Henry Hatfield Will Take $1,000 Won in Draw

There was a thousand-dollar lift in the voice of Mrs. Henry Hatfield, 409 Dundas East when she spoke over the phone this morning.

"I'm so thrilled. Nothing like this has ever happened to me before" she said.

And no wonder. For last night the McFarland Booster Club in the guise of Santa Claus dropped $1,000 into the figurative stocking of Mrs. Hatfield in a pre-Christmas Eve gesture.

She held the winning ticket in the Booster Club's draw that entitled a couple to a free trip to Prague, Czechoslovakia for the world hockey tournament, or in lieu, one thousand iron men, to coin of the realm. Mrs. Hatfield is taking the money.

Mrs. Hatfield's thrill was more or less anti-climactic, since she was first informed her husband had been the lucky holder of the ticket.

Naturally she was elated at this turn of events, but her excitement bubbled over when "my insurance agent who sold me the ticket called at the house and informed me I had won it."

Even this failed to convince Mrs. Hatfield the goddess of good fortune had smiled on her.

"I just couldn't believe it. I thought they were kidding me", she said.

The Hatfield's have their share of the "take-a-chance" tast that is apparent in almost everybody. They are not strangers to ticket-purchasing but this is the first time "a big one came our way."

What is Mrs. Hatfield going to do with the money?

She was not specific in her answer. "There is always room for lots of it in our family" she said.

She had purchased but one ticket, put it away and almost forgotten about it.

Mr. Hatfield is the manager of the Acme Plumbing and Heating of this city.

The lucky ticket was drawn by Mr. George Dudley of Midland, secretary-manager of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association between the second and third periods of the McFarlands-Cornwall hockey game.

'TWAS FIVE DAYS BEFORE CHRISTMAS . . .

When all over town
People hurried and scurried
Some wearing a frown.

Soon the stockings would hang
By the chimney with care
But what to put in them?
We feel such despair.

The children were nestled
All snug in their beds,
What to buy? Where to shop?
Buzzes through our poor heads.

Mum with her list
And Dad just confused,
Had just settled down
Not too enthused.

When out of his chair,
Dad rose with a clatter,
Mother, surprised, said,
"What is the matter?"

The light from the lamp
Lit the floor up below,
Where Dad dropped the "Intell"
His face all aglow.

Then to my wondering eyes did appear
An ad in the paper that made it all clear.
As rapir as eagles our ideas all came.
We whistled and shouted as we checked off each name.

Fourteen Below Brings Coldest Day of Year

Right on the heels of a cold wave which settled in from the northwest, temperatures in the Belleville district Friday night fell to the lowest point of the year.

At eight o'clock this morning the temperature at the city water filtration plant was 16 degrees below zero — the coldest for the night.

But in the immediate area the mercury apparently went considerably lower with 20 degrees below reported from Redneresville and Point Anne and 22 below at Picton. Areas to the north of Belleville also reported low temperatures with 15 degrees below recorded at Foxboro.

Following yesterday's comparatively balmy weather with the thermometer going as high as 35 degrees, it started to turn colder at 3:31 in the afternoon and in half an hour the mercury had gone down 18 degrees. The temperature drop was then steady until the cold point was reached this morning.

At nine this morning the mercury still stood at 10 below and as a result of the well below zero weather oil furnaces hummed a merry — but steady — tune and numbers of cars simply refused to come to life as stiffened motors drained out batteries.

All funds collected have been turned over to the local bank which is acting on the above Home's behalf.

Comet Claims Flying Record On First Flight

MONTREAL (CP) — The Comet IV, proud queen of Britain's airways, lost a tussle with a Canadian snowstorm Friday but could still claim a flying record for the London-Montreal route.

The British Overseas Airways Corporation's jet liner landed at Montreal airport in suburban Dorval at 8:19 p.m. EST, some three hours behind schedule to inaugurate the first commercial jet air service between England and Canada.

But the actual flying time for the 3,540-mile trip was only nine hours and 15 minutes, some two hours less than the time generally taken by BOAC's turbo-prop Britannia liners which up to now had provided the fastest means of transport between Montreal and London.

The big cigar-shaped airliner, whose quiet performance won the admiration of the 52 passengers aboard her, was forced to extend a normal refuelling stop at Gander, Nfld., to almost four hours because of a heavy snowstorm over Montreal.

If weather conditions had allowed a landing at Montreal the comet could have made the journey non-stop in about eight hours.

Shirley Harmer Plans Divorce

TORONTO (CP) — Canadian singing star Shirley Harmer is planning to divorce her manager-husband, George Murray, her mother says.

Mrs. W. H. J. Harmer of Provincial Corners, near Oshawa, said her daughter called her from Hollywood three weeks ago to tell of her plans. The singer now is under contract at Paramount Pictures.

In Hollywood Miss Harmer, who married the Canadian seven four years ago, refused to confirm or deny the report.

Murray, who arrived in Toronto this week, was not available for comment, but his lawyer, Royce Firth, says the couple had "the whole question of their relationship and careers under per-ous review.

King Turkey Featured on Local Market

King Turkey is a grace dining room tables for the Christmas Day dinner, was featured on the Belleville Farmers' market today. Geese, ducks and chicken were also offered in good supply.

Farmers generally quoted 55 cents for large fully dressed turkey with the smaller variety bringing 60 cents per pound. Geese sold at 60 cents per lb., ducks at 60c, and chicken from 45c to 50c per pound. Capons brought 55c and 60c.

Zero weather forced all but a few of the more hardy vendors off the market square.

A few apples were offered at last week's prices. Potatoes were offered at 30c per basket or 90c per bag. Squash noticed were 75c per basket with 60c per bag of cookers. Sauerkraut sold at 25c per bag as well as savory at a dime per bunch and parsley at 5c per ball pack.

'Artificial Ice Project' Topic At Rotary Club

CAMPBELLFORD — Guest speaker at the regular meeting of the Campbellford Rotary Club this week was Mr. Don Maddocks, of the programs branch of the Department of Education. He spoke to the club on the prospects of artificial ice in other than the present arena building or in a new building, stating that there are many other projects which might claim the attention of the Rotary Club. He said that the project was beyond the capacity of the Rotary club which might, however, spearhead any drive for artificial ice.

The cost of the installation of an artificial ice plant he estimated at between $60 thousand dollars and the annual operational cost at $5,000.

He said that there is much to be considered, among which is the cost per square foot per year, the type and size of outlying and drainage conditions. He said that the climatic trend is in Ontario, nearly every one operated at a deficit.

He said the Department of Agriculture will pay one-quarter of the cost of minor hockey free skating and such projects and one-third the cost of leadership and training through the local recreation committee.

He recommended a project for the senior citizens which could operate after the fashion of a club and would be a great asset to the community. Crafts and skills might be taught and recreation grants received.

Mr. Maddocks invited all to attend a meeting on January 20th for further particulars concerning recreation for old and young as officials of the Department of Education would be present to answer any questions.

The speaker was thanked by Rotarian Don Meyers.

Some Churchmen Did Not Agree With Ministers

OTTAWA (CP) — Reaction of some churchmen here to the suggestion of two Toronto clerics that Christ be divorced from Christmas was that the Toronto pulpits are a couple of Scrooges.

Rev. Ernest Nullmeyer, a Baptist minister, and Rev. Franklin Chidsey, a Unitarian minister, said in Toronto that Christmas has become too commercialized for it to remain a Christian festival. Besides, they said, the day is really a pagan festival.

But Ottawa Rev. Robert Good of Erskine Presbyterian Church said "there is no place for modern Scrooges who can't enter into the spirit of things. God bless the little people at Christmas bringing out the spirit of Christ into the pagan commercial atmosphere."

"It would be a sorry day if religious implications of Christmas were removed."

Rev. Edward Rex Taylor of First Unitarian Church here said Christmas has become so far removed from the spiritual that he'd amend the Lord's Prayer to include "Forgive us our Christmas." The church should "counter-attack with the idea of a strictly-spiritual festival."

"Rev. Gilles Bellisle at the pulpit of Notre Roman Catholic Archbishop Lemieux said his personal view is that the tide of commercialism would roll higher if Christ's name were taken from the festival. It was an objection of the Roman Catholic Church to "put Christ back into Christmas."

Flying Officer Honored on His Retirement

TRENTON — The 6RD Officers' Mess was the scene of a most enjoyable function when fellow officers and civilian friends of F/O L. D. Temple gathered to honor him on his retirement.

F/O Temple joined the RCAF in 1939 as an airman and attained the rank of Sergeant Aero Engine Mech., during the war.

In 1943, he relinquished his NCO rank to take pilot training and graduated as a pilot in the special reserve of the RCAF. On Sept. 20 on formation of the interim permanent force he was given NCO status in the Aero Engine trade.

In 1950 at the outbreak of the Korean War, F/O Temple was commissioned as pilot and granted a short service commission for a period of five years. He has been granted three extensions up to the present date. After a period of rehabilitation leave F/O Temple will terminate his service career in May, 1959. Unique as it may seem with 20 years and 10 days service. F/O Temple is only 39.

F/O Temple and his wife plan to reside in the Toronto area.

G/C T. A. Sprusion, MBE, Commanding Officer 6RD, presented F/O Temple with a silver tea service—a gift of his fellow officers. Mrs. Sprusion presented Mrs. Temple with a bouquet of roses.

St. John's Y.A.C. Installs New Officers

CAMPBELLFORD — The Christmas meeting of St. John's Young Adult Club was held on Thursday evening in the United Church Basement. In keeping with the spirit of the meeting, Christmas carols were sung, led by Walter Elliott.

During the devotional period a Christmas pageant was successfully staged, with the following participants: Mae and Mel McKeown as Mary and Joseph; Muriel Heagle, piano accompaniment and solo; Lenna Neal, solo Walter and Betty Elliott, narrators.

After the devotions, members placed their "white gifts" in turn, at the manger. These will be given to the Salvation Army for distribution among the local needy at Christmas. In addition, $10 was voted for Christmas charity in this community.

During the year's new business session, $100 was voted for donations.

Walter Elliott's group won the annual best attendance prize.

OFFICERS INSTALLED

The following slate of officers was installed for 1959: past president, Stewart Milne; president, Lenna Neal; secretary, Pearl McComb; treasurer, Doris Heagle; song leader, Walter Elliott attendance secretary, Eleanor Nelson; pianist, Marilyn Pollock; press reporter, Mae McKeown; group leaders, Ruby Miree, Enid Oliver and Walter Elliott.

Following the installation of officers, a male quartet comprising Messrs. Walter Elliott, Henry Oliver, Alan Nicholls and Orval Lake rendered two numbers appropriate to the season. They were accompanied at the piano by Jacqueline Rosebeat.

Eleanor Nelson conducted some games which were enjoyed by all.

At the close of the evening refreshments were served.

Nuclear-Armed Jet Plane Crash Report False

ODESSA, Tex. (AP)—The air force today wrote off as false the reported crash in West Texas Friday night of a nuclear-armed jet plane.

"It was a false alarm," said Col. James A. Johnson, acting commander of the Odessa air force base at Big Spring, Tex.

Two witnesses told the sheriff's office here they saw a jet plane fall off a jet plane as it streaked over the city limits northwest of Odessa Friday. They said dense black smoke rose just after the craft passed over the horizon.

Another informant, unidentified, said he heard a loud explosion, 30 miles north, that shook his house. Two planes had collided in formation. One disappeared and the other two sped out of sight, according to this version.

But a police radio warning that the mythical craft carried a nuclear weapon, deputy sheriff Bill Kolarek said, "there was a mixup somewhere."

THE PLEASANT LIFE

What's wrong with the younger generation?

No, if we are to judge by the remarks of John M. Stainaker, president of National (U.S.) Merit Scholarship Corporation, the trouble is not that they are delinquents, looking for a rumble, but that they are looking for an easy pleasant life, even as you and I.

Mr. Stainaker addressed the Council for Exceptional Children, National Education Association, at Cleveland. "Our National Merit Scholarship finalists," he said, "who are a very highly selected intellectual group, to an astonishingly large extent look forward to the easy pleasant life in the suburbs, with ample income for the material luxuries. Very few speak of a willingness to work for ideals or to pursue knowledge no matter what the cost. The spirit of adventure, she urge to meet new challenges, the willingness to risk all on the unpredictable - - these characteristics are rarely revealed."

He then quoted from reports of some of the finalists to prove his point. Here are some of his quotations:

"I want to live in a better than average community in the suburbs. I want a circle of intelligent friends who are eager for a good time."

"I would like to write at least one book. Sometime in my life, I would like to run for public office. These things, however, are merely wishes and not primary goals in my life."

"I want to be a social leader. I do not particularly desire great amounts of wealth but I do want to live comfortably - - in other words, to be well off."

"I hope to marry immediately after graduation. If, however, this is not possible, I will continue studying for a master's degree in education. Either married or single, I hope to have a life financially secure."

"I want to marry an intelligent man and live in a pleasant suburban home, have three children and lots of friends my age."

"I would like to have a respectable position with a large firm."

Most of us, in the thirties, forties and fifties, will find that these remarks strike a sympathetic chord. And that is just the trouble. They are not the ambitions which should fire youth, but the sentiments of those who are weary. The battle has been won or has been defeated by life, have at least been pacified by it.

There is no spark here. Mr. Stainaker complains about the lack of willingness to work for ideals. Perhaps, though, youth's idealism has always been overestimated. Worse than a lack of idealism is the lack of daring. Some of these exceptional students would ever have written:

"I burn my candle at both ends,
It will not last the night,
But, Ha, my foes and Ho, my friends,
It gives a wonderful light."

The blame? Why, of course, it lies on us, who want to live comfortably, to be financially secure, to have a respectable position. And we want it because, in our formative years, many of us knew the woes of a family which was not able to live comfortably, which was financially insecure and where the nominal breadwinner had no position, respectable or otherwise.

The cure? Wait until the next generation, which has learned from experience the woes, as well as the joys, of "the easy pleasant life in the suburbs," reacts in its turn.

Better make those candles stout - they will be burning them in the middle 60s.

TEN TOP STORIES

Bob Thomas is the movie critic for the Associated Press, which is the largest news-gathering organization in the world.

As such, one would presume that he knew a thing or two about movies.

It couldn't be proved though, from his list of the ten most important news events of the Hollywood year, a year which, he declares, was packed with more news than ever before.

His list: the stabbing of Johnny Stompanato by Cheryl Crane, the death of Mike Todd, the break-up of Eddie Fisher and Debbie Reynolds, Tyrone Power's death, Trujillo's gifts to Kim Novak and Zsa Gabor, the awards of Oscars to two young actresses, the death of Harry Cohn, the rise of the millionaire star, the death of Richard Skelton and the Jayne Mansfield-Mickey Hargitay wedding.

Not one picture was important enough to break into the charmed circle of the top ten stories, and against such competition as the playtime activities of the married son of the dictator of a banana "republic.

If 'tis so, 'tis a grievous fault, and grievously will the box office answer for it.

Of course, it could be that Thomas is too dazzled by the stars to enjoy the starlight.

RICH

By EDGAR A. GUEST

It's getting on to Christmas,
And the pocketbook is low,
But the heart is beating lively
And the cheeks are all aglow.

And the smiles are spreading broader
Than they ever did before,
And we're just a little kinder
To the stranger at the door.

It's getting on to Christmas,
And our cash is almost spent,
But we're richer in good nature
And in love and sentiment.

Personal Greeting Cards

We like getting Christmas cards and invitations to dinners which have something more personal than just season's greetings. Every year we look forward to the message of Alan McNeil, former Canadian newspaperman as a former general manager of the Canadian Press, and a newspaper of particularly lively mind, gives us a verse. We are pleased to reprint it this year as an example of what is his usual standard:

A good Franciscan brother,
On holy errand bent,
From the quiet of his cloister
Set forth on a jungle quest.
His mission there to lead
Bewildered heathen to the light,
A big good intent was direly foiled
When on one starlit night
A band of fiercer savages
Entrapped him in a snare,
And quickly for a lavish feast
Set up the cooking pot.
With a vapor-blecking cauldron
Hung high above a fire
Like a flame-breathing Moloch
In Nineveh or Tyre.
And there they set out paper plates
And forks and knives
And summoned to the banquet
Their black fan buxom wives.
But their hopes were sadly dashed
When on the scene appeared
Their tall and angry chieftain
Whose displeasure was clearly feared.
"Forebear!" he cried, "to carry out
Your gustatorial plan
'Put not in flux,' the Bible says, 'that pot, Rivers that saintly man.'"
"Aw Chief!" they remonstrated,
"We've had no food for months,
"Reseled your bon and let's have one!"
Our appetites just once.
"He will provide us all
With delicious pickin'
"For he's juicy, plump and tender!"
As any Southern chicken."
"That's just the point," the chief replied,
"That's the point," the chief—
"Can't you see that he's a friar?"

Right to News

London Economist

The right of the reporter to gather news is really not a right but a duty; to tell the public the truth. The right is the public's — to be told the truth — is the duty of the press is to get the news within the framework of the law and without infringing the other rights of individual members of the public.

How Turkey Ousted Goose

Hamilton Spectator

We are inclined to take the fearless stand this day that there can be very little difference between Christmas dinner than roast turkey, with cranberry sauce.

And we're grateful to a handsome economist, Dr. Cornelius Evenld In Britain," for telling us that the turkey is not indigenous to Britain, but was introduced from Central America in an expedition to the New World.

The convoy anchored off the South American coast, and Strickland led a party ashore to round up food, and it was then that he encountered the semi-domesticated turkeys reared by the natives. He took a pair of them back to Britain, where a pair set of natives pronounced them most palatable.

We make no fresh admission that we aren't sure whether the early English settlers brought the domesticated turkey with them to Canada, or whether they were unable to cater for the fowl after their arrival here. But it is only fair to honor the memory of William Strickland who, although he seemingly enjoyed little acclaim given Sir Walter Raleigh for introducing tobacco to palefaces, has received scant recognition in being granted a horrible erect which incorporated a representation of a turkey.

The great way to open to this day if come to England and examines the lectern in the village church at Boynton, Yorkshire.

There is anthropological slants spread no doubt by the Communists, that the turkey is related to the buzzard and the vulture, but discussion of such unverified rumors has no place in a pre-Christmas editorial. Suffice it to say that turkey have developed grease as the inconspicuous of many Christmas dinners.

And as every good gourmet will agree, it's no small thing to have displaced a goose.

He Invented Fish Hot Dogs

Catholic Digest

"When," said the vendor at Friday night fish-fall game, "will a fish dog be invented?"

The vendor's complaint took precedence over a national magazine's article on the game and made a University student William Lane find the vendor's idea to be right in his mind. Investigating, he found that hot dog sales drop 50% on Lenten Fridays even at big league baseball games.

This is the background to the recent appearance on the market of "fish dogs" that smell like, taste and smell just like hot dogs. The big difference is they are made with fish minced tuna and seasoning containing no meat.

William Lane, now 37 years old, is president of the firm that manufactures the fish dog and product in Chula Vista, Calif. Before Pulling the product on the market, Lane and an associate used up 15,000 pounds of fish and four years of weekends in experiments.

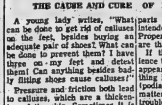
GUIDED MEN

The world is on its ear now over the matter of guided missiles. Who will build the biggest one? Who will get it built first? What nation will be able to place it in such a way that it can blast the daylights out of some group of people who live half way around the world?



Well, of course, we have to keep armed. We must lose no opportunity to make sure that we can "get there firstest with t he mostest." But, no problem was ever solved by a shooting crackerjack or a bomb or a guided missile. These things we have to have for self-protection. But they a r e wholly negative. They get us no where. When we are through, we find ourselves precisely at t h e place we started. We are billions of dollars poorer because we have to make these weapons, but we are no richer in peace.

For the world's great problems will be solved not by guided missiles but by guided men. Turn back in your history books a n d you will discover that it was the guided men which led nations to stupendous victories.

What we need is not just concentrated firing power but concentrated men. A half dozen of such will out-blast all the expensive hardware which now energy and money can assemble.

How To Keep Your Good Health

By Joseph G. Molner, M.D.

THE CAUSE AND CURE OF FOOT CALLUSES

A young lady writes, "What can be done to get rid of callouses on the feet, besides wearing an adequate pair of shoes? What can be done to prevent them? I have three on my feet and detest them! Can anything besides having fitting shoes cause callouses?"

Pressure and friction both lead to callouses, which are a thickening of the skin. Sometimes one, sometimes the other, and sometimes both together.

I know of nothing else which will cause a callus.

To get the idea clearly in mind, let's think about callouses on the hands, first. A man for example who works with his hands soon develops them. Using a hammer, an axe or rake does it quickly.

Stop using your hands, and gradually the skin thins out. After a time, the same work that used to bother you not at all, begins in a few minutes to irritate your hands sore. Callouses come with pressure and friction; they gradually disappear when the causes are removed. They grow faster than they disappear, because the body tries to protect you and the hurt, but callouses on the feet are painful.

The callouses are the same. The conditions are different. You don't wear shoes on your hands, and you don't rest your whole weight on your hands. Those are the differences.

If you wear a pinching shoe, or in some other way cause too much pressure and friction to the foot at one point or another, the skin thickens into a callus as a protection. But your shoes don't expand! You can't stop using where already there is too little space, further reduces that space and the pressure and friction. The callus is as bad as a pebble. If it becomes large enough.

IS NATURE GOOF'T

You might suggest that Nature is goofy to do this. No, Nature is being helpful. Suppose but Nature didn't expect you to wear shoes!

From the above facts, I don't think I need to tell you — but I'll tell you anyway — that rubbing callouses with pumice is hardly useless to remove a callus unless you remove the conditions that cause it. Otherwise the callus will forgn.

That's about — but you'd be surprised how many people have never figured it out. They use all sorts of foot creams and yet they never have the sense to throw away their shoes and get a new ones that fit.

If the callus is on the toes, or side, or even top of the foot, get different shoes. Usually that means a half size or so. Then although to be sure, sometimes the same size, but in a different last or shape, will serve. Maybe length, maybe width is wrong.

If the callus is on the sole of the foot, then surpoet weak arches which put your weight unopposite parts of the foot which are not intended to carry that weight. Proper arch supports sometimes are the answer.

These measures (plus palliative to wait while the callus disappears don't work the proper thing is to have a foot specialist (podiatrist) help you. For that matter, it may save you time, trouble and pain to go to him in the first place, and let him supervise what you should wear, as well as take steps to remove the heavy callouses or provide other means of making the feet more comfortable.

"Dear Dr. Molner: Why does a person who has athlete's foot so tired? Is it low blood sugar? — D. H."

No, it's because the asthma limits the amount of oxygen in the system, plus the fact that irregular breathing of breath is tiring, plus the nervous strain and tenseness.

Note to Mrs. H. T.: Guess you missed my earlier references, but the most common cause is cancer sores, by far, is allergy to something you eat.

Afflicted with arthritis? You may find relief if you follow the diet given in my pamphlet, "Don't Quit Because of Arthritis." Should Not Have to Beg

Owen Sound Sun-Times

An unsigned letter answers a question which has been uppermost in the minds of quite a few people at this time, when a special appeal is being made for the Christmas Seals for Retarded Children. Stressing the splendid work being done at this school, and hopefully reminding those who are giving so freely of their time and activities to this cause, the writer suggests that this, and other similar schools throughout the country, should not have to depend on such support.

They should, the writer contends, be supported by grants, as are other schools, and to present circumstances they are the proper objects of serious giving — a fact which brings them much publicity which may very well be embarrassing and detrimental.

There will be general agreement with the suggestion. These children, and their parents, are worthy of full support from the public treasuries, that the misfortune which has befallen them may be lightened to the greatest ex which put your weight

Actor Dies As in Script

St. Thomas Times-Journal

On Monday a British television audience of perhaps 12,000,000 was looking at a play in which an actor, Gareth Jones, has to die when stabbed by a parade of mayoralty. Viewers saw him trying to break through a door, saw George St. Clair break down and grapple with his heart trouble, troubling him — as written in the script of the play. A spasm of agony crossed his face and he collapsed — again according to the script. But in that moment he had suffered a fatal heart attack.

Millions of people looking on thought it was just realistic acting on the part of the actor. But the next night side of the moment. The other actors carried on in the play until the curtain fell.

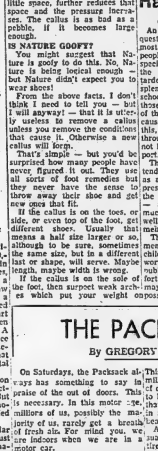
Not many years ago a popular British vaudeville actor, August Van Biene, presented a comedy sketch he enacted the role of a musician nearing the end of his life, and as the curtain fell on the show slipped from his chair. He slumped forward into his with the instrument between his knees and died. Hence "The Broken Melody."

One night at Brighton he performed as usual, and when he came to the point where he should collapse the audience applauded loudly and the curtain fell. But Van Biene did not respond to the applause. This time he was really dead.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

FOR LOVE OF FFEOPLE



I wonder if we give much more thought to others than ourselves after they die? E v e n though we know but comparatively few people, what would we think of ourselves were we to meet and pass on the street, or meet with some of our old friends? Friends are essential equipment for a happy journey through life.

I came across this thought in one of the delightful books that David Grayson left us. He said: "How if improves people for us when we begin to love them! Why should there ever be bitter talk in, or about, another? It's as uplifting to be on terms of pleasantness with all with whom we may work or associate. I like people who say nice things about other people. It gives assurance that they are most likable to say nice things about us when we are absent from them.

Never have friends meant so much as now. We need their love for people about us. Grayson mentioned in his book. You see, the more we love people the easier it is to overlook their faults and failures. One learns how easy it is to gain new friends if we take them as they are, and love our way into them from that point on. Many a man has accumulated a goodly portion in money or lands but without any genuine love for people. To such always comes a time when this material wealth shrin's a n d gives no happiness. In the end it is people who are the greatest benefit to others. They are f a r better than gold, or any other form of wealth. What a world this one of ours would be if happily devoted to a love for people!

SCOTT'S SCRAP BOOK

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

On Saturdays, the Packsack always has something to say in praise of the out of doors that is necessary. In this motor age millions of us, possibly the majority of us, rarely get a breath of fresh air. Yet we mind you, we are indoors when we are in a motor car.

The man who has done more for the out of doors than any man living is an American by the name of Roger Tory Peterson, of Old Lyme, Connecticut. As way back in 1934 he published a little book, the kind that is easy to your pocket, entitled "Field Guide to the Birds." If you have never seen it, or if have since been sold, in ever more beautiful edition, but always retaining the pocket. He drew the pictures for it; but they are not what the audience applauded loudly and the curtain fell. But Van Biene did not respond to the applause. This time he was really dead.

This l ook has enabled literally millions of people to enjoy the out of doors to know the birds. Is a field guide to the birds is to realize what a field guide is and what it is. Around 1939, Peterson was persuaded to act as editor of an entire series of pocket manuals conforming to other aspects of the out of doors — mammals, butterflies, seashells, ferns, rocks. In each of these books, expert in the field prepare the material. Peterson applies the principles of easy identification that he perfected with the birds. The latest two books off the presses are "Field Guide to the Reptiles and Amphibians," snakes frogs and toads to you and "Field Guide to the Trees and Shrubs." This is a fine Christmas gift idea to remind you that if it is not a snowlover boy you are looking for, it's the kind that gets a thousand and a thousand lovers, don't forget to take a look at the guides of Roger Tory Peterson.

A Lift for Living

Wonderful Story of Christmas

By DR. RALPH W. SOCKMAN

Some 2,600 years ago, the noble Hebrew prophet Isaiah caught the vision of a coming King. His was a message of hope. Listen: "The people that walked in darkness have seen a great light; they that dwell in the land of the shadow of death, upon them hath the light shined." Isaiah was speaking to a people like unto ourselves, for we too walk in darkness and dwell in the shadow of death. Then the prophet proceeded to describe the expected deliverer. Listen again: "For to us a child is born, to us a son is given; and the government will be upon His shoulders; and His name will be called Wonderful Counselor, Mighty God, Everlasting Father, Prince of Peace."

Such was the Messianic King dreamed of by Isaiah. The centuries have passed. Despite all disappointments and defeats the Jewish people have not surrendered this hope. Justice and mercy have not yet been established in the earth. Peace still seems tragically far off. Nevertheless, over six hundred million members of the Christian church believe that the Babe born in Bethlehem deserves the titles ascribed to the expected Messiah, and to Him lies the hope of the blessings longed for by the ancient prophet.

Let us then call the first name given to Him and consider its fitness. "His name will be called Wonderful Counselor." Take down your New Testament and turn to the second chapter of Luke. Read again the story of Bethlehem as there given. Read it without any religious theory. Just let the simple majesty of its beauty and the ineffable music of its lines steal over your mind. "And she brought forth her firstborn son, and wrapped Him in swaddling clothes, and laid Him in a manger." "And there were in the same country shepherds abiding in the fields, keeping watch over their flocks by night." "And the angel said unto them, Fear not: for behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people. For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord." "And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host praising God and saying, Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men."

The story is that all who beheld the Bethlehem event were filled with wonder. There are some wonders we outgrow; others grow with us. Christmas is one of these. We pride ourselves on being practical modern men, and shepherds' visions do not figure in our matter-of-fact concerns. We are the sort of science of which facts are not accepted in our reckonings. We are grown men who have put away our childhood story books. Why can we not lay away this Christmas story as a lovely legend of childhood? Because the more wisdom we bring to the study of that story, the more the wonder grows.

The beginnings at Bethlehem were so small. A little mountain town in what seemed at the time an unimportant province of the Roman Empire, a stable, a forlorn family, a few shepherds, three mysterious figures called "wise men" — those were the participants in the original Bethlehem story. But watch the event grow. A thousand years later the Christmas event was being celebrated around the Mediterranean Ocean and over much of western Europe. Two thousand years after that and Christmas carols were being sung across the Atlantic in a new world called America. And, more significant still, the calendar which carries the date 1958. What other event in history is of sufficiently universal meaning to serve as the point of reference for a calendar for the world at large?

Wonderful, isn't it, that the Babe born in Bethlehem is hung on the hinge of history which divides the prevailing world's calendar into before and after.

Wonderful, isn't it, that a Babe born in Judea 19 centuries ago should so stir the generous impulses of people that they become the sons of Chicago and Newark, Niagara Falls and London.

Wonderful, isn't it, that the anniversary of Christ's birth should have drawn into its celebration the fir tree from pre-Christian Germany, the yule log from pagan Iceland, the mistletoe from the primitive times of England and the jolly Saint Nicholas from Holland. It is as if this old dark world was strewn with unrealized dreams and then Jesus came like a magnet to draw them unto Himself.

Is all this power just a dream in the minds of sleepers? No, this is a vision of the spiritual seers who are most widely awake.

At Christmas God's sunlight breaks into man's shortsighted midnight. Bethlehem the best in us comes to birth.

JEWS AND ARABS

NEW YORK (AP)—The American Council for Judaism has sent some cash aid to the Arab refugees of Palestine—and conveyed hope other Jews may do the same. The gift was part of a $12,000 grant for various humanitarian causes and was described as the first of its kind by a U.S. Jewish group.

The Bible Today

About 2,500 languages and dialects are spoken by the billions of human beings populating this earth. The problem of communicating a single message to all is a formidable one, yet the Bible Society has succeeded in the amazing achievement of translating and publishing the Christmas story, and more, in 1,127 of the world's languages and dialects.

As a result, God is speaking to millions of human hearts in marble cathedrals and mud huts the same timeless truths as read, heard, taught, and discussed in words men know. In the past year some 27 million Bibles, Testaments, and Portions of Scriptures have been placed in eager hands by the Bible Society.

Suggested readings for next week. Sunday, December 21st, Phil. 4: 1-23; Monday, December 22nd, James 1: 1-27; Tuesday, December 23rd, 1 John 3: 1-24; Wednesday, December 24th, Luke 2: 1-35; Thursday, December 25th, John 1: 1-18; Friday, December 26th, John 1: 19-34; Saturday, December 27th, John 1: 35-51.

SOCIAL and PERSONAL

The Seroptimist Club's annual Christmas party was held Monday last at the home of Mrs. Nora E. Earle, Front Street. This was a most enjoyable party, court whist being played and gifts exchanged.

St. Joseph's PTA Presents Graduates Gifts

At the November meeting of the St. Joseph's P.T.A., prizes for the 1958 graduates were presented by Mr. Bill Meagher, co-behalf of the P.T.A. Mr. V. Muldoon made a presentation for the Holy Name Society, while Mrs. P. Sullivan and Mrs. C. Murphy distributed the C.W.L. prizes. As well as a gift for the New Testament to each graduate.

On December 11, the P.T.A. were guests for a short Mr. Bernard Sproule, Catholic leader of St. Joseph's Group Committee for the Cubs. Mr. Sproule addressed the members, advising his resignation was necessary, due to the pressure of other duties. He also asked for better co-operation, understanding and interest between the group committee and the PTA sponsors of the Cubs.

A brief outline of Scouting in each city was given, showing the great increase in membership, which has taken place in the past ten years.

Highlights of St. Joseph's Cub "pack" activities during 1958 were given, showing this to be an active and busy pack.

Mr. Sproule, in his remarks with special thanks to other members of his committee and to the Ladies Auxiliary, both of which had helped make the year the success it was.

Sister Mary Helen Rita's class won the attendance prize.

After the meeting was adjourned, the Rev. J. J. Buckley made the draw for the turkeys and the following winners were named: Mrs. Bernard Price, Street; Patti Bankey, 24 Third Street; Mr. T. Hagerman, 151 Hastings Drive; Mrs. J. F. O'Connor, 327 Bridge St. E.; Mr. L. Malcolm, 59 Geddes Street.

Members of the executive took care of the refreshments for the evening.

Swiss Women Not Likely To Get Vote

BERN (Reuters) — For the first time in history, Switzerland's all-male electorate is to be called to the polls to decide in a nationwide referendum whether Swiss women shall have the right to vote in federal affairs.

The referendum will be held in February and it is 99 per cent certain that the men will reject this first major attempt by the suffragette movement to gain equal political status for women.

For in this bulwark of democracy, women never have had a vote in cantonal matters and even in the view of the most optimistic supporters of the women's cause, it is likely to be at least another 30 years before the deep-rooted fears traditional women have no place in politics is finally broken down.

MILITARY BOOTS

Tradition in Switzerland dies hard and tradition for the last 3,000 years has decreed that only the men, as the bearers of arms in the country's defence, shall have the right to vote.

Some women are among the opposition. A women's committee headquartered in Lucerne has been active in the country districts, where hostility to the women's vote is strongest.

Their arguments are: that votes for women inevitably will bring acute marital unhappiness, possibly even divorce; that women have traditionally never had the vote and do not want it; and that they are in a far stronger position as the power behind the male voter than in voting themselves.

One of the main opposition posters for instance, which has appeared in Basle, sums up this anti-feminist point of view. It reads:

"If a woman is happy, what do politics mean to her? If she is unhappy, will politics make any difference?"

PITCH FORK HER WEAPON

PETERBOROUGH (CP)—Mrs. Walter Lunn of nearby Trent River said Friday she killed an apparently-rabid fox with a pitch-fork after it wandered into her yard and was attacked by her two dogs. The fox is being tested for rabies and the dogs are in quarantine.

SALT BATES

A daily bath with lots of salt in the water was a common treatment for babies in ancient Greece.

Salem W.A. Elects Officers

The December meeting of Salem W.A. was held in the church hall in the evening. The president, Mrs. Murney Johnston, opened the meeting.

Roll call was an exchange of Christmas gifts and was answered by 23 members and 11 visitors.

Several letters of correspondence were read.

The president thanked the hostess, Mrs. George Sine, for the splendid job of decorating for the Christmas meeting.

The January meeting will be in the form of a potluck dinner and quilting. Mrs. William Wright will act as caretaker for next year.

The secretary gave the annual report of the work carried on during 1958. Treasurer gave her report, showing a balance of $434.

Missionary report by Mrs. Ivan Sarles and card report by Mrs. George Sine were read.

Mrs. Heagle spoke on behalf of the Mr. and Mrs. Club and it was decided that $25 be given towards that fund, the balance to be remembered with Christmas boxes.

The president expressed thanks for the co-operation and help given her during her two year term of office.

Mrs. Everett Sine brought in the slate of officers for 1959, as follows: President, Mrs. Melvin Wickens; first vice, Mrs. Bert Heagle; secretary, Mrs. A. Twiddy; treasurer, Mrs. Lorne Hagerman; and Mrs. Frank McGee; missionary treasurer, Mrs. Murney Johnston; card convener, Mrs. George Sine.

Mrs. Harold Holden and Mrs. Murney Johnston assist the president at the time of the meeting.

Mrs. Thomas Clements took charge of the program, assisted by Rebecca Luke 2: 8-20, was given by Mrs. Lindsay Tanner and the reading, "Let's Keep Christmas", a duet by Mrs. McGee and Mrs. Ayre, "Christmas" was much enjoyed; a reading by Mrs. Stan Thompson, "A Boy at Christmas," and a solo by Mrs. E. Cobden, "Carol of the Bells" Mrs. E. Sine gave a reading, "A Prayer for Christmas."

The topic, "Glory for Christmas," was given by Mrs. Lorne Hagerman.

Collection was $4.40.

Mrs. Harold Ray expressed thanks for a baby gift and cards they had received and Mrs. Mayo moved a vote of thanks to the retiring president for the splendid leadership she had given, to which Mrs. Johnston replied briefly.

Mrs. Stobbard took charge of the installation of officers for 1959, with a short service.

The hostess, Mrs. George Sine and her assistants served delicious refreshments and all enjoyed a social half-hour.

This and That

By HARRIET STEVENS

T & T is looking for a scapegoat. And we have succeeded in locating a scapegoat more lonely than the season and the coincidence of the season and annexation. After all, it is a season of misery for the old and the young. So if annexation started us off on a hypothetical journey, for want of a better, we have the season.

Your reporter happens by accident to be one of those who becomes a Bellevillian as of January 1st, 1959. On the face of things, this is not in itself a particularly momentous incident in the natural or world scene, but when your work creates a modest interest in the United Nations, there is here an interesting symbolism. We citizens of the annexed area become on the tick of the second hand, citizens of another municipality. There are some of us who vigorously opposed annexation and who are ashamed of the way we proved and there are others of us who accepted it with equanimity as the inevitable. We remain citizens of Ontario. We remain citizens of Canada. We remain co-partners in the North American association of nations ever evolved by man, the United Nations, and we as Canadians belong to NATO which is centred in Paris, over Berlin. We are quite certain that our new allegiance will go over Berlin, and NOT ON TV by a Bellevillian Day, nor will the delegates at the UN stop for two minutes of recognition, nor is it likely that the Queen will wish us well in the exchange, but it is a big day We have opposed, disagreed, argued and talked to the court of public opinion, and some of us may be considered to be reconciled. However, hundreds of us are Bellevillians and, for better or worse, there will not be a change as far as you or I, people, like the line cutting Berlin in half. When the bells ring in the new, the transition will take place, but the bells ring out the old and ring in the new Belleville without anything more befall ing than popping balloons and toy pistols. We will sing and be merry without fear or let, and we will be Bellevillians.

We can see nothing ridiculous of Berlin and wish in our hearts that they were as free from threat as we are. Sidney and Thurlow and Belleville form no wall against west over the threat of nuclear warfare. A contest could be held in the municipalities and secondary schools of Hastings County and Trenton and Belleville for the best composition written to describe how people can change citizenship peacefully and remaining faithful to a greater loyalty and public duties and so back T & T quoted some lines which trained that there would ever be universal human rights until they are practised on the local level; surely this quiet and peaceful transition is a small example of what men of good will power today will be done on a larger scale.

W. D. Foulke wrote:

"So may the city that I love be Till every stone shall be articulate."

Since we are thinking about our city this weekend, the words of Edwin Markham seem to convey a message for our new, enlarged edition of Belleville,

"Why build these cities glorious

If man unbuilded grows.

In vain we build the world unless

The builder also grows."

Since we are thinking about a growing Belleville, it is probably sensible to resist the temptation to use eye blinkers to the annexation. I'm pleased and optimistic. This past week T & T heard of a young couple who have established themselves in Belleville and have made a considerable contribution. This couple are considering buying a home in Belleville of the Canadian National Railways moving to Mimico. They feel that the loss to Belleville would mean loss in taxes and that the tax loss would have resultant retroactive influences could mean loss of income, maybe even jobs and security. They wonder if they should begin to look around in that case. Their concern took in such things as new industry and the like of it. The fact that no information seems to be forthcoming about some of these things make our harbor capable of handling Belleville's every desire at the St. Lawrence Seaway opens; that the public seemed uninterested in a fishing industry but let public concern or action; that there seems to be no really concrete things from those who should know, etc. and etc. seemed to worry them.

T & T wonders if there are other municipalities who are concerned as this couple are. Are we being too complacent? Maybe some questions deserving of more publicity if this couple is the first indication. Maybe annexation will bring a breeze of public enough curiosity T & T passes them along as they were passed along to us.

APARTMENTS GO EMPTY

KITCHENER (CP) — Although apartment vacancy rates in couples in a home for the aged here has never been over 2%, Edith Lovell, superintendent of Sunnyside Home for the Aged, said Thursday there appears to be little demand for apart ts or accommodation in homes for the aged. "It looks as if we might as well convert the building that for other use," said board chairman Alf Mc Millan, Wallers.

Women's Institutes

MELROSE W. I.

Mrs. Earl Badgley was hostess for the Christmas meeting of Melrose W. I. which had an extra good attendance. Gay decorations added a festive air while a record-player pealed forth carols as the ladies assembled. Mrs. C. Weese, president, opened the meeting and presided over the business period during which the secretary, Mrs. C. Pearce reported a short course, "How to be a Good Officer" was held at the home of Mrs. J. English with Mrs. Armstrong as leader and 15 ladies in attendance.

Reports of the community supper and a bake sale held under the Institute catered showed a substantial profit. A donation of $5 each to the Ontario Home for Mentally Retarded, Infants at Prinsdale, and a generous gift of groceries to a needy family was made. A euchre party in Melrose Hall is scheduled for the evening of January 9th.

At this stage, Mrs. F. Bush took charge of the program and gave a narrative, "Christmas Spirit" which depicted the impressions of a planetary visitor from outer space, perchance he visited this planet. Mrs. R. Fox followed with a Christmas reading on "What Your Christmas Card Reveals About You" which mentioned the countless shapes, sizes and messages of Christmas cards and the fact that few know that you consider them among your circle of friends.

Mrs. J. McLaren gave a reading, "Grand Yuletide Customs" which outlined the particular habit of various countries which give the festivities a distinctive native touch. In Hungary St. Nicholas calls two weeks before Christmas while in other European countries gifts are received on January 6 the feast of Epiphany.

Spanish children put out their shoes for their gifts while in Italy, England and Canada "Santa comes down the chimney" to leave the gifts. The very feast of Christmas celebration is not in the Christian dinner but this is quite fitting as one of the first Christian acts of the Church bade them gather for a festive meal along with their pagan neighbors. This festivity is a part of the Christmas celebration in early England and naturally church-going is the most important custom of Christmas Day.

To know the wealth of tradition that lies behind the beautiful Yuletide customs surely adds new significance to their observance and a keener appreciation of the thrilling message, "For unto you is born-will to-ward Men."

Christmas carols were sung by the group after which a "Tree Contest" was conducted with Mrs. Fox as winner.

Thanks were extended to the hostess, and after the meeting closed refreshments were served.

OLD FASHION

The second Hillier recently introduced to modern fashions was seen in Greek figurines produced about 400 BC.

Albert College W.G. Names 1959 Officers

The regular meeting of the Albert College Women's Guild was held Thursday in the manor, with Mrs. C. L. Hyde, the president, in the chair.

Mrs. Hyde welcomed the few members and introduced them to the Guild. A business meeting followed.

The president thanked all the members who had worked so faithfully during the past year, while Mrs. T. K. Franklin for her splendid work in presenting such interesting programs. Special thanks were given to Mrs. Moon and Mrs. Sprague who were co-conveners of the social committee.

OFFICERS

Mrs. Hudgins presented the incoming slate of officers for 1959 as follows: president, Mrs. C. L. Hyde; 1st. vice-president, Mrs. E. Hickey; 2nd. vice-president, Mrs. F. Wilson; secretary, Miss Erma Penter; assistant secretary, Mrs. C. Barlow; treasurer, Mrs. Hilliard; assistant treasurer, Mrs. C. W. Coleman; publicist, Mrs. W. Duff; assistant publicist, Mrs. T. K. Franklin; press secretary, Miss G. Tucker; maintenance committee, Mrs. May, Mrs. Gillis and Mrs. Maeffe; program committee, Mrs. T. K. Franklin; social co-conveners, Mrs. Moon and Mrs. Phair; special social committee, Mrs. E. Hickey and Mrs. Wilson; communications committee, Mrs. W. Finkle, Mrs. Brown and Miss M. Tooke; co-ordinator convener, Mrs. Fetherly.

Mrs. C. Howie was in charge of the program and opened it by reading a Christmas story followed by the singing of carols.

She also introduced Mr. Rouser Sherwin, assistant minister of Bridge Street United Church who told the Christmas story and the legend and history surrounding it.

Mrs. Howie thanked Mr. Sherwin and closed the program with a poem, entitled, 'Christmas Wish."

Mrs. Hyde extended to everyone a 'Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year," and invited all to stay for the special Christmas social hour which followed.

Going Places

Grey Cup Festivities Rough On Some Innocent Bystanders

By SHIRLEY and BOB SLOANE

Vancouver, B.C. — Professional football, an esoteric game involving an odd combination of the bruiest force and the greatest technical precision and intelligence, appeared to be a dying sport until a few years ago.

Contests between the cream of one-time college players were monotonously predictable in their results, and they failed to excite the partisan fanaticism of their school counterparts.

Then, thanks largely to a revived enthusiasm in Canada which caught fire in the United States, a big postwar boom developed. Canada was never able to attract the top American athletes on the college level, but it did snare them for its burgeoning professional field. And what the fans couldn't get excited about in the name of alma mater, t h e y could on behalf of their h o m e town.

It all reached a kind of climax here last month with the playing of the 40th annual Grey Cup challenge between Hamilton and Winnipeg. True to the tone of modern pro ball here, it was won by the underdog, Winnipeg.

MUNICIPAL BINGE

And the game was almost secondary to the biggest municipal binge this city — or possibly any city — had seen since Elizabeth and Princeton first started pushing each other around. It made a South Bend or Ann Arbor p e p rally look like a faculty cocktail party.

In a three day blast — which incidentally netted nearly half a million sound Canadian dollars in tickets and broadcast and television — the city succumbed to a fever that would have destroyed less hearty places than this northwesternmost outpost of civilization as we know it.

More than 15,000 gaudily garbed visitors, many of them from Canada's fronthiest w e s t, flooded the city equipped w i t h kegs, horns, pennants, whistles, balloons, and indefatigable voices. As many as 40,000 milled and caroused in the streets at all hours of the day and night, stalling what police had hoped w a s a carefully rerouted traffic to an utter standstill.

The morning of the game more than 150,000 persons watched a blue ones parade that included 50 floats, 18 bands, ten inevitable beauty queens, and three Calgary chuckwagons with 62 riders.

Some special trains were delayed six to nine hours by celebrants who pulled emergency brake cords, but their late arrival was scarcely noted in the general festivities.

ROUGH AND TUMBLE

Everything happened to Vancouver this weekend, including:

A television actress who fainted on the air giving a commercial during the game.

Hotel pillows that were slashed open and their feathers dumped on the street.

Burning mattresses that were tossed out of hotel windows. One of them cooked a lady on the head. When they ran out of mattresses, they threw springs.

Seventy-five drunk and disorderly arrests, presumably all the police and courts felt they could handle.

Six plate glass windows smashed.

Countless bottles, ribbons, horns, and hats scattered all over the city. The need for a reforced army of street cleaners and a welcome mat to help impoverished newspapers put out extras, rarely seen since television.

Police had already removed their lobby furniture, accurately anticipating a recurrence of events three years ago, when the Grey Cup was last held here — and which time one hotel alone suffered $2,500 worth of damage.

Some stairways were blocked and doors removed from their hinges.

Miraculously, only the lady hit by the mattress was seriously hurt. Maybe next time the hotels will remove mattresses, unused for sleeping anyway, and Canadian football is a rough and tumble business for innocent bystanders.

Endowed With Great Gifts

Alma Mason, author of the column appearing below, was born at St. Thomas, her maiden name being Alma Frances Brickman. At eleven years of age she won a gold medal in a city-wide essay contest for all schools. After graduating from collegiate, she attended Alma College. Miss Mason has published a book of poems and has contributed numerous articles to newspapers and magazines. Her column is being published by a number of Ontario daily newspapers and will be a Saturday feature in The Ontario Intelligencer.

By ALMA MASON

Today I heard a man say—"I wish I could do the kind things John does for folk. He is always digging deeply in his pocket to help those less fortunate than he." How commendable, John. Your generosity should be praised, but let us take a look at the man so full of approbation for you.

I thought of Emerson's phrase — "He lives from a great depth of being." Persons suffering from the effects of perverted judgment and misdirected love have learned to lean trustingly on the quiet strength of this man. Folk whose days are a maze of perplexities and woe are propelled through the weeks and months like whirling dervishes draw from his cool, deep well of moral thirst. Lacking the support of inner steadfastness and contentment, they find in him a solid prop in times of confusion and grief. Often his wise counsel has been the oil on the waters of a dangerously tragic controversy. How wonderful to possess traits of character such as his. He trusts all human beings to be decent. He believes the highest and best of all with whom he daily comes in contact. He draws on his unending resources of understanding sympathy wherever needed. He walks the earth lowly and patiently.

I have heard this man say many times, "I have no special talent. I must have been forgotten when such gifts were passed out." How very wrong he is. He has the divine talent of forgiveness. He has the ability to forget and chain into subjection grudges, petty jealousy, bogus ambitions. He has been endowed with a heart of contrite heart, a generous wealth of courtesy, a magnetism of soul which reaches out and encompasses and draws all kinds and classes of people. He has the "Peace of God' which passeth all understanding."

This man does not bestow gifts of money on his friends as John is able to do. Christ did not do that for us either, but He said, "My peace I leave with you." He gives us His life and His sacrificial death. A poor carpenter, He labored among the common folk, bringing into new beauty and clarity the lives of the lonely, the misunderstood, the scorned and the downcast.

This man does not think he has earned the title of "Christian." He does not think his life work important. He who know and love are convinced he walks humbly with his hand in the hand of God, quietly distributing his particular gifts of love and serenity in confusion—love and faith and cheer when the storms of life gather and break on the lonely and the forlorn and the helpless.

CLOSE TO THE STAR

Music to stir the multitude
Universal power of pen?
These were held from your open hands?
What gracious gifts were given then?

No special gifts, you say, are yours;
No brilliant life of beauty;
You merely trudge the common path;
You patiently walk with duty.

But what about your grateful heart?
The generous love you scattered?
How can you think these gifts are small,
Sordid or selfish or tattered?

You were endowed with faith in man,
With love to spread near and far;
You cannot see your precious gifts
For you stand so close to God's star.

"While other nations are proud of a history that goes back to the night of time, we belong to the sunrise. But our past is just as vital as theirs."—from a Monthly Letter of the Royal Bank of Canada.

This morning's mail brought a letter from Miss Stewart Masson, who keeps in close touch with a host of friends in Belleville, her former home, though she now lives abroad. Her great appreciation of and interest in all historical matters make her letters rare treasures to receive.

Because this letter concerns Belleville in a most surprising way, we would like to share with you its contents, in part:

"I have been staying with Mr. and Mrs. Allan Harper, also former Belleville residents now living in London; and while here, I've been reading a book written by Mrs. Harper's great-grandfather, (Mr. Walter Henry) entitled, "Trifles from My Portfolio." He was a military officer, also, who saw service in India and later was sent to St. Helena when Napoleon was there, and was present at the autopsy performed on Napoleon following his death. It was his duty to prepare the bulletin of the post mortem which was published by the British Government.

"Still later, Dr. Henry was sent to Canada. He finally settled in Belleville. (I think it is the most exciting to find that anyone, who had been at St. Helena when Napoleon was prisoner there, had later come to live in Belleville.) He died there and was buried in St. Thomas' Churchyard. Mrs. Harper saw the stone some years ago, but she cannot remember just where it is. Nor does she know why he lived in Belleville. That would be interesting to find out. . . ."

Would anyone have any information to give? It would be mighty welcome. For, indeed, we do not know.

GLIMPSES OF EARLY DAYS

Turning the pages of Mr. W.C. Mikel's "Belleville," Dr. Wm. Canada's medical practitioner in Upper Canada — 1783-1850"; "Families of Quinte Bay" and a pamphlet by Charlotte Whitton, "The Carrying-Place," gives us a privileged glance behind Time's Curtain of the early days, (when the U.E.L. first came to Canada) — and the early medical profession.

Dr. Canniff says that the medical men who gave professional attendance to the English-speaking people were "at first, if not altogether British surgeons attached to the army or navy. The stamp of Englishman who first practised medicine in Canada was as good as British medical education could at that time produce." The army hospital card carve bonnes out of the wilderness.

On such a Canadian-textured canvas were the careers of Dr. Walter Henry and his colleagues painted. Often with fiery, living colors, for danger is a military medical officer's constant companion.

Why would 1834 forever burn in Dr. Henry's memory, when he was appointed to the south King-ston army corps headed by Dr. James Geddes (his senior by eleven years and Halifax born, but having in common an English education with Dr. Henry)?

From Cataraqui, along the north shore to Kingston swept the dreaded Asiatic cholera. As Dr. Henry was worked side by side, feverishly combating the plague (for which the dead were given immediate burial to prevent further contagion), destiny was already foiled them.

For Dr. Geddes contracted the disease — and died, aged 54, leaving his widow (who lived to the age of ninety-two, nee Sarah Hannah Boles Gamble, daughter of Dr. Gamble of Queen's Rangers) and a growing family of sixteen children. Eleven daughters and five sons.

Stories of Famous Hymns

By HORACE B. POWELL

IT CAME UPON THE MIDNIGHT CLEAR

It came upon the midnight clear,
That glorious song of old,
From angels bending near t h e earth,
To touch their harps of gold:
"Peace on the earth, goodwill to men
F r o m Heaven's all-gracious King";
The world in solemn stillness lay
To hear the angels sing.

Still through the cloven skies they come,
With peaceful wings unfurled;
And still their heavenly music floats
O'er all the weary world;
Above its sad and lowly plains
They bend on hovering wing,
And ever o'er its Babel sounds
The blessed angels sing

For lo, the days are hastening on
By prophet bards foretold,
When with the ever circling years
Comes round the age of gold;
When Peace shall over all t h e earth
Its ancient splendors fling,
And the whole world give back the song
Which now the angels sing.

As long as Christmas seasons come and go, this delightful hymn will be sung. The Rev. Edmund Hamilton Sears, a Unitarian minister, will be a favorite of children and older folk alike.

It already has gone through more than 100 Christmases; it was composed in 1849 and w a s published a year later in a Boston magazine called The Christian Register.

The editor of The Register, Dr. Morrison, had received a copy of the hymn from the author soon after its writing. Long before it was published, he was giving it to his friends verbally. He read it, no one knows how, at a Sunday School festival where it attracted much interest and praise.

Years later, the editor who was also a pastor and preacher, told of the popularity of Mr. Sears' Christmas song in his own church.

"I always feel", he said, "that however poor my Christmas sermon may be, the reading and singing of this hymn are enough to make up for all my shortcomings."

Mr. Sears' hymn tells, in beautiful words, of how the singing angels proclaimed over all the earth as they appeared to t h e shepherds on the hills near to Bethlehem. It gives assurance to a weary world whose people, troubled and oppressed, are still awaiting fulfillment of t h e angels' promise. The "golden years of prophet bards foretold. When with the ever-circling years, Comes round the age of gold; When peace shall over all the earth Its ancient splendors fling, And the whole world give back the song Which now the angels sing.

The author of "It Came Upon The Midnight Clear" was a native of Sandisfield, Massachusetts. He was a graduate of Union College at Schenectady, New York and also of Harvard University. His ministry which began in 1834 at the First Unitarian Church in Wayland, Massachusetts continued for nearly 40 years and was spent almost entirely in the state of his birth.

Richard Storrs Willis, w h o composed the Christmas hymn tune, also was a native of Massachusetts. He was born in Boston and was the son of Deacon Nathaniel Willis, who founded The Youth's Companion. Young Willis was a graduate of Yale University and, during a season of post-graduate study in Germany, he formed a friendship with the famous composer, Felix Mendelssohn. In late years, he wrote much vocal music including student and patriotic songs, and published a notable volume entitled "Our Church Music".

Christmas and Pagan Customs

BY DR. HOWARD V. HARPER

born in the 3960th year of creation, the 2957th year after t h e flood, the 2015th year after the birth of Abraham, the 1020th year after Moses led the Jews out of Egypt, and the 1025th year after David was anointed King. This is pinning it down pretty close a little too close, in fact. The actual year of the Christ's birth is not known with any certainty at all.

If the year is in doubt, the day is even more so. Christmas was not set on Dec. 25th until well into the fifth century. Although scholars had tentatively suggested several other days a n d months. It is no accident, however, that the church finally adopted Dec. 25. It was a t i t l e time of year that all pagan peoples celebrated the birth of t h e sun, the coming of light, a n d Christianity simply took over and gave deeper meaning to t h e pagan festivals.

This meant that in the Roman world Christians absorbed t h e wild and orgiastic Saturnalia, in northern Europe the Yule festival, and among the Anglo-Saxons the New Year's celebration. And naturally, some of the pagan customs got carried over into t h e Christian observance, such as for example, the Roman practice of exchanging gifts at this season.

PURITAN RESISTANCE

The unmistakable marks or resemblance between Christmas and ancient festivals, superficial though they were, caused a resistance to the observance of the Christ's birthday that lasted for many centuries. As late as 1644, when the Puritans were in charge of the English government, any recognition of the day was forbidden by Parliament. Of course, the Pilgrims in America felt the same way about it.

One of the happiest carry-overs from pagan times is the Christmas tree. Despite the legend that credits Martin Luther with having started this pleasant tradition, the Christmas tree probably goes all the way back to ancient Egypt, and was probably originally a palm tree. Some palms still known put forth one new branch each month. In the Christ-

Club Activities

On Tuesday evening the Wedding Ring Club of College Hill United Church met for its regular monthly meeting.

The president, Mr. Charles Gray presided.

The business of the club was transacted and a proposed contribution for the club was presented and discussed.

After the business was concluded, the meeting was turned over to group No. 2 under the leadership of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Thompson, for the devotional. During the entertainment, Mr. Boyd Moorcroft rendered a solo and carol singing was enjoyed by everyone.

Mrs. Annis Dickens gave a reading of a humorous parody on "The Night Before Christmas". A short skit was put on by the group giving the customs of different countries at Christmas; their leading part were: Mr. and Mrs. Boyd Moorcroft; Mrs. Cara Sine; Mrs. John Cunningham and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Gray also Mr. and Mrs. Howard Thompson.

Refreshments of angel food cake, ice cream and coffee were served.

GOOD MANNERS

By Mrs. Beeckman

"THE LADY FIRST"

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

"To settle a discussion, will you please answer this question: When a letter is addressed to two people, which is the correct form of salutation, "Dear J o h n and Mary" or "Dear Mary and John"? — M.

"The lady first" is the proper idea here . . . therefore "Dear Mary and John."

WHEN EMPLOYER GIVES CHRISTMAS PRESENT

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Another girl and I are the only employees in this office of a small manufacturing company, and we would be most grateful if you will answer our question. She has worked here since last March, and we have been told that our employer, who is a very kind man, will probably give us Christmas presents.

(1) If he does, we would like to know if we should open our gift when he hands it to us, I think we should, but the other girl thinks we should.

(2) If he gives us presents, should we write him thank-you notes, even though we thank him at the time? — Joan and Sue

1) I agree with you that it's more graceful not to open the present when by hands it to you. Instead, I suggest y o u might say, "Thank you, very much, Mr. Lane. How kind of you to give us a present. If you don't mind, I'd like to keep it to put on my Christmas tree, to be opened Christmas morning."

(2) Yes, you should each write a thank-you note.

PROPER TO GIVE SHOWER FOR SECOND BABY

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Two weeks ago my sister and I gave a shower for a friend. Shortly afterward someone said, "Oh, you shouldn't give a baby shower for the second baby." So now I'm curious and would like to know the strict answer. —H.

Certainly it is proper to give a shower for a second baby . . . a third, or whatever number. It doesn't make sense t h a t the first baby should have all the glory of having a shower given for him or her!

Well, what does Joe complain about? As far as we can see he is complaining because Terry is a different type woman to his family and from the ideal they set for him. That she was drastically different from them was something he knew very well before marriage.

It looks as though Joe went chivalrously overboard in saving his mate. He sought and found a woman who represented freedom from all sexual inhibitions. Then he feels guilty about the whole thing, but he obviously is putting Terry instead of himself for his supposed misdeeds.

The touching part of this story is that Joe doesn't seem to understand that he represents to Terry the good, decent life s h e thought she had found — a man with a proper family background and rigid standards of conduct. Naturally, Terry felt that he would not only be a good husband and father, but would help keep her in line. Joe ought to wise up and recognize that he wants to become all he admires in women. She needs h i s help and I'd never be disappointed if not his cruel, childish disparagement.

Joe cannot complain t h a t Terry deceived him, in spite of the fact that he now goes fishing for items that may have been left out. He does not complain that Terry is now misbehaving. His dislike of her style of dress is merely a minor symptom in the whole picture.

Everyone of us knows the Outside of Christmas with its symbols of festivity . . . holly and mistletoe and brilliant trees. We know the Outside Spirit of Christmas as good old St. Nick, as the pleasure of exchanging gifts, as the kindred feeling toward our fellow men.

This Spirit is everywhere, in the thronging crowds, in the cheerful warmth of carols, in the greetings between strangers.

But when we pause, ill ever, in the crisp chill of evening's darkness to search the star-filled quiet . . . let us wonder of His birth and seek the story to be told our children of the Spirit on the Inside of Christmas.

MADOC JUNCTION

Eggleton WMS, W.A. Elect 1959 Officers

MADOC JUNCTION — Mrs. Sidney Kirkey was hostess for the December meeting of the Eggleton W.M.S. and W.A. on Thursday afternoon.

The president, Mrs. Bruce Stapley, presided over a program, which had been prepared by Mrs. Maurice Clancy and opened the meeting with the singing of the carol, "While Shepherds Watched", followed by prayer of general thanksgiving from hymnbook.

Selected portions of Scripture including St. Luke 1:68-79 was read by Mrs. W. McMullen and Isaiah 60:1-14 by Mrs. C. Fitchett.

Mrs. Harold Chambers played several Christmas carols and songs on her record player, which added greatly to the enjoyment of the meeting; Mrs. Keith Johnson read a poem.

There were 12 members, four visitors and three children in attendance.

Little Miss Judy Johnson gathered the offering, which was dedicated with a prayer by Mrs. B. Stapley.

The W.A. president, Mrs. McMullen conducted the business period.

Mrs. Bruce Stapley offered her home for the January meeting. Mrs. W. McMullen will prepare the program.

Motions were made: that all bills be paid; that proceeds from catering to wedding dinner was over $50), that Mrs. B. Stapley purchase a Christmas gift, and that the study book for W.M.S. be paid for.

Mrs. McMullen thanked all for their co-operation and assistance during the past year.

Reports were given by the various treasurers and secretaries showing a successful year. Another motion was made that a box of baby cards and a box of sympathy cards be purchased from the Mission Band, for use by the secretary.

The birthday bank was emptied and counted. A letter was read setting that for year 1959 the allocation was $160 and the Missionary for prayer Dr. Florence Murray, of Korea.

Mrs. M. Clancy presented the chapter on "Alaska", from the new study book — using a colored map with important cities and centres marked on it, and a telling of the work being done in Alaska by the various churches.

A thoughtful reading and poem was given by Mrs. Frank Smith.

Mrs. Stapley, reporting for the nominating committee, read the slate of officers for 1959 as follows:

W.M.S.

President — Mrs. Bruce Stapley; vice-pres. — Mrs. Gordon Nelson; treas. — Mrs. Carl Bridges; pianists — Miss Joyce Stapley and Mrs. Clancy; corr. and rec. secs.organized and recording sec. — Mrs. Clarence Fitchett; Christian stewardship sec. — Mrs. Charles Stapley; temperance sec. — Mrs. Harry Clarke; supply sec. — Mrs. Maurice Clancy; Mission Band sec. — Mrs. Maurice Clancy; baby band sec. — Mrs. Stourney Kirkey; associate members sec. — Mrs. Frank Smith; community friendship sec. — Mrs. Milton Reid.

W.A.

Pres. — Mrs. William McMullen; vice-pres. — Mrs. W. Hawley; treasurer — Mrs. Warren Harlow.

W.M.S. president requested that anyone, who found an interesting item on Christmas Customs, please bring it to the meeting.

Mrs. Stapley thanked Mrs. Kirkey for use of her home, also all, who had opened their homes for meetings during the year and all who had assisted on programs. Mrs. Stapley also expressed a warm welcome to the visitors present.

At the close there was an exchange of Christmas Gifts and a little extra fun was added by Mrs. Frank Smith, who had prepared a surprise parcel. This was passed around the group, with each person removing one wrapper, and the person to be the lucky person to remove the last wrapper and win the prize.

The hostess served delicious refreshments and all enjoyed a social chat.

Wallbridge

WALLBRIDGE—Christmas is just around the corner and many homes are lit up with pretty trees shining here and there and the Christmas spirit is everywhere.

The Sunday School Christmas concert was held in the Wallbridge Church on Monday night with a good attendance. A good program was given by the children. The teachers deserve much credit in preparing them. At the close of the program dear old Santa came along and made all children happy with gifts, candies and popcorn.

Election was held in Wallbridge on Tuesday and Mr. Jack Bush of Glen Ross and Mr. E. Kells of Johnston were elected for the two new councillors.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Pound were Tuesday evening guests of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Harris.

Snow plows are kept busy with the snow storms as roads are filled in at places. All are hoping that the weather will be fine for Christmas week.

The annual turkey draw put on by Wallbridge LOL was well attended last Friday night. The evening was spent playing euchre. Lunch was also enjoyed until the wee small hours.

Refreshments were served by the members of Wallbridge L. O. B. A. ladies.

A Very Merry Christmas to All.

Another reading "The Good Samaritan", was given by Audrey Stapley.

All enjoyed the song by Beverley Stapley, Sharon Reide and Marilyn Stapley, with Mrs. Reide at piano.

The leader, Mrs. M. Question of Fair Price for Stone Not Settled

OTTAWA (CP)—Judgment has been reserved on the question of a fair price for the rock in Nova Scotia's Canso causeway, subject of extended court hearings.

It began in 1954 when the federal government took action against Alistair Fraser, Nova Scotia's lieutenant-governor from 1952 to 1958, after he refused $5,500 compensation for property expropriated.

The government had expropriated part of Porcupine Mountain, owned by Mr. Fraser's family for many years, and used about 9,000,000 tons of the granite to build the Canso causeway linking Cape Breton Island to the Nova Scotia mainland.

Mr. Fraser seeks more than $1,000,000 compensation and federal counsel declared Thursday before Mr. Justice J. C. A. Cameron in Exchequer Court of Canada that "never was there a case where it was so patent that the plaintiff was endeavoring to make a killing on property that the Crown was under a pressing need to expropriate."

The government originally took 110 acres, blasting out millions of tons of stone. In offering the $5,500 compensation, it also returned all the land except 12.5 acres.

Counsel for Mr. Fraser said a valuation was being sought based on what a willing buyer might offer a property owner willing to sell.

SERGEANT CONVICTED

DENHAM, Eng. (Reuters)—A court martial here Thursday night found Master Sgt. Marcus M. Marymont of the U.S. Air Force guilty of murdering his wife with arsenic and committing adultery with a young English woman. Sentencing was postponed.

Squeaks, Squeals Traced to Faulty Cooling System

By EUGENE MILMOE

Although we rely on the temperature gauge to warn of cooling system trouble, there are times when the water pump or f a n broadcasts the first warning signal.

Fan (and fan belt) noises are much more common than water pump noise and usually easier to trace. Should the water pump be to blame, however, looseness, excessive clearance or end play, rubbing, a rough bearing or very hard pump seal could be at fault. Generally, it takes a mechanic to locate the trouble-maker.

Excessive wear, grease or incorrect fit cause many fan belt squeaks and squeals which a r e especially noticeable d u r i n g engine idle. Misaligned, cracked or sticking belt pulleys might be termed suspects of the second degree. If fan belt and pulley are blameless, bent or out-of-balance fan blade — a loose shaft — damaged or dry fan bearings, are next on the checklist.

P. H. asks: "What would cause a headlight to flicker off and on?"

(A) If a loose connection is not to blame, then a poor ground at the socket is probably the reason.

* * *

O. J. writes: "If the outer hole connection on my carburetor accelerator pump link is for winter driving and the inner for summer, what is t h e middle hole for?"

(A) On your carburetor, t h e long stroke hole is for winter, the middle for average summer driving and the shortest stroke position is used for high altitudes or abnormally hot weather.

From J. S.: "Recently, I bought a low mileage '56 model. Ignition, compression, valve timing, carburetor a n d fuel pump were all pronounced fit by a reliable mechanic . . . yet, the car lacks real pep and power."

(A) Perhaps your car is handicapped by a condition such as clutch slippage, dragging brakes, tight wheel bearings, underinflated or oversize tires, — or heavy engine oil.

W. Mc. asks: "My engine has developed a spark knock (ping) on hills or whenever I accelerate quickly. Is this usually a question of faulty ignition timing?"

(A) Often — but low octane fuel and overheating are common causes, too. A less fuel mixture or a build-up of carbon will also encourage spark ping.

Yule Bonuses Among Financial Houses Smaller

TORONTO (CP) — Santa Claus is still toting a bag of goodies to Toronto financial houses but the load is getting smaller each year.

As more firms change to profit-sharing plans which pay off at the end of the fiscal year, usually March 31, the term "Christmas bonus" is being replaced by a "Christmas present."

A few years ago it was common for a financial house to present as much as a year's salary in the form of a bonus to long-term employees during the Christmas season. A bonus of a year's salary, however, would be hard to find today.

"The cost of operation and a decline in business in the last two years has forced us to cut down on Christmas bonus giving," said one broker. "We'll probably always give the staff a little something extra' at this time of year but it won't be called a bonus. It will be a gift, unaffected by the trend in business."

TWO WEEKS' PAY TO SOME

The average Christmas gift this year is two weeks pay but it varies from turkeys to a month's salary. Several firms do not give employees anything at this time. Some give monthly bonuses.

Generally, the amount is slightly less than last year because of a decline in stock-market trading during the first half of the year, say the brokers.

The bonus is regarded by business as a form of gratuity to employees for their contribution to the company's successful operation during the year.

Scoharie

SCOHARIE — Mrs. Gerald Huff and Miss Joanne Huff spent from Friday until Monday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Durwood Huff, Picton.

Mrs. Ralph Stone and Mrs. William McGee enjoyed a potluck supper at Palamar, on Wednesday night. This was the Christmas party of Picton Chapter 273 with exchange of gifts. Everyone had a happy time.

The teacher and pupils of S.S. No. 11, Hallowell, held their Christmas concert at Over Hall on Thursday night. The hall was filled and after the concert, Santa appeared and made all the children happy.

Mrs. Don Sandrew and Brenda spent Sunday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Stone.

Young People's Union members of Bloomfield United Church enjoyed a Christmas party at the Sunday School rooms on Tuesday night.

Mr. Joe Lloyd and Miss Dorothy Lloyd enjoyed a weekend trip to Toronto and Hamilton. They visited Mr. and Mrs. George Lloyd at Toronto, and other relatives.

27 Polish Women Used as Guinea Pigs Arrive

NEW YORK (AP) — Weeping and laughing, 27 Polish women who endured "human guinea pig" experiments in a Nazi concentration camp flew here from Warsaw Thursday for a year of medical treatment in the United States.

The women, many unable to walk steadily, said they underwent medical atrocities in the Ravensbrueck concentration camp in 1942-44. The Nazis were testing sulphe drugs to combat infections developed from unattended war wounds.

The women gave this account:

Their legs were cut open, their bones broken or shattered, and poisonous bacilli or gangrenous-causing material, such as glass, wood, dirt and soiled rags were sealed into their legs.

When the victims developed raging fevers, the drugs were applied.

Sport Slices

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

You cannot, apparently, beat the sports fans of the Maritimes for sheer unadulterated loyalty.

Their idol of the scuared circle, one Yvon Durelle was knocked colder than one of his pet mackerel who has been covered on the beach for five days, by an aging antique, who rose from the mat to avenge what was first-round near-mayhem.

Yet those jolly old bluenoses and herring-chokers hail the New Brunswick coastal fishing-fleet owner like a hero fresh home from the wars or a fighter who went into the ring and licked the heavyweight champion of the world with a hand tied behind his back.

Mr. Durelle is making a triumphal tour of Maritime centres. And everywhere he gets a hero's ovation. In appreciation of the local homage and whatnot, the Number One citizen of Bal Sic. Anne, N.B., is promising them a clean knockout of his patriarchal conquerer if and when they meet again.

The entire population, something like 1,500 of Bal Sic. Anne, turned out to hail the unconquering hero. He was the village's Jack Dempsey as far as the loyal fisherfolk were concerned.

They say the mackerel and cod even boycotted other fishermen's nets to climb aboard a Durelle lugger in order to get a peak at the slugger who looked down twice for the count of nine and up for the count of ten.

Included in the food and fare he is feeding his fish and fans is the promise that he will measure the winner when he and archrival Atlantic meet again. He didn't say he intended to learn how to box.

For Durelle is a slugger who doesn't know any of the scientific niceties of the manly art, and who, to date, has relied on right-hand punches that can stun a hippopotamus at a range of three feet.

Actually, despite his defeat at the hands of the patriarchal Moore, the New Brunswick fisherman looked better in defeat than he has in most of his victories. As Moore put it, "it was a sensational battle." And the dramatic finish to the thrilling battle besides its interim incidents will erase the necessity of tub-thumping and imaginative press agents for the next get-together.

Durelle should have let matters go at that. Instead, some eight days after his battle he comes up with schoolboy charges of long counts by Referee Jack Sharkey, while Moore was on the deck.

He charged in a television interview that the referee made two nine-counts while the timekeeper counted off "12 or 14 seconds" on each knockdown. He said Sharkey took his own count and not that of the timekeeper, "also he broke us up too much and I couldn't fight inside the way I wanted to."

He did not say that the wily mentality of the 41-49 year-old master had a lot to do with letting him fight the way he wanted.

In any event Durelle's childish charges of the long count have been emphatically denied by the official timekeeper who termed the statement "so ridiculous it isn't even funny." He said he worked in co-operation with the other timekeeper and Sharkey was taking their count.

Durelle might better busy himself at correcting his own faults as a fighter and figuring ring and other strategy with which to best Moore, instead of trumping up alibis that a ten-year-old would disdain to use.

He admitted that money, more so than fame, is his object in winning the fight heavyweight title. "I'll go wherever there's the most money. In Moore's backyard or on one of my fishing boats, in Toronto or Montreal. It doesn't matter," he says.

He said he learned a lot in his fight with Moore. He should not forget the fact that the ancient mauler is an apt pupil himself.

On what happened on December 19, the next meeting between Durelle and Moore, regardless of where it is staged, should provide handsome paydays for both fighters. Archie, of course, will get the big one, and in this corner's opinion. it will be Durelle's last one.

JUNIOR "B" HOCKEY

The Belleville-Lambert Rollins, who do battle with the Prince Edward County Combines in Picton tonight, will make their next home start there on Monday against the powerful Kingston Johnson Motors crew.

Under the guidance of new coach Eddie Plata the locals came up with their best showing to whip Trenton here last Monday 8-5. They were impressive in the win and also looked good in a rugged practice session held Thursday night.

The club brass has hopes that the boys are now rounding into a squad which will win its share of games from here in. And there is no better time than Monday night for the boys to come up with a win. Kingston has a good hockey club, led by the high-scoring line of Doug Senior, Reg Mulholland and Bud Aylesworth. But they can be beaten. They are currently tied with Peterborough for the top spot but have lost only one game, while the Petes have dropped a pair.

Game time Monday night is 8.30. It will be a good hockey game and don't be surprised to see the Lamber-Rollins crew come through with an upset victory.

Canadiens' 'Toe' Kicks Over Poor Show In 4-1 Win

With an Eye on Black Hawks Blake Says His Champions Folded in Game With Leafs

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Coaches are hard to please.

Take Hector (Toe) Blake of Montreal Canadiens, the National Hockey League leaders, for instance.

His team downed the tail-end Toronto Maple Leafs 4-1 here Thursday night. Was Toe satisfied? Definitely not.

"We got three goals in the first period and I thought it was going to develop into a rout," moaned.

"Then for some reason our players just stopped skating. You can't let down for a minute in hockey. Our goalie, Jacques Plante, had to be very good in the last two periods or we might have been in trouble.

"Maybe when they took that tie-goal lead they unconsciously tried to protect it. All I know is they stopped skating and when they tried to get crashed up again they couldn't get going."

REASON TO MOAN?

Come to think of it, maybe Toe has reason to moan. And maybe his moaning is his way of peeping up the Canadiens for the game here tonight against Chicago Black Hawks who upset Boston Bruins 5-2 Wednesday night.

"Any team that can beat Boston by a 5-2 score you have to respect," said Blake, "they won't be pushovers and we'll have to skate 60 minutes instead of 20 like we did against Toronto."

The Canadiens have two games scheduled for the weekend. The second is against the third-place Bruins at Boston Sunday night.

They will play both games without the services of defenceman Bob Turner, who pulled a groin muscle in the game against the Leafs.

"It's too bad," said coach Blake about Turner. "He's been having a great year, playing far beyond our expectations. We'll miss Jacques Plante, but Charlie Lanfgois will see plenty of action on our defence."

NEWS HANDICAPPED

Meanwhile the Chicago camp announced the Hawks will be handicapped against the Canadiens here tonight by the loss of centres Ted Sloan and Ken Wharram.

Sloan, who has been the Hawks' scoring punch, will be out of action for at least a week ID recurrence of a knee injury in Wednesday night's game against the Bruins. Wharram, who scored a high point-getter in the same game.

There is only one other game tonight, Boston at Toronto.

The Sunday schedule shows all teams in action while Montreal is at Boston. Toronto plays against the fourth - place New York Rangers at New York and the second - place Detroit Red Wings go against the Black Hawks at Chicago.

Big Nino Puts McMurtry Away In 1st Round

NEW YORK (AP) — Big Nino Valdes overwhelmed Pat McMurtry with a devastating attack to stop the Tacoma, Wash., boxer in 2:28 of the first round Friday night at Madison Square Garden. Valdes weighed 213, McMurtry 188 pounds.

Valdes dropped McMurtry with a left hook to the head near the midway mark of the opening round and floored him again with a right hand, following two hooks. As Nino swarmed over his man, McMurtry dropped to one knee, bounced up and reeled against the ropes as referee Harry Kessler stopped it.

It was the first time the 26-year-old McMurtry had been stopped in 34 pro fights.

TOOK CONTROL

Using his 23-pound weight advantage and superior reach and height, Valdes controlled the action all the way. He chased Mcmurtry from the opening bell, digging a left to the body. When Pat backpedaled back with a jab, Nino moved in and dropped him with a short left hook.

The bewildered Pat got up quickly at two but was forced to the ropes by a right to the head and referee Kessler, Valdes rammed two hooks to the head and body and then drove home a right to the chin that floored Pat for the second time. He was the count on one knee, getting up at nine, but Valdes went after him again, McMurtry suddenly felt back near the ropes and dropped to his knees. Referee Kessler stopped it.

SCREAMS FOR PATTERSON

Bobby Gleason, Valdes' manager who had proclaimed the hulking Cuban "champion of the world" by his own decree earlier in the week, immediately started yelling for a title match with Floyd Patterson. A Havana promoter has offered Patterson $400,000 to defend his crown in the Cuban capital this year.

Valdes is rated No. 2 among the challengers by Ring Magazine and No. 4 by the National Boxing Association. McMurtry, who entered the fight with a 30-3-1 record, was rated No. 10 by Ring but was unranked by the NBA.

Valdes, a 7-to-5 favorite, has won six straight since losing to Patterson on a 15-round decision in 1957. He recently celebrated his 30th birthday.

"He no ucer, me assassin," said Valdes. "Me keel Patterson twice—one for title and one just for me."

PLANS TITLE DEFENCE

LIVERPOOL, England (AP)—World featherweight champion Hogan (Kid) Bassey arrived Friday from the United States and will spend Christmas with his wife and two children. "But I won't be here long," the Nigerian-born fighter said. "I plan to return to America in mid-January to defend my title against Davey Moore."

Durelle, Moore May Fight In Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — The Globe and Mail says a return bout between Yvon Durelle and lightheavyweight champion Archie Moore may be held at the Canadian National Exhibition grandstand here Sept. 5.

The newspaper says Toronto boxing promoter Frank Tunney and CNE officials are interested in the venture.

Tunney is quoted: "I have no direct comment on the matter. But I do think such a fight would attract the largest crowd in Canadian boxing history. Their fight in Montreal was so tremendous that a rematch is a natural."

Moore scored an 11th - round knockout over the Canadian champion from Bale Ste. Anne, N.B., in a title bout at Montreal Dec. 10.

The Globe also quotes Harry Price, CNE sports chairman, as saying no proposition about a Durelle - Moore fight has been made. "But if such as offer is made, we will be glad to explore the matter."

Durelle said in Toronto earlier this week he was ready to sign for a rematch where the best money was offered. "It could be in Moore's back yard or in Toronto or Montreal. It doesn't matter," the boxer told interviewers.

INVITE CANADA

TOKYO (AP) — The Japan Rugby Association says it will invite a Canadian all-star team to visit Japan early next year for a series of goodwill matches. According to the plan tentatively made by the association, the Canadian team will arrive here Feb. 24 and play eight games against Japanese teams in four cities. The visit here would be the second for a Canadian all-star rugby team. A similar group came in 1932.

AFTER ALLARD

MONTREAL (CP) — Jim Mechan, Calgary, general manager of Ottawa Rough Riders, says the Big 4 football club hopes to sign quarterback Bob Allard of Boston. Allard was in Montreal Wednesday on invitation of the club. "We talked business over and he mentioned that his parents were born in Nova Scotia," said Mc-Caffrey. "But he didn't recall at the moment whether he was born before or after his parents became naturalized United States citizens. But we are interested in Allard as a quarterback, regardless of whether he is classed as a Canadian or an American."

Kingston Blanks Hull Ottawa, Dutchmen Beat Maroons 5-2

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The 33 jinx appears to be haunting Ontario senior hockey leaders.

A few weeks back Whitby Dunlops took their first OHA Eastern Senior A loss of the season in their 12th game. Friday night Hull-Ottawa Maroons, trailing a 12-game win streak on home ice, collapsed 5-2 before the second-place Kitchener-Waterloo Dutchmen.

Chatham still holds a five-point edge in the OHA-NOHA standings but Kitchener hopes to do something about that when the two clubs meet again tonight in the Dutchies' rink.

In other OHA-NOHA action Sudbury Wolves lightened their hold on third place beating the visiting Windsor Bulldogs 6-3.

MERCHANTS WIN

Games in the Eastern division saw Belleville McFarlands down Cornwall Chevies 4-3 and the first - place Kingston Merchants spank the last - place Hull-Ottawa Canadiens, third-ranking club.

For a time it looked as though Chatham was off to another win. But Kitchener scorers broke out late in the opening period to post a 3-1 edge and burn there on they never looked back.

Ken Laufman, Bill McKnight, Larry Mussleman, Butch Martin and Bill Saunders scored for Kitchener. Bush Chalmers got two goals and Ken Ullyot one.

Sudbury stretched its unbeaten string to five by holding off a Windsor comeback drive in the third period which produced all three of the visitors' goals.

TOMMIE INJURED

High-scoring winger Nick Tomiuk was lost to Wolves when he crashed into the boards late in the game and had to be taken to hospital for X-rays. Officials said he appeared to have pulled a muscle in his back.

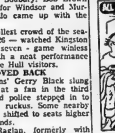
Bulldogs pulled goalie Dan Olesevich late in the third in an effort to tie the score but despite the efforts of the Sudbury end they were stopped.

Pete Pilote, Frank O'Grady, Jim Logan and Gerry Healy scored for Sudbury. Bob Brown fired two for Windsor and Murray Costello came up with the other.

The smallest crowd of the season — 1,226 — watched Kingston break a seven - game winless streak with a neat performance against the Hull visitors.

FANS MOVED BACK

Canadiens' Gerry Black slung his stick at a fan in the third period and police stepped in to prevent a ruckus. Some nearby fans were shifted to seats higher in the stands.



Bags Raglan, formerly with Belleville, was in the Kingston lineup for the first time and helped tighten up the home club's defence.

Playing coach Bus Gagnon scored two in the first period, Frank Chisholm added two in the second and the Kingston scoring was rounded off by Bep Guidolin and Moe Savard.

A slim 1,200 saw Belleville hold Cornwall on Belleville ice, although the visitors outshot McFarlands 32-27.

Lammy Lamirande, recently obtained from Lachute Aces, opened his Belleville career with a goal. Minnie Menard, Wiener Brown and Johnny McLellan reduced the rest.

Bonnie Muir, Ron Quennerville and Ches Melski clicked for the Cornwall markers.

"The ref's decision was O.K. but I wish I could say the same about yours in making the match!"

Macs Shade Chevies 4-3 But It Was Awful Close

Blow 2-Goal 2nd-Period Lead But Snatch Victory in Third; John McLellan Nabs Winner

By GEORGE H. CARVER
Sports Editor

Playing before distinguished company, the McFarlands stretched their unbeaten league string to six here last night, but it was closer than your next breath.

With President William Ledel, and secretary-manager George Dudley of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association looking on, the Macs blew a two-goal second-period lead, then roared back to edge a fighting Cornwall Chevies team 4-3.

Ray Miron's bedtime saying "thirteen" refused to say uncle after splitting two goals in the first period and yielding two counters to the Allan Cup champions in the second frame. They came back with two quick tallies in the third chapter to tie the count only to have the Macs score the winner midway through the period.

Mr. Dudley drew the lucky ticket for the free trip to Prague for the world championships, or one thousand dollars, which was won by Mrs. Hersey Hatfield, 407 Dundas St. East. Mr. Ledel presented the Carling player-of-the-week trophy to Lou Sentes.

Slightly wacky happenings featured the game. No official linesmen turned up at the start and Bill Holway and Ted Hurst were pressed into service from the customers' seats.

The Chevies pulled their goalie with five seconds to go in the third period and the siren shrilled game-end with the clock reading four seconds left to play. The Chevies protested, and the remaining time was played out with the Macs successfully holding the fort.

The game was a solid check-ing affair albeit clean with Referee Art Casterton handing out but four minor penalties, three to the McFarlands. One of the winners' penalties paved the way to the Chevies pair of quickies in the second frame.

Johnny McLellan fired the winning goal with Lauzon, Menard and Brown scoring the others. Hildebrand and Jones each had two assists with Paypette, Benoit, Bradley and Smrke getting singles. Muir, Quesnille, and Meleki were the Chevies marksmen.

The Chevies failed to beat Gordie Bell when McLellan was chased in the first period but Devaney was equally good at the other end, a once familiar trio teaming up on the scoring when Benoit sent Payette and Menard away on a minute whipping home Paul's pass to put the Macs one up.

Five minutes later Muir, Mc-Ley and Henri worked in close to Bell's cage with the former driving a partially screened shot through the goalie's pads to tie the score.

The teams battled up-and-back in the second period with the Macs power plays failing after McLeay was chased. Then they struck suddenly for two quick markers. Hildebrand's pass to the goalmouth struck Lamirande's pads and dropped into the net with the Macs new fleecman driving the puck home. Jones was in the play.

A minute later, Bradley, Brown and Smrke drove in on the Chevies net with "Wheezer" smashing home Bradley's pass in front of the net.

At the first and furious third period both goalies were tested hard from driving plays. The Chevies cut the margin to 3-2 after four minutes when the puck rolled over the Bellevville goal-line with Quesnille getting credit for the score.

MacDonald was chased a minute later and the Chevies threw their power at the Macs goal. Meleki, Goyette and Muir combined to get in close with Muir's drive hitting the post. Meleki, racing in, smashed home the rebound to knot the count.

It was anybody's game from here in with both goalies having narrow escapes in the best minute of the night.

Midway through the period Johnny McLellan raced in close to take Davy Jones' pass from the blueline to beat Devaney with a hard backhand shot with Hildebrand getting an assist.

The Macs successfully defended their slim margin over the rest of the route while making several unsuccessful forays at the other end of the ice. The Chevies outshot the Macs in each period and overall 32-27.

Brown Panther In Hospital Recalls Old Days

NEW YORK (AP)—"You tell the folks I'm coming back. I'll be out of here."

Harry Wills, the old Brown Panther of the 1920s, wanted that passed on Friday from hospital.

The one-time heavyweight contender is ailing. Doctors haven't found out what's wrong with him but he is undergoing a series of exploratory tests.

Hospital officials said Wills, 68, will remain a the hospital for several weeks.

"He is not in critical condition," said an official.

Wills fought about every top heavyweight of his day but never got the fight he wanted most—a title shot at Jack Dempsey. He did collect $50,000 for a fight with Dempsey that never came off.

"It wasn't Jack's fault that we never fought," Wills said a few years ago. "He wasn't scared of anybody. It was a contract fight. It was the racial issue at the time. I didn't get that fight just cause I'm the cards.

Asked whether he thought he could fight Dempsey today, Wills replied:

"That's a secret, chappie. I'll tell you this—it would have been one helluva fight."

Giants, Browns Split To Will Attract Record Crowd

By JACK HAND

NEW YORK (AP) — The the third and positively last time this year, Cleveland Browns and New York Giants meet tonight for the western conference title of the National Football League.

Beating Cleveland once a year is more than most clubs can handle. The Giants already have done it twice despite the tremendous ground running of Jimmy Brown. "Now they must do it a third time—or else.

Yanks

The game will be bulging with a sellout crowd of 72,000 and a television audience to face again collide with Brown, the best ground gainer in league history.

Only the weatherman can spoil the game. He's been very kind so his good behavior. Good, that is compared to last Sunday when snow turned the stadium into a Christmas card setting. The weather is expected to be mild and cold with the temperature around 35 degrees at game time. The field is in fairly good shape considering the deep freeze of last weekend.

The only tickets left are the 12,000 standees and 5,000 standing room positions that go on sale at the Stadium Booths.

ON CANADIAN TV

The game will be televised by the full Canadian CBC network and will be carried by the CBC on its trans-Canada TV network.

After 12 regular-season games and a long exhibition schedule, this is the "money game" for the Browns and Giants. The winner goes into the rich championship Sunday, Dec. 28, against Baltimore Colts. As that game will be played at the ball park, either New York or Cleveland, and the players will get 18 per cent of the gate, including the $500,000 TV money, a winning share next week should be more than $4,500.

The Giants' sturdy defensive unit is hale and hearty, ready to take another shot at stopping the fabulous Mr. Brown. But the offensive unit is crippled.

MANY CRIPPLES

Alex Webster, the club's leading ground gainer and runner in last Sunday's 13-10 victory, didn't even work out Friday. Both knees are bothering him and probably will be in there as long as he can possibly go. Webby, a regular tackle, didn't play last week and will start at left half. Harry, a regular guard, has an infected toe, but probably will play. Buzz Nutter, a starting defensive tackle, is out with a chipped bone in his ankle. And Pat Summerall, whose 49-yard field goal beat the Browns last Sunday, has been hobbled by a leg and a knee injury.

Chuck Conerly's passing best the Browns in Cleveland Nov. 2 when he threw for three touchdowns in a 21-17 victory. Probably will be Conerly chucking again as the main threat of the Giants' offence with halfback Frank Gifford throwing occasionally on the option. Gifford will start at quarter to probe for

Iowa Quarter Named MVP In Big Ten

CHICAGO (AP) — Randy Duncan, Iowa's outstanding quarterback, has been named the Big Ten's most valuable player.

Duncan was selected in the Chicago Tribune's annual poll which started in 1924 with Red Grange's name first on the list. Duncan is a member of the Associated Press all-America team.

Duncan is first draft choice of Green Bay Packers of the National Football League. He is being sought by Ottawa Rough Riders of the Big Four football union.

Duncan will lead Iowa against California in the Rose Bowl game New Year's Day.

Fights Last Night

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

New York—Nino Valdes, 213, Havana, stopped Pat McMurtry, 211, Tampa, 4.

San Diego, Calif.—Charlie Powell, 210, San Francisco, outpointed Charley Norkus, 218, Fort Washington, N.Y., 10.

Quezon City—Kalingo, 146 Manila, outpointed Pete Petron, 136, Guam, 10.

HORSES BURNED

CAMDEN, S.C. (AP) — Several race horses died Friday night in a blaze that destroyed 13 horses in the stables. Seven horses and two ponies were trapped in the flames and died.

Cleveland weak spots before Conerly takes over.

PLUM TO TOSS MORE

Cleveland's bread-and - butter game all season has been Brown's strong running and the field goals of Lou Groza. Milt Plum passes only enough to keep the pressure off Brown, although he has a talented receiver in Ray Renfro. Coach Paul Brown has indicated he may do more throwing.

The Giants have the best defence and the best punter in Don Chandler. Cleveland has the stronger offence.

If the score is tied after regulation time, they will keep going to a sudden-death ending. The first team to score a point will win. Because of this factor, the books are quoting no points this week in man-to-man betting the Giants are 11-to-10 favorites.

Atlas Radio Is Forerunner Of New System

WASHINGTON (AP) — The space communications system tested with President Eisenhower's Christmas message is designed ultimately to provide a new aid to the military services in worldwide communications.

David Young, space technology coordinator for the Defense Department Advanced Research Projects Agency, gave this account today in telling of plans to break current bottlenecks in long-distance communications.

ARPA directed the launching of the Atlas which now is orbiting high above, by the earth with the radios and a tape recorder aboard.

SPACE RELAY STATIONS

Young told a reporter that antellites would be used as space relay stations to transmit messages on high radio frequencies which can not be used in ordinary transoceanic, long - range radio transmission.

He indicated the system also would be used to file the message capacity now offered on crowded oceanic cables.

The defense scientist gave this picture of Atlas' communications gear:

The radio system consists of two devices each a little larger than an ordinary portable radio. Each device can receive voice or teletype-type radio, store it on a tape recorder, then transmit it to a ground receiving station upon command.

TWO RADIO DEVICES

The two radio devices are carried in fin-like tunnels on the sides of the fuel tanks of Atlas' rocket carcass. Two were installed in case one should fail. Each was tuned to a slightly different wavelength in the high frequency band.

Atlas will pick up any messages which are in a proper code thus excluding all unwanted signals. Likewise a special ground receiver will be set to catch only such messages as are addressed to them in their particular codes.

Young said that at present the receiving stations are not placed identically to the relay satellites. Plans envision locating them all near the equator.

SUDBURY

the top officials were in Toronto. "Now I can go back to work and have a rest."

About 120 men have been working at the union hall daily, issuing vouchers and assigning pickets.

Few major strikes in Canada have been more peaceful. There was not an incident of any kind on the picket lines, which generally are in deserted areas, also in some cases, separated by muskeg miles apart. The pickets are still on the job, pending ratification of the agreement.

SALES OFF 30 P.C.

A survey taken Friday showed business during the strike was off about 30 per cent, with a pickup noted in the last two weeks as compared with the first two months of the strike.

Several retailers noted that local business was boosted, especially on weekends, by shoppers from Espanola and other communities along the highway.

Dr. Tom Dixon, in charge of the psychiatric unit at Sudbury General Hospital, said he has found no increase in mental disturbances that could be attributed to the strike.

"I have seen no evidence of maladjustment in the district," said Dr. J. B. Cook, medical officer of health for the district health unit. "After all that outside publicity I came to a particular spot to keep tab on those things."

The city hospitals said there was no increase in cases admitted with malnutrition. There were also no cases attributable to the strike.

DRAW ON SAVINGS

Bank managers reported a steady drain on savings—not so much a rush as frequent small withdrawals.

City tax arrears by the end of the year are expected to be about 1.7 per cent, treasurer George McCormack reported. Relief cases are up about 400 over the same time last year, nearly all involving persons said to be in indirect result of the Inco strike. Strikers are not eligible for relief or unemployment insurance.

There have been fewer than 10 evictions and fewer than seven eviction notices in division court since the strike began.

ARENA CROWDS DROP

The Sudbury Arena budget is expected to show a deficit of $15,000 mainly because of a drop in crowds watching the Wolves hockey team. Attendance has been down an average of 1,200 per game.

Such statistics as these tell something of the strike. Others are shown in the hundreds who found strike pay inadequate and sought food, clothing and fuel from such agencies as Catholic charities, the Salvation Army and church and social welfare agencies.

Those agencies will continue their work for several weeks.

But during those weeks there will be a new spirit throughout the district, a spirit that began yesterday afternoon based on the knowledge that things may be rough but there is a long line of pay cheques coming up.

FIRE IN SCHOOL

WOODBRIDGE TOWNSHIP, N.J. (AP)—Several hundred pupils were led to safety Thursday after a minor fire broke out in the basement of a public school. Damage was small and no one was injured. Firemen blamed the blaze on a cigaret tossed into a paper towel container in the basement washroom.

Higher Water Level Seen as River Backs Up

MONTREAL (CP) — The water level in Montreal harbor rose rapidly Friday night as the St. Lawrence River backed up behind a huge mass of solid ice extending 20 miles downstream from Montreal Island.

The ice, up to 25 feet deep in places, acts as a bar across the river and has caused 10 foreign ships in Montreal harbor. Eleven other ships just missed its clutches.

Between 4:30 p.m. and 11:30 p.m. the harbor level rose from 27 feet, seven inches to 40 feet, nine inches.

But at midnight the rise was reported levelling off.

When the harbor reaches 41 feet, water begins spilling over the banks at low - lying shore points across the river from Montreal. Tunnels are frequently flooded.

ICEBREAKER BUSY

The icebreaker N.B. McLean pushed new ice into the St. Peter Friday although a heavy snowstorm blanketed visibility and hampered shipping operations.

The McLean, aided by the Ernest Lapointe, is to attack again today.

Until a channel is punched through the jam, 19 ocean freighters must cool their bows in Montreal harbor.

Even other foreign ships had reached Lauzon, 25 miles down river, before the ice-jam formed between Montreal and Cap St. Michel. They proceeded Friday to Trois-Rivieres, 90 miles downstream from Montreal.

Cancer Leading Cause of Death At Some Ages

TORONTO (CP) — Cancer now is the leading cause of death in Ontario among women aged 25 to 34, the annual report of the Ontario Cancer Treatment and Research Foundation says.

The disease is also second or third most frequent death cause among men and at all ages combined and for both sexes cancer is exceeded only by diseases of the heart as the chief cause of mortality," the report states.

"Forty years ago about one death in 16 in the province was ascribed to cancer. Now it is one death in six.

"The principle cause of the increase is, of course, the aging of the population owing to a decrease in deaths from other causes in the earlier years of life."

During 1957 there were 5,710 new cancer cases and 3,909 non-cancer cases registered at Ontario cancer clinics. In addition, 1,731 cancer cases were reported by registries in hospitals associated with the clinics.

RED EDITORS WARNED

MOSCOW (AP)—Soviet newspaper editors were warned Thursday against too attractive display of crime news and murder mysteries. Party Life, official journal of the Communist party central committee, said some newspapers were guilty of diverting their readers from the tasks of Communist construction, cultivating bad tastes among their readers and wasting newsprint.

ports for grain would "create a serious and continuing problem in Canadian trade relations".

The former president of the Winnipeg Federation of Agriculture added:

"Freight earnings by American-subsidized vessels will further increase Canada's deficit trade balance with United States and reduce the ability of Canadian exporters to earn U.S. dollars to purchase Canadian exports.

"American subsidized ships . . . will take cargo which would otherwise be available for Canadian shipment at Montreal."

He suggested these problems should be taken up by Canadian cabinet ministers in their respective jobs, a meeting here with their American opposite numbers, in addition of the periodic sessions of the joint Canadian-American cabinet-committee.

The government official said here that the Canadian government pays subsidies only for domestic services between Canadian ports and not for overseas shipping trade.

which Inco opposed increased wages and benefits estimated at an eight per cent boost on a one-year contract.

Inco here offered a three-year agreement with increases of 11½ per cent in the second and third years but none in the first. The union asked for three per cent in the first year and 3½ in each of the others.

Workers lost nearly $14,000,000 during the walkout. Under-ordinary conditions the strike would have cost Inco $24,000,000 but it was able to continue sales from a $50,000,000-pound stockpile.

It is expected to be at least four weeks before all workers are back at Inco's mining and smelter operations in Sudbury and the refinery at Port Colborne. Pay cheques won't start until two weeks after that.

Inco workers averaged between $85 and $90 a week before the strike.

BULLETINS FROM BIRDLAND

By WINIFRED WILSON

DUCKS ON HOLIDAY

Where now are our Canadian breed ducks? All bobolinks are gathered for the winter in a comparatively small space near the centre of South America; all Cape May warblers are concentrated in the West Indies. But ducks are spread out over a very wide expanse of territory that stretches from the limit of open water down to northern Brazil and central Chile. Although it is unusual for many ducks to winter in the interior, diving ducks are at this time found on both the Pacific and the Atlantic coasts; in the Aleutians and Alaska, in southern Greenland and Newfoundland.

Nevertheless, the habit of the majority is to seek warmer climates, living either by day or by night at the rate of about 40 or 50 miles an hour, and stopping over occasionally where suitable food and accommodation are to be found. On account of the modern system of land banding, it is possible to tell with a fair amount of accuracy what flyways are used by each species and where the goal is attained.

By far the longest and most important flyway on the continent is that which extends from the valley of the Mackenzie River over the Great Lakes and the Mississippi River for its entire length down to the Gulf of Mexico. There are no mountains to interrupt the journey for more than 2,000 miles. This airway is used by vast numbers of ducks, which come from side paths all along the way to join the migrating flocks. On arrival at the Gulf coast, the ducks spread out east and west for their winter holidays.

Besides the ducks that breed on the extreme northern part of the east coast, a number from the interior, using three or four different paths, migrate by the Atlantic flyway which hugs the coast all the way from the arctic down to Florida. Eiders, and old-squaws start at the beginning, to be joined by canvasbacks, redheads, scaups and others that have nested on the plains of central Canada. In the same manner as the flock is augmented from time to time, so it is diminished. The eiders stop at Long Island, others leave the main flock at various points on the trip down, and many, including even some of those oldsquaws, go right on to Florida.

And on the story goes — ringnecked and canvasbacks wintering from New England to Guatemala, shovellers from Long Island to Columbia, and the whole-wheeled teal from Maryland to Brazil.

Duncan and his expectant wife separated two weeks after their wedding. Duncan, who is defending his mother in court said he was unaware of the annulment until his mother's arrest last week.

a wavelength of 107.97 megacycles, just above the band used by fm (frequency modulation) stations in the U.S. The second tracking transmitter, on 107.94 megacycles, was unaccountably dead.

Communications experts saw in Atlas a pioneering stride toward systems carrying large amounts of information to any point on earth. The present radio wavelengths already are overcrowded. Long wires and oceanic cables are very and expensive.

The scientists hope to open up a new communication field by beaming ultra-fast sight and sound satellites in the comparatively spacious high frequencies. The satellites would then relay the words and pictures to other satellites for subsequent downward. One troublesome satellite would store their information, as does Atlas, and release it over the desired spot on earth.

GOODWILL MESSAGE

"This is the president of the United States speaking," came Friday's playback of Eisenhower's voice through some static and faded as in the early days of shortwave.

"Through the marvels of scientific advance, my voice is coming to you from a satellite traveling in outer space.

"My message is a simple one. Through this unique means I convey to you and to all mankind America's wish for peace on earth and goodwill toward men everywhere."

U.S. officials expressed belief that the new show of U.S. power in missiles would have a softening effect on Soviet Premier Khrushchev.

West European scientists saw the launching as a stride toward the manned flight voyages into space. Newspapers there said the United States had forged ahead of the Russians. Moscow radio broadcast the news without comment.

TV TIPS

by JOHN WETTLAUFER

The popularity of television has reached the point where many homes have a second set in the recreation room . . . or perhaps in the children's room so that the small fry can follow Mickey Mouse . . . while dad watches the hockey game.

Where there are two or more sets in the same house, they are usually hooked to the same antenna. This usually causes a big loss of signal to each set, or one TV may interfere with the other.

A 2-set coupler on the antenna largely overcomes these troubles, but there is still a slight loss of signal. The simplest way to prevent any loss at all is with a 2 or 3 set signal booster. It's inexpensive . . . easily installed and brings the signal strength up to full power on each TV set hooked to the aerials.

CIRCLE TV SERVICE, 388 Coleman St., have the answers to many television problems. If you're not satisfied with your TV reception, phone WO 8-6791 (in Trenton EX 2-7609) and let our experienced technicians study your problem.

THE GOLDEN YEARS

Try Asking Retired Dad's Advice Instead of Giving It All to Him

By THOMAS COLLINS

"A retirement Christmas is coming up in our family. And with it is coming a group of decisions that can affect us all for all of our lives.

"Our father, 65 last September, will retire on Jan. 1.

"I am a son, the oldest of four children. All of us are married. Our mother, 62, has been writing us all letters for the last 4 1/2 months telling us of father's growing dependency over retiring, and of his concern over the small amount of money he will have.

"As a result of these letters the four children have been in constultation with each other. We have reached some decisions we plan to bring up when all of us go back home for Christmas. We would like your advice on them.

"Father's situation is this: The total retirement income he a n d Mother will have is $263 a month. They own their house, where all of us grew up, and with a stretch it might bring $15,000. Taxes last year on it were $291. They have $6,800 in savings, most of it in Government Bonds. Father h a s worked in a retail clothing store for 38 years, and has never had any hobby except bird hunting.

"What we have decided to propose —

"— That the four children buy the house for $15,000, paying $1,000 a year. This will add $83 a month to Father's income, for a total of $345 a month until he is 70. This will cost each child about $30 a month (including taxes).

"— That Father and Mother continue to live in the house on a $200 a month budget and use the excess $145 a month to plan winters in California or Florida or Arizona.

"That none of us call on Father's clothing store to see if he might be eligible to work on vacations and during sales, in order to keep his hand in.

"— That Father hold t h e $6,800 as is for emergencies.

"Do you have any thoughts on the situation?"

SPLENDID IDEA

Yes. And the main one is that you have one splendid idea surrounded by a lot of bad ones.

The proposal to buy the family house over 15 years is a fine one. You keep the family homeplace. You maintain a home for your parents. You substantially increase your parents' income for what will probably be for life.

You're nice kids to h a v e thought this one up.

But then you get paternal. Your father has had enough sense to get in out of the rain for 65 years, and I suspect he'll find a way to get in out of it at 65. Of course he's dependent. M o s t urers are on the eve of retirement. And it's natural that they would be concerned with life on $263 a month. Wouldn't you be? You've let Mama lead y o u down a path to what's going to be a pretty tough Christmas bur- for Papa, unless you reconsider.

Propose that you buy the house on the 15-year plan, and leave it at that. If they want to live there, fine. But if they prefer to go walrus hunting in Alaska, so be it. You can rent the place.

Don't stick your noses i n t o Father's clothing store. It'll look like a plea for charity. If Father wants to go it — and your proposal does make sense — let him. But don't you do it.

On the $,800 savings. I'd suggest that you go take care of your hoard and let Pop handle his. He hasn't lost his marbles just because he's 65, and too many children — even good ones like you — take the somewhat arrogant attitude that he has.

You say he likes bird-hunting. If he asked me for advice, which he hasn't, I'd tell him to t a k e about $2,000 of his savings, in- form the clothing store to go sell his own pants, and buy a working interest in a bird-dog kennel. Maybe in South Carolina or South Georgia.

He could afford to lose it, though he probably wouldn't. If he did, he could live well enough on $263 a month, and live splendidly if you added $83 with t h e house deal.

So go home for Christmas and make your house proposal, then bush up, and eat your dinner. Your Pop is a pretty smart o l d g... tleman or he wouldn't have lived so long, or have so much. Ask him for some advice on your life, instead of giving him more on his, and it'll be a Merry Christmas for all.

Russians Plan Heavy Outlays For New Plants

Social Welfare, Research Items Also Increased

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet government today announced a vast new program of spending on scientific research, social welfare and expansion of the Soviet economy.

Finance Minister Arseny Zverev outlined the program to a joint session of the Supreme Soviet, the parliament of the Soviet Union, which opened its annual meeting to approve the government budget for the coming year.

The biggest jump came in the projected government investments to expand the Soviet production facilities — a huge increase of 71,000,000,000 rubles—or nearly $18,000,000,000— over the amount spent in 1958.

EXPANSION FUND

Zverev said the expansion fund would total 484,200,000,000 rubles ($121,075,000,000), including direct government investments of 306,800,000,000 rubles and 177,600,000,000 rubles of profits from government enterprises to be ploughed back.

Investments will be increased most in the chemical industry, in the iron and steel, chemical, oil and electrical industries, he said today ($7,575,000,000) for the expansion of agriculture.

Zverev said 27,300,000,000 rubles —$6,825,000,000 — would be appropriated for scientific research. He compared this to a previous appropriation of 23,900,000,000.

INCREASED BENEFITS

He said 222 billion rubles or $58,000,000,000 would be spent in 1959 on education health, social insurance and maternity benefits for public needs, an increase of nearly 20,000,000,000 rubles over the 1958 expenditures.

"As compared with 1958, the national income will increase by nearly per cent and will be 140 per cent greater than in 1950," Zverev said.

The finance minister called for increased labor productivity and lower production costs in industry, transport services and agriculture. The labor force is to increase by 1,500,000 workers, but the workers productivity are expected to produce still more than in past years at the campaign to overtake the American economy.

By contrast with the big rise in expenditures for education and social benefits, a slight decrease was proposed in the defence appropriation. This was put at

Goldfine Jailed For 3 Months For Contempt

BOSTON (AP) — Federal Judge Charles E. Wyzanski Jr. today sentenced New England industrialist Bernard Goldfine to three months in jail for contempt of court in failing to turn over company records in a tax case.

Miss Mildred Paperman, his secretary for many years, was given 10 days in jail. Sentences will start Jan. 7. Both were released in personal recognizance of $1,000.

Satellite Receives, Then Sends 'Excellent Teletypewriter Copy'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Scientists were ready today for more than two-way communication with U.S. Atlas missile-satellite, now in its second day of hurtling about the globe.

There were indications that defence department communications specialists might try new uses for the satellite soon.

Radio contacts — like those carried out successfully during the last few days — were possible when the nearly 4½-ton satellite reaches a favorable position in relation to four sending and receiving stations in the United States.

The weekend saw a number of voice and radio - teletypewriter messages transmitted in fast-travelling satellite and relayed back to posts in California, Georgia, Texas and Arizona.

Most of the words that flashed from earth were those of President Eisenhower in the message sent up with the Atlas in recorded form, then erased by remote control and sent again.

Barreling along at 17,000 miles an hour, the 85-foot Atlas is orbiting the earth in egg-shaped flight pattern. After it was launched from Cape Canaveral, Fla., Thursday night, scientists said the satellite had a life expectancy of about 20 days. Roughly 2½ weeks of that time still is left.

American scientists have conducted a number of communications tests they say could lead to such futuristic developments as space - relayed television broadcasts.

TWO CANADIANS BELIEVED HELD BY CUBAN REBELS

Kin Heard of Them Less Than Week Ago

NIAGARA-On-The-LAKE, Ont. (CP)—What happened to football player Don Paquette and machine gunner Eugene Clark after they phoned their families from Florida nearly a week ago?

A Wisconsin tourist told a reporter on the Key West, Fla., Citizen Saturday that he was grilled, beaten and jailed by Cuban government police at Havana. While he was there, he added, two Canadians he identified as Paquette, 20, and Clark, 22, also were being questioned.

The American, Eugene Erisman Jr., said he believed Clark and Paquette were still in custody when he was placed on a plane for New York Friday.

KNEW NOTHING OF TRIP

Meanwhile, Clark's mother said Saturday that her daughter's wife, 19-year - old Rebecca, said at their homes here the last word they received were phone calls from Cuba Wednesday in which made to his home last Tuesday from Fort Lauderdale, Fla. Paquette's mother said an impending trip to Cuba. They had gone to Florida to watch a game in the tail-end of the football season during which Paquette, a rookie defensive back, played his first games with Hamilton Tiger-Cats in the Big Four league.

The external affairs department at Ottawa said it had received no word of any Canadians being detained at Havana but on the basis of news reports quoting Erisman and Mrs. Paquette, it was making an inquiry.

CHRISTMAS PLANS

Clark and Paquette' said in telephone conversations that also wrote a letter then which his wife got Saturday — that they would be home for Christmas.

Mrs. Paquette said: "On the night before Tuesday he said he and Corky (Clark's nickname) would be home for Christmas. He didn't say anything about going to Cuba."

Mrs. Clark said she and her husband—he is a stationary engineer for the Beach Nico Hotel at Niagara-on-the - Lake—were "very concerned" over the trip. Clark is employed by McKinnon Industries Limited at St. Catharines as a welding operator.

He phoned us last Tuesday but all he said was that they had arrived there all right and that they would be home for Christmas. I don't know why he went to Cuba at all," Mrs. Paquette said. She says they decided on the spur of the moment to go see Cuba since they were so close.

The Paquettes have two children, Donna, 3, and Paquette, five weeks, and Laurie, 20 months. Clark is unmarried.

Expect Inco Workers Will Ratify Pact Made by Union

SUDBURY (CP)—The fate of a 12-week labor dispute at the International Nickel Company today lay in the secret ballot of nearly 15,000 striking Inco workers.

The employees, members of the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers (Ind.) voted at union halls here on acceptance of a three-year contract, terms of which were hammered out in the Parliament Buildings at Toronto Daley last week.

Agreement between Inco and the union on the terms was reached Friday. The balloting between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m.—will decide whether the terms are acceptable to the employees.

Results of the vote may be known by 7 p.m.

Details of the proposed agreement were outlined Sunday at seven meetings attended by 7,500 persons in the district. Another meeting was held in Port Colborne, where Inco employees are also on strike.

The three-year contract would begin Jan. 2, 1959 with a one-per-cent-an-hour general increase, a further two-per-cent increase beginning Jan. 2 of the following year and a final one-per-cent increase beginning Jan. 2, 1961.

The union said the settlement provides a "substantial" increase in the cost to the company spread over a period of three years." Of this six approximately three per cent would be in fringe benefits, much of this in a new life insurance and welfare coverage to 26 weeks at $40 a week from 12 weeks at $30 a week.

Another portion of fringe benefit increases would be accounted for by an automatic increase in company pension contributions when a wage increase is made. Present wages have a low of $1.89¼ an hour for mine surface employees with slightly higher rates for smelter and refinery labor. Others receive $2.20 an hour and first class tradesmen $2.50 an hour. Average wage is $2.20 an hour.

The company says present fringe benefits total an average of 19 cents an hour while holiday and vacation pay, mine production bonuses and shift differentials cost it an average of 30 cents an hour.

The 1959 wage increases would add from 1.8 cents an hour for laborers to 2.5 cents an hour for top tradesmen. The union said the 1961 wages would be $2.01½ an hour - for laborers, $2.26½ for tradesmen and $2.33½ for miners, with a top rate of $2.86½.

The union has been assured by the company that there will be a 40-hour week. How long this will ever, there has been no announcement by the company of when the old 44-hour week will be recalled. Workers had been on the 40-hour week since July.

Salary increases for the hourly-rated employees will be negotiated to proportionate increases for the non-union salaried employees. The last week throughout the 1958 strike, which was in its 87th day then. The terms were agreed upon Friday.

Increased Awareness by U.S. Of Canada's Problems Seen

WASHINGTON (CP) — The United States Congress today received from a special committee set up to study Canada-U.S. relations a report that showed an increased awareness" of Canada's problems has been and is developing in the United States.

Two congressmen, reporting on a 6,000-mile journey they undertaken this fall for the House of Representatives foreign affairs committee, said they found that relations have improved since they began their study a year ago.

Representatives Frank Coffin (Dem., Me.) and Brooks Hays (Dem. Ark.), members of the foreign affairs committee, cited some of the problems regarded as "acute" when they made a preliminary report on May 1. They seemed to have lessened in intensity. Others had become more prominent and new ones had developed since then.

In their report seven months ago, the two congressmen criticized the Canadian people for their "ingrnance" of Canada and things Canadian and accused the U.S. of an "unfortunate" lack of attitude towards Canada.

In today's 6,000-word report, they said each problem still existed in the "pervading

The context of an intense Canadian desire for constant recognition of its sovereign independence.

It might "generally be said that the present attitude of friendliness and helpfulness by the United States would and has been a source of greater irritation than the economic facts and policies themselves.

The report, as a congressional committee document, will be read by members of the U.S. Senate and the 436 members of the House.

It is a series of recommendations for remedial action by the U.S., the congressmen urged the 21st Congress to embark on a "thorough examination of the basis of all its oil import restrictions as soon as possible." They commented also that the defence department's practice of "buying Canadian manufacturers "greater access" to United States government contract, particularly in the light of Canada's decision to purchase the U.S.-developed Bomarc anti-aircraft missile.

The U.S., they said, also should re-examine the operation of its wheat flour subsidy program, about which Canada has lodged a voiced complaint. But they felt the U.S. farm surplus disposal program had "lost some of its significance in Canada eyes." es

First Attempt To Fire Titan Ends in Failure

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP)

The first attempt to fire a Titan, the newest U. S. war rocket, has failed. But today the launching crew prepared for another shot in the near future.

Titan spurted a flash of flame when the first-stage engine ignited Saturday, but the rocket itself is sputtered out when a malfunction occurred. The trouble apparently was caused by a fuel line hose that burst as the engine roared into action.

This was the first attempt to launch the Titan, a 90-foot two-stage intercontinental ballistic missile which is being developed by Glenn Martin Co. The bullet-shaped Titan stood still as clouds of black smoke swirled around the base of the launching pad.

The Titan is described as more sophisticated than the present Atlas ICBM which was buried into an orbit around the world last Thursday. That means it is somewhat lighter and more flexible than Atlas, but still capable of longer range.

It is reported the Titan could easily match the 8,000-mile distance over which the Russians claim to have fired an ICBM.

Fail to Receive Any Message From Balloon

LONDON (AP) — Radio amateurs in Britain, Europe and North Africa failed during the weekend to pick up any message from four Britons trying to sail across the Atlantic in a balloon.

Nothing has been heard from the balloon, The Small World, since Friday. And even then the balloon's skipper, Tim Severin, failed to give his position. Two days before, the balloon was on set off 10 days ago from the Canary Islands to drift with the trade winds 3,000 miles to Barbados, in the West Indies.

The last report received in the 45-foot silver Mylar black balloon was about seven days out of the Canaries. That was seven days ago, when a German freighter spotted the balloon. Since then it has not been seen.

DE GAULLE NAMED FIRST PRESIDENT OF NEW REPUBLIC

Overwhelming Victor Gets 7-Year Term

PARIS (AP) — Premier de Gaulle's bandwagon rolled on in triumph with his third personal voting victory Sunday. As expected, members of the electoral college overwhelmingly elected him the first president of the Fifth Republic.

The 68-year-old wartime hero, who stepped aside as premier in 1946 rather than play second fiddle to the National Assembly, now assumes the presidency for a seven-year term with greatly increased powers. He will take over the office from 76-year-old Rene Coty Jan. 8.

Shortly afterward, de Gaulle will nominate the new premier.

This is generally expected to be Senator Michel Debre, one of de Gaulle's staunchest supporters and one of the chief drafters of the new constitution.

THE LIGHT HAVOK HIM

In Sunday's presidential election de Gaulle got 78.5 per cent of the votes of the College of Electors, an electoral college representing 80,000 officials mainland and overseas territories.

De Gaulle did not vote or take part in the election. He announced he did not belong to any category of the electors, made up of mayors, municipal and county councillors, parliament members and municipal council members.

Of 79,468 valid ballots, complete returns gave de Gaulle 62,394.

Communist Georges Marrange, 70, mayor of the Paris suburb of Ivry, received 10,354 votes. Albert Chatelet, 75, a University of Lille dean and mayor of the pro-Communist opposition to de Gaulle, got 6,722.

Little windswept St. Pierre-Miquelon islands off Canada, Reynaud's only North American territory, gave de Gaulle 21 votes, Marrange 1. In the centralist's big victory, de Gaulle went ahead with his program to pacify the war-torn Algerian territory and curb French practices which have been criticized at home and abroad.

He wrote the new civilian head of the government in the North African territory, economist Paul Delouvrier, to "exercise" police measures. The French army and the police in Algeria have been accused of abusing and torturing Moslem rebels and their sympathizers.

The general also urged closer ties with Black Africa, which will make up 90 per cent of Algeria's population. The Moslems will give the same rights as the dominating group of French settlers.

"That's about 20 years ago," she said, standing in the spotless kitchen of the large frame Tremblay farmhouse.

"New Year's Day was the big event then. Now winter season festivities are focused on Christmas."

Years ago, here, as in other Quebec villages, Christmas Day was predominantly religious, the feast highlighted by midnight mass and a heavy night meal of pork dishes, and Mrs. Tremblay, 59-year-old mother of 10.

This meal period is called the reveillon. But pork is being replaced by turkey in the Tremblay home. Ham, another favorite, is introduced, some taken from New Year's Day which has become more solemn and is a day time affair.

In contrast, Christmas is becoming a gayer, night-time do, especially through the reveillon, which means midnight supper.

After midnight mass half of the 21-pound turkey will be dis-

Toronto Couple Who Got Twins Back Separated

TORONTO (CP) — Trudy and Herman Mast, a Toronto couple who won through court action custody of the twin children they had given away for adoption, have separated, it was learned today.

A relative of 25-year-old Trudy Mast said the couple, natives of The Netherlands, obtained a legal separation in November, with the mother having custody of the children and the father ordered to pay $25 a week towards their support.

Herman Mast, 27-year-old truck driver, declined to discuss the separation.

The four-year-old twins, Rolland and Richard, now are reported to be with their mother at the New Jersey home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. B. Knoop. The Masts' younger child, Margaret, 3, also is there.

Rolland and Richard were surrendered for adoption at birth by their parents. Custody of the children was given to Mr. and Mrs. Austin Hepton of Stouffville.

Later the natural parents sought in regain custody of the twins. The case was heard in the Ontario Supreme Court, the Ontario Court of Appeal and the Supreme Court of Canada. It ended in June, 1957, with a decision to return Rolland and Richard to the Masts. The twins had lived the first three years with their adoptive parents.

Mr. and Mrs. Hepton since have adopted a baby girl through the Children's Aid Society.

Airlines' Strike Floods Railway And Bus Depots

NEW YORK (AP) — A thick fog of labor troubles hung over the skies today as the airline strikes kept the giant fleets of American Airlines and Eastern Air Lines on the ground during the peak season of air travel.

Tens of thousands of passengers continued to scramble for alternate accommodation as Christmas approached.

Railways and buses, already loaded with holiday travellers, reported a land-office business. Long waiting lists formed at other airlines.

Piles of Christmas mail were being shipped to other carriers.

A pilots' walkout at midnight Friday grounded the Eastern fleet and has been idled since Nov. 1 by a strike of mechanics and flight engineers.

A breakthrough in deadlocked contract negotiations does not appear likely soon.

'TWAS THREE DAYS BEFORE CHRISTMAS . . .

When all over town
People hurried and scurried
Some wearing a frown.

Soon the stockings would hang
By the chimney with care
But what to put in them?
We feel such despair.

The children were nestled
All snug in their beds,
What to buy? Where to shop?
Buzzes through our poor heads.

Mum with her list
And Dad just confused,
Had just settled down
Not too enthused.

When out of his chair,
Dad rose with a clatter.
Mother, surprised, said,
"What is the matter?"

The light from the lamp
Lit the floor up below,
Where Dad dropped the "Intell"
His face all aglow.

Then to my wondering eyes did appear
An ad in the paper that made it all clear.
As rash as eagles our ideas all came.
We whistled and shouted as we checked off each name.

"WATCHES AND DIAMONDS—
EARRINGS AND BEADS—
CHINA AND SILVER—
ALL JEWELLERY NEEDS."

pecially since Canada this year produced a short wheat crop and had been able to sell some of its own surpluses.

Dealing with Canadian irritations arising from the operation of U.S. subsidies in Canada, Diefenbaker urged American agreement to take the Canadian public into consideration in making decisions affecting Canadian plants.

"This Canadian public is not one single individual fragments, such as investors, commodity traders, employees, shareholders and members, or consumers. But all share the same basic goal. All have a very real or fancied right to their instinct for sovereignty."

ADYME UNION LEADERS

They offered the same advice to American union leaders, reporting that in Canada they had repeatedly buried the allegation that some Canadian labor unions were dominated by international unions based in the United States.

It was, of course, up to the Canadians to control their own labor unions but "the frequency of this criticism does indicate that the international unions in the United States would be well advised to re-examine their relationships with their locals in Canada."

The congressmen conceded that the trade lead and the balance had been harmed by recent increases in U.S. tariffs but suggested a return to stability for such commodities existed in the general negotiations, preferably through NATO, rather than in any bilateral arrangement between Canada and the United States.

CLOSE TIES POSSIBLE

"We may well be," they said, "that we have reached a stage where the closest relations between the two North American neighbors can be achieved without linking even among allies and traditional friends . . ."

Interdependences will continue to exist. But the realization that full sovereignty is the final goal depends largely on the ability of the western hemisphere to provide a large economic and military base on which to build emphatically the need for the closest kind of co-operation, especially between the United States and Canada.

Hays and Coffin added: "Common trust, forbearance, and frank and open exchanges of opinions are not the only foundation on which a fruitful relationship can be built. Beyond this, forbearance and frankness can be formulated to deal with specific problems and to develop new solutions wherever necessary."

RECOMMENDATIONS

Among recommendations made by Hays and Coffin were these:

Representatives of the Canadian Parliament and the U.S. Congress should meet with each other from time to time to facilitate better understanding of mutual problems.

Increased attention should be given to the task of reducing "the hurdles involving a businessman who seeks to export an item to either country" and that similar steps be made with the objective of exploring the feasibility of reducing or abolishing tariffs on an item-by-item basis.

In the matter of agricultural surplus disposal there should be "vigorous com-liance with the International Wheat Agreement" and more-high-level consultations between industry representatives and agricultural officials of the two countries.

There should be "more forbearance on the part of Canadian interests" in the dispute over fisheries waters.

Bars and Sledges Found at Scene Taken From CNR

Would-be safe-crackers made an unsuccessful attempt to open the safe at the big Loblaw Groceries store on the eastern limits of Trenton during the week end, it was reported today by provincial police.

Police said that a sledge or hammer had been used in an attempt to knock the combination from the safe, but entry was not effected and the safe door was undamaged.

Bars and sledge found on the scene were said to have been taken from a CNR toolshed at Trenton.

Police were of the opinion that the Loblaw break-in may have been the work of juveniles who were possibly scared away. Provincial police Cpl. Gordon Stout and Constable Don Byers investigated.

Albert Bennett Instantly Killed On CNR Tracks

Struck by an incoming eastbound Canadian National Railways passenger train after he apparently slipped on the tracks while crossing the Moira River railway bridge in the north end of Belleville, Albert Bennett, 54, resident of the Hastings County home, was instantly killed Saturday afternoon.

The elderly man who had lived in the county home for the past four years, was apparently on his way to visit friends in the Millcreek district, when the accident occurred.

Mr. McCarlo, Bleecker Ave., saw the man either sitting or lying on the track on the railway bridge minutes before the arrival of No. 14 train. He tried unsuccessfully to pull the man's body to safety from the rails but was forced to jump clear as the train bore down upon him.

The county home official said Mr. Bennett was in the habit of walking into the city each Saturday.

Investigation into the fatality was in charge of Police Inspector J. Clair Hayes, assisted by Detective Harold Reid, Constable Wetzel and railway police. Coroner Dr. J. Russell Scott said there would be no inquest.

Mr. Bennett was a native of the city and was the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. William Bennett. During his active years he had been a farmer in the Belleville area. He was the last of his family.

globe — spanning military communications.

The weekend tests involved: 1. Relaying Eisenhower's voice-recorded message; 2. Relaying in coded form that message and another by radio-teletypewriter; 3. Leaving the messages in the satellite's tape recorder for a while before triggering their transmission to ground stations.

A station at Fort Stewart, Ga. sent out seven teletypewriter messages simultaneously to the Atlas. Then, on radio command, all seven were returned from the satellite simultaneously.

Saying Fort Stewart received "excellent teletypewriter copy" as long as the Atlas was in range, the defence department added:

"This is the first successful multichannel teletype transmissions by the delayed repeated technique on a ground-satellite-ground relay system."

The seven-message test also was run, with variations, by two other ground stations.

This change in the children's belief is due to television and newspaper articles which show Santa Claus everywhere, says 74-year-old Stanislas Bloch, grandfather of 19 children. "The child holds the image more readily than words," he says.

28 Below Zero At Bancroft

PETERBOROUGH (CP) — The Kawartha district thawed out today after another night of temperatures well below zero.

Lowest reported reading was at the village of Rosedale, 25 miles northwest of here, with 40 degrees below zero. Cordova Mines, 33 miles northeast, had 38 below. Bancroft 28 below, Madoc 26 below and Peterborough 22 below.

Toys galore, piled to the ceiling, occupied most of the space in the upper hall of No. 2 Fire Hall over this weekend. Over four thousand toys are there for distribution by the firemen during the next few days when they carry out their annual task as Santa's helpers. In the centre of this mass can be seen Eric Cooper, who heads the used toy restoration workshop sponsored by the Kiwanis. In the foreground Fire Chief Gerald Vance seems to be looking for his men who might have been lost amongst the toys.

The shining faces in the group above include most of the thirty-five crippled children who were present at the annual Christmas party held for them by Belleville and Trenton Shriners. The party was a great success for all concerned. The handsome gentlemen across the back of the group are the Shriners.

To Increase Tolls On N.Y. Thruway On January 1

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — The New York State Thruway Authority announced today that tolls on the superhighway's main route will be increased by three- tenths of a cent a mile, effective Jan. 1.

The increase in the basic toll rate will raise the charge for passenger vehicles from 1.25 cents to 1.56 cents a mile. This applies to the 473 miles of the thruway's main line, running from Spring Valley in Rockland County to the Pennsylvania state line near Bluley. For the 472 miles, the charge would be $7.34.

The increase applies to small commercial vehicles, such as panel trucks, as well as passenger cars. The toll rates for heavy trucks, now ranging up to five cents a mile, will remain the same.

The authority said the boosts were "inescapable" because of rising costs of operation and maintenance.

Sixty years of happy married life was celebrated quietly Sunday by Mr. and Mrs. Peter McLaren of Tyendinaga township, who were at home to their immediate family on their diamond anniversary.

Find Bodies Of Two Children After Blaze

MONTREAL (CP) — The bodies of two children were found today in the ruins of an east-end tenement duplex, demolished by an explosion and fire.

The bodies were not immediately identified.

It was not known at the time of writing there had been other fatalities. Firemen said they feared "two or three persons" had been trapped in the brick and wood building.

At least four persons were taken to hospital suffering from burns. One woman was reported in serious condition.

No authoritative cause for the explosion had been given. It was reported to have occurred in one of the apartments.

Many persons lived in the building on Gatien Street, but the exact number was not immediately known. Some of the families are new Canadians.

The blast pulled out the sides of the building and flames appeared to shoot upward. One automobile, parked nearby, was almost buried by debris.

Firemen from six stations sped to the area along with two police rescue squads. Ambulances were also sent.

Two elderly sisters, Mrs. Rose Charron and Mrs. Amy Dugas, were rescued by an unidentified man.

"I was making the bed," said Mrs. Charron, "and my sister was in the kitchen preparing lunch when there was a terrible roar and the wall and the ceiling fell on me and the bed.

"I screamed and I could hear my sister screaming in the kitchen.

"I couldn't see. There was dust and smoke everywhere. I didn't know what to do. I called to my sister but she only screamed."

Two Men Saved After Tractor Drops 55 Feet

MCMURDO SOUND, Antarctica (AP) — Seventeen days out of Little America, the party was rattling right along at a speed of 470-mile trail over the Ross ice shelf to McMurdo Sound.

But the surly Antarctic suddenly dropped open a trap door. And two men in a tractor vanished.

The surface of the snow was almost perfectly flat," recalled marine Cpl. Ateneo R. Jamin. "There was no sign of danger."

Norval and navy construction driver Lawrence Hayes were leading along in a 36-ton tractor at the head of their party, towing two sleds of supplies. A minute later they were 55 feet down, caught in a crevasse.

REMAINED IN TRACTOR

"I just thought I was going to die," said Norval, an engineering expert from Buffalo, Wyo.

"I felt two or three distinct jolts, maybe from where the tractor hit the walls of the crevasse.

"When we finally stopped, the tractor was lying over a bit on its side. We were still inside. Renwick was right behind me. I could see he was in a state of shock but he sure had enough sense to shut off the engine.

"Somebody yelled down 'are you all right?' And we yelled back 'Yes, we're all right — don't worry about us.' Or something like that.

"We were down between 10 and 20 minutes. They really got their rescue operation going well. They dropped down a steel wire ladder and we both climbed out by ourselves.

"It's a miracle we made it out."

Accident Claims Third Life

SUNDRIDGE, Ont. (CP)—A 15-month-old girl died in hospital Sunday from injuries suffered Friday in a two-car collision which killed her mother and injured her father and sister.

Faye Windsor of North Bay, a first-year student at Algonquin Composite School, died in Burk's Falls hospital, where Mrs. Frank Windsor, 38, had died shortly after the accident on Highway 11.

Mr. Windsor, suffering from multiple fractures, was still in serious condition today, and the fourth member of the family, Lynne, 6, was in fair condition. Both are in Civic Hospital, North Bay.

Warship's Crew Adopts Child On Greek Island

OTTAWA (CP)—Ioanna Pagiati, 13, who lives on the Greek island of Corfu, has 250 Canadian foster parents.

They are the crew of the RCN destroyer Ottawa.

They adopted the girl, whose father is dead, under the foster parents plan set in March on the suggestion of Lieut. John M. (Mac) Reid of North Bay, ordnance officer, and CPO Clifford Giles of Halifax, the Ottawa's coxswain.

The Ottawa recently was on exercises in the Mediterranean and Lieut. Reid and CPO Giles obtained permission to go on Greek Tracker anti-submarine plane from the Canadian aircraft Bonaventure to Corfu.

But they were so late with gifts for the girl from the Ottawa's crew they had to take two planes.

Ioanna, with a bouquet of flowers, was at the Corfu airport to meet the two Canadian sailors. They gave her a sum of money, two huge parcels of gifts—and a framed picture of her 250 fathers in the Ottawa.

Plum Coulee District May Become Vegetable-Producing Centre for Prairie Provinces

PLUM COULEE, Man. (CP)—Norman Janzen is a farmer willing to take a chance. This year it paid off.

The 39 - year - old farmer, who came here in 1936 after an unsuccessful battle against Saskatchewan dust and grasshoppers, grew 126 acres of special crops.

Most of the crops were new produce which Manitoba government officials hope will provide the diversification the province's agriculture needs. Plum Coulee is one of the chief communities in a southern Manitoba pocket of land which within 10 years may become a major vegetable-producing centre for the Prairie Provinces and part of the western United States.

REACHES U.S. BORDER

The 600 - square - mile area known as the Pembina pocket sits like an inverted U on the United States border, with the arms about 50 miles apart. Other towns in the region are Morden, Winkler, Rosenfeld, Altona, Hasketi and Gretna.

Mr. Janzen, one of the pioneers in the trend to crop diversification, started growing tobacco in latest nine years ago with a crop of sugar beets. In 1958 he had 16 different crops on his 126 acres. His only grain crop was 20 acres of oats, which he combined and for cattle feed.

Land in the area is lighter and more sandy than that of the surrounding country and this condition makes it ideal for special crops. The temperature is the warmest also at Winnipeg, 90 miles north, and work can be started earlier in the spring.

Since 1956 the area's crop production on a large scale two years ago, Mr. Janzen has found that his income runs two to three times what he received for grain. He employs from 16 to 50 workers from spring until fall and all his produce has been marketed in Canada and the United States.

Yields were exceptional this year. For instance, 17 tons of carrots worth $20 a ton were harvested from a 15-acre plot.

The area received good rains at the most crucial stage of vegetable growth in 1958. Mr. Janzen was picking ripe tomatoes by July 8 and total production rose to nine tons of which half went to the United States.

This year's crops on the Janzen farm also included sugar beets, sweet corn, cauliflower, cucumbers, beans, peas, asparagus, and raspberries. Next year experiments will be made with onions and possibly potatoes, turnips, lettuce and cabbage.

Peter Krocker of the Winkler district planted 30 acres of onions last year and they yielded 12 tons an acre. Since onions are a major Canadian import from the United States, his first - grade crop brought $2 for a 50-pound bag in wholesale markets. He has had high production costs including construction of a $20,000 drying shed.

GROWING INDUSTRY

Provincial agricultural officials foresee development of processing, wholesale and retail establishments, frozen food plants and packaging firms.

In the meantime, costs are high, labor is needed and there is a lack of storage and canning facilities.

In developing diversified farming, the special crops branch of the provincial agriculture department now numbers 13, about double what it was in 1957, and more trained agriculturists are being sought.

Branch officials attend meetings in rural areas to explain the advantages of switching to special crops. They also provide research data on production and markets and at times have supplied seed.

Pretty Research Workers Complete Trip to Arctic

MONTREAL (CP)—Two pretty research workers from McGill University have returned from a project in the Canadian Arctic, probably the first such all-women adventure ever undertaken.

Geomorphologists Joan Kroger and English - born Pamela Russell spent eight weeks, travelling 280 miles and breaking camp 33 times, in checking land levels in the north shore of Nettilling Lake.

Their project was sponsored by the Arctic Institute of North America, and they had leave from classes at the girls' college in McGill for the trip, aided by a grant from the institute.

"Our aim was 'If men can do it, women can, too,'" said the girls in an interview on their return.

VETERANS WORRIED

But sourdoughs in Yellowknife, Northwest Territories, didn't think so, said the girls. Some actually went to the police to try to stop the girls from carrying out their mission.

Mr. Belcher, a former RCMP inspector and now executive director of the Arctic Institute, the person most responsible for the fact that an institute grant was given to two girls and that they were allowed to go.

"Mr. Belcher's name acted as a talisman to the police at Yellowknife where it is identified with the successful Arctic life in the North," said Pamela.

Before they left, the girls boned up on life in the Arctic by reading and interviewing persons who had lived there.

They travelled either by kayak or on land, towing their loads of supplies and scientific equipment, sometimes keeping going from 9 a.m. until mid-night.

MOSQUITOES BAD

Mosquitoes were the worst nuisance. "They climb all over you," said Anneston of. "They get into your food and come into the tent at night with you."

Occasionally, according to plan, they left ground signals for the RCMP planes so the policemen would know they were not in trouble.

When they returned to Edmonton they were told by Mr. Belcher that he now could "breathe a sigh of relief" and could also be told them that he knew they could manage, but that many persons had expressed grave doubts.

Mexican Beauty May Be Wed To Aga Khan

GSTAAD, Switzerland (AP)—The Aga Khan arrived in this Alpine resort Sunday night and rumors that he might announce his engagement soon to 18-year-old Mexican beauty Rita Casablanca.

The 22-year-old leader of the Ismaili Moslem sect, his younger brother Amyn and their mother, Princess Aga Aly Khan moved into a suite in Gstaad's exclusive Palace Hotel. Rita, a student at Harvard University, is here for the Christmas holidays.

Sylvia was absent at the hotel today with her parents. She returned to her home in Geneva last week from the finishing school she attended in England with her father, Mexican financier Fernando Casablancas, has lived in Geneva for many years.

Wife of Toronto Man Jailed as Demonstrator

TORONTO (CP)—Mrs. Mildred Slater, wife of David Slater, 26, was jailed for a day on a charge of obstructing police following a demonstration in front of a Canadian missile site at Swaffham, Norfolk, the Toronto Star says in a London dispatch.

The 24-year-old Mrs. Slater, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. Stein of Brandon, Man., appeared before a magistrate Saturday night and was remanded in custody until Dec. 22, the story says.

Mrs. Slater was one of the demonstrators who marched under the leadership of Rev. Michael Scott, South African champion of racial equality. The route followed by the direct action committee against nuclear war in protest against the installation of a Thor missile site at the RAF base at Swaffham.

David, a mathematician studying at the University of London, was jailed on saying: "We are not pacifists. We are fighting a war against nuclear arms. Some people might say that I should be in jail and Mildred should be at home. But we talked it over and since I must work to support us we decided that she should risk arrest. I'm looking after the children with the help of friends."

THE CARDS ARE ON THE TABLE

Frederick Hazlitt Brennan, a TV story editor and script writer, has gone on record with a defence of the television industry in the U.S.

His position is simple. TV, he says, is a medium of mass entertainment and public information. It is not a medium for the presentation of opinion. Government and the courts have decided that TV wave lengths belong to all the people. Therefore these wave lengths should be used to bring the public what it wants. .

It is a good defence, so far as it goes. It is a defence which has been applied to more than television. Yet we consider it a defective defence, because it makes an increasingly common error, that of believing there is some strange magic in all percentages over 50 which makes anything approved by a majority of people right and anything of which they disapprove wrong.

Reducing his argument to absurdity, we could say that if 51 per cent of the people wanted to see westerns and 49 per cent of the people wanted to see quiz shows, then, since the TV wave lengths belonged to the people and the majority preferred westerns, TV stations had an obligation to show nothing but westerns.

The number of people who should enjoy what Mr. Brennan terms "coaxial criticism, satire, worthwhile drama" or other intellectual tendencies" may be small, but those people own a share of the TV wave lengths and are entitled to consideration in their use. As a minority, they cannot expect that the TV stations will devote as much time to the programs they enjoy as to westerns and quiz shows, but they have a right to expect that some time will be utilized for their benefit, and that this time should be during the "good viewing" hours.

The difficulty is, of course, that no sponsor is interested in a small audience when he can get a large one.

The remedy may be simple. The British, after years in which the government-owned BBC had a monopoly, now have commercial television, but the programs are not "sponsored" as they are here. Instead, firms purchase-advertising time and commercials are shown at half-hour intervals, several different products being advertised together. The advertiser has no control over the program, as we understand-the system. If the network decides to run a "worthwhile drama" at a peak viewing time, then the advertiser can decide whether he is likely to get the most for his money by advertising in the middle of a "smob show" at a peak viewing hour or in a western at a time when fewer people would normally be watching.

With three big U.S. networks, it would be possible to arrange such variety in the programs. As we all know, though, variety is often lacking. A clicking dial, on occasion, brings only a succession of westerns. NBC and CBC appear to have been at pains to spot similar shows, like those of Ed Sullivan and Steve Allen, opposite each other. Singers oppose singers. The network philosophy appears to be that, if one does not like westerns or singers or quiz shows, the viewer will have to grin and bear it for a half an hour because that is all that will be offered until a switch is made to a different type of program.

TALKING TOO BIG

"U.S. rocket men have hurled a four-ton satellite into orbit around the earth in another stride toward outer space and man's mastery there." - - The Associated Press.

"Another stride toward outer space" - - yes.

But "man's mastery there" - - well hardly.

There have been so many "miracles" in recent decades, so many have accomplished the impossible with such frequency, that one might hesitate to say that man will never master space. But we think it is reasonable to assume that, if this mastery is attained, it will not be through the use of a rocket, no matter how big it is or how powerful the fuel. Even presuming that man learned how to race through space at the speed of light, and to feed himself and his descendants during these trips, there would still be much of space which would remain unattainable, so many million light years away that, if started out as man ever reached them, it might be as a new and different species.

BECAUSE IT'S CHRISTMAS

By EDGAR A. GUEST

Just because it's Christmas
I go smiling on my way.
And because it's Christmas
I am humble and gay.
I'm full of human kindness
And as thoughtful as can be;
I develop total blindness
To the faults I used to see.

Now my burdens are no lighter
When I come to Christmas Day;
And my troubles are no fewer,
And no smoother is my way
Than they were in bleak November.
Yet, I seem to think them so;
And just because it's Christmas
I am smiling as I go.

Why must I go replying
And whimpering along,
And blind to all men's goodness,
Seeing only what is wrong,
Till the year is slipping from me,
And then suddenly declare
When it gets around to Christmas
That there's goodness everywhere?

Those Crow's Nest Rates

Cornwall Standard - Freeholder

As a loyal supporter of the Western farmer, the Winnipeg Free Press takes umbrage at a recent statement by Mr. R. A. Jamieson, vice-president of the CPR, that the Crow's Nest rates are an example of "subsidization" by which the Canadian railways are hamstrung in their operations.

For the benefit of those who came in late, the Crow's Nest Pass agreement was executed between the government of Canada and the CPR on September 6, 1897. They affect the grain, flour and similar rates on all points of the railway west of Fort William running to the Lakehead. They require that the CPR move grain and flour between these points at a price three cents per 100 pounds less than the rates charged by the CPR in 1897. For example, between Regina and Fort William the rate in 1897 was 29 cents per 100 pounds. It is now 30 cents.

The CPR entered into the agreement reluctantly, requiring, as it did, quite a considerable cajolery to get a government subsidy for the construction of a line from Lethbridge, Alberta, through the Crow's Nest Pass to Nelson, British Columbia.

The actual subsidy paid by the government in the form of land and cash was at $11,000 per mile or a total cash subsidy of $3,-150,000.

The Free Press argues that the rates which the CPR lay not in the cash subsidy, but in a grant of 350,000 acres of land. "From that land," it says, "has come much of the railway company's wealth, including the vast coal mining and metal business of the Consolidated Mining and Smelting Company, known as Cominco." Press. It argues that the CPR has made a deal and ought to stick to it.

This strikes us as a piece of beautiful over-simplification. It completely overlooks the vast changes in railway operating costs in the past. Furthermore, it is worth noting there exis's a good precedent for breaking the Crow's Nest agreement. In 1918, when the McAdoo award increased the railway employees' wage costs to the railways, all freight rates, including those ad-

Ultra-Sensitive Times

Sault Ste. Marie Star

The childhood rhyme: "Sticks and stones may break my bones, but names will never hurt me," is often given the lie by adult conduct.

Undertakers, ratcatchers and others who collect more delicate-sounding names for themselves, prove only too well that names do hurt.

According to Business Week, "sanitary engineer" has dropped the term "atocals" because it suggests old age, and "sales engineer" has "wide range" glasses. It seems that there are now in the nasil of welcoming any chance to avoid facing facts.

Commenting on the Stratford Herald says:

"Some old people — or senior citizens, if you prefer that term — may inquire why the fact of old age should need concealment. But a state that comes to all, if they live long enough, is there is nothing to be done about it. If its coming has brought wisdom as well as fadlessness, perhaps we even have some reason for pride in it. Fortunately enough to be free of some of the disabilities usually associated with advancing age, credit is probably due to one's ancestors rather than to one's self.

"Other modern euphemisms will readily occur to anyone who thinks about it. Even the unpleasant may be dodged. On the authority of several poets and thinkers, it is no disgrace to be poor, although it is usually inconvenient. Yet one must not now refer to the poor. They are underprivileged. Criminals are no longer evil. They are simply maladjusted. Charity has developed into social service and lost some of its nature by its change.

"Anyone who avoids the loss entailed in giving pretty names to things thereby gains something the new words for the old is in some cases fantastic. Imagine Winston Churchill, in one of his wartime speeches, entertaining Hitler on the 'unadjusted man.' Or rewrite the Sermon on the Mount, substituting always ye have with you' and 'Now abideth faith, hope, and these three maladjustments, the greatest of these is social service'."

It has always seemed to us that dodging unpleasant facts by giving them names which disguise them is a form of exhibition of weakness. If a man commits a crime, he is a ratcatcher, and a very necessary member of the community. He is also a man who has more than intelligence, since it takes both brains and courage to overcure to outsmart and tackle rats. By calling himself a rodent exterminator he does not change what he deceives no one, not even himself, and he becomes by so doing.

But in face facts and the future of old age and death as being an important part of life and not to try to hide their shapness by talk of maturity and passing in time. When we reached it know there are compensations that go with age, and everyone, sooner or later, must be the greatest adventure of all.

The waiting room at the Belleville General Hospital has been completely furnished for the convenience of persons visiting patients and the smart appointments were made necessary in the West, then for goodness sake let it handle the matter as a straightforward subsidy charged against the people of Canada. At the present time the railways and their employees are directly subsidizing the wheat farmers of Western Canada.

To Your Good Health

By Joseph G. Molner, M.D.

THERE'S SUCH A THING AS DRINKING TOO MUCH WATER

"Dear Dr. Molner: I would appreciate your answers on some questions about the consumption of water or liquids.

"No. 1 — Is it possible to drink too much liquid, and if so, how much would be too much?

"No 2 — If drinking too much liquid, or any large amount, is detrimental, what are the dangers, if any?

"No. 3 — Is water fattening?

"No. 4 — Would it be safe to drink just as much liquid as one might feel like drinking in hot weather? — Thirsty."

I'll answer your questions if you promise not to jump to any conclusions until you have read my four answers to your four questions.

So here are the four answers:

1 — Yes. There is a condition known as "water intoxication". It occurs when excessive amounts of water — and I mean very large amounts — are consumed, particularly when there is some disturbance in kidney function, that is, the kidneys, being impaired, are unable to remove the water properly and rapidly enough. It cannot recall ever seeing or hearing of a case of this except where known kidney disease existed.

2 — The dangers are retention of water in the tissues; swelling, sometimes so much from it, and a condition known as "wet brain", leading to coma and death.

3 — Water fattening? No. However, if consumed in large quantities it does overload the heart or kidneys, and excess salt is being consumed, the salt results in the water being held in the body tissues. Water is fairly fattening, but when obtained water adds to your weight it's the fat. As a matter of principle, usually, certain drugs to help rid the system of the excess water, gets rid of the salt and also the excess weight. But you haven't "reduced." You've just dried out.

THIRST A NORMAL REACTION

4 — Is it safe to drink as much water as you want in hot weather? Yes! Thirst is a normal reaction of the body, necessary to our survival and health, in hot weather we lose a lot of moisture by perspiration. This is replaced by yielding to the thirst demands. When thirst has been satisfied, the desire to drink ceases.

So, getting back to Question No. 1 again, when you've had enough you will feel full. Just how much is "too much" cannot be defined, but in any case — whether your kidneys are good or bad — you'll know when you have drunk enough.

"Dear Dr. Molner: Why does a young girl, 26, always crave pretzels? She eats a couple of them without eating a box of them. Mrs. D."

Lets be frank about it. At 26 she isn't a "young girl". She's a woman. As a long-distance guess, I'd say she's bored, frustrated, and perhaps eats to satisfy some other craving. This is a common case of eating too much. I'm generally accepted. I'd guess she ought to get a job, or get married and keep house, or find something that really absorbs her interest and energy. The habitual eating if important, not the pretzels. If it weren't pretzels it would be candy, potato chips, peanuts or something else.

"Dear Dr. Molner: Is it wise or safe to have a face-lift at the age of 50 or more? I feel like 30 and look like 50. Surely it isn't fair, — O. A."

The remainder of your letter, the parts I didn't print, make me think you are unduly sensitive. Such as your phrase about "young people start pointing a finger at your age, and you feel like 100." Ignore your point and ignore you at the same time! A face-lift at 50 or more? Quite unnecessary in the face, but not in the body. Fat and sag in the body, sag in the behind. At 50, it's just as well to look 50. I'm past 50, but don't look more than 50. I could be 50 and look 50 than to be 50 and look 30 with a padded behind your back, whisper, "Who does she think she's fooling?" Afflicted with arthritis? You may find relief if you follow the suggestions in my pamphlet, "Don't Quit Because of Arthritis" write to me for it in care of Dr. Clarage San Francisco Chronicle, P.O. Box 158, Dundee Illinois, enclosing a large, self-addressed, stamped envelop and 5c in coin to cover handling.

Snow Shovel Woman's Tool

St. Thomas Times-Journal

When there has been a bit of snow, Mrs. Beulah Hall Hoyes suggests to her husband that he shovel "extra" from a wide path, he has a good excuse for saying she "should do it herself. After he uses the shovel as if he was just plumb lazy (which he probably is) and that he could quote Dr. Lea Steeves of Halifax who told a gathering of more water ceases, and Canada's arteries begin to harden 25 years earlier than a woman's. Accordingly such a strenuous chore as cleaning snow off the path is a definite "no, no" for her.

It is said that man is as old as his arteries. So that the arteries of a woman of 60 correspond to the arteries of a man of 85.

Maybe; if she knows he plays golf, or tennis, or tramps miles through the bush on a hunting expedition, his telling her so do it herself won't come off. But it's worth trying.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

The smaller the company, business or corporation, the harder it is to speak to the president or even to the general manager. He is walled up behind a sort of office fort, with a battery of a chape of switchboard girls, secretaries and assistants to protect the president. Not assistant-presidents, but assistants to the president.

But when it comes to great big million dollar corporations, it is no trick at all to get through to the president.

For example, from one of the great mercantile establishments that span the nation from coast to coast, I ordered a case of delicious canned pork and beans. I sent me the wrong stuff, a cheaper brand that our dog won't even look at. So I wrote them at. So I had them pick it up. And I wrote them right back another case of the same thing, charging me for the shipping this time. I had dealt with everybody all the way up from the clerk who took my order right to the head lady who is in charge of the president.

So I called the president. Yes, sir, I'm speaking to him. I told him. His secretary put me right through to him the minute I stated it was a matter of business.

The president was most agreeable. He clicked sympathetically throughout my tale, and declared he would attend to the matter immediately. And he did. The dog food arrived correct. I n next day. So, out of sheer astonishment, I went down town to call a personal visit to the president, to thank him and to have a look at him.

He was a dandy little baldheaded man who looked exactly like Santa Claus without his whiskers.

He was the president-in-charge-of-meeting-customers.

A special appointment, and a most useful one.

Shriners Hold Annual Party For Children

Saturday afternoon was a big event in the everyday life of many-five crippled kiddies from Belleville and Trenton. The main floor meeting room of the Belleville Shrine Club was a scene of eager anticipation and quiet excitement as the children, scrubbed, shined and spruced up as best the kids can be, sat around on their chairs or on the knee of one of the Shriners who were putting on the annual Christmas party. In the course of the afternoon's program Canon A. S. McConnell read a Christmas story which was received by a very attentive audience. Also carol singing and the showing of cn a few cartoon movies and films were also well received. Undoubtedly the major highlight of the occasion, next to Santa Claus, was the live entertainment provided by several performers of this community. Tap dancing routines were performed by Cheryl Ruby and Linda Johnson, both of whom were decked out in very attractive costumes. Shirley Canning also performed with several vocal numbers as well as a dance routine. She was assisted in one of these numbers, much to the delight and enjoyment of those present, by her four-year-old nephew Brian Douglas. This was the 12th year in which the Shriners have put on a Christmas party with all the trimmings for the crippled children in this area, and, as usual, their annual guest of honor — Santa Claus, Kris Kringle, or St. Nicholas was there to give out the presents to a group of most deserving and well behaved children. The performers donated their talents to this worthy project and the Coca Cola people supplied the films and some of the refreshments.

Mayor Urges Citizens to Place Safety Before Fun at Christmas

The forthcoming holiday season can be called happy, only if every member o f the community manages to survive it, declared Mayor Gerald B. Hyde, this today.

This sober warning was part of the Mayor's statement urging fellow citizens to place safety before fun at Christmas and New Year's. "With so many people shopping and driving to get from Christmas parties, the traffic accident threat jumps sharply during the holiday season," the Mayor added.

"The only solution in this tragic situation is for everyone to drive or walk carefully, prepared at all times to handle any emergency," Mayor Hyde went on.

Next to speeding and drinking, he pointed out, the prime cause of traffic accidents at Christmas and New Year's is fatigue. Each year, hundreds of motorists and pedestrians are killed at this time of year through lack of alertness. So many of these fatalities could be avoided if the drivers or pedestrians would just take the simple, sensible precaution of drinking a cup of strong coffee before driving or walking home from work or a late party," he said.

Mayor Hyde urges people who enjoy stronger beverages than coffee at holiday receptions to travel home by taxi or bus this Christmas. He advises them not even to walk.

"Let us all co-operate with our local police in their efforts to keep death off our streets and highways this Christmas. By doing so, we may help them to save our own lives," he concluded.

Juniors Climb Into Third Place After 11-4 Win Over County Team

Belleville Lambert - Rollins climbed into third place in the OHA Central Ontario Junior "B" league in Picton Saturday night by racking up a convincing 11-4 victory over Prince Edward County Combines.

The win was the second in a row for Belleville and ties them with the Combines at six points apiece. However, the Lamberts-Rollins club has won four and lost five while Prince Edward has an equal number of wins and six defeats.

The present league standing shows Kingston with an 8-1 record, Peterborough with an 8-2 mark, followed by Belleville and Picton. Trenton had a single win and nine setbacks before dropping out of the league somewhat this past weekend.

Belleville will have an opportunity to take over third all alone tonight when the top-spot Kingston club provides the opposition at Memorial Arena here at 8.30.

Eddie Plate's hustling youngsters lost little time in wrapping up Saturday's game. They took a 3-0 lead early in the game and led 4-1 at the end of the first period. They made it 5-1 before Prince Edward scored again in the second and rounded out the score at 11-4 in the middle stanza. Neither club scored in a penalty-riddled third period.

Leading the Belleville scoring parade in Saturday's victory were Ralph Plane and Gary Goyer with two goals and two assists each and Dennis Kerrulah with three goals. Bill Foster, recently acquired from Guelph Biltmores and the Trenton intermediates, had one goal and two assists while Jim Sheridan had one and one. Ron Hull and Gary Rowbotham were credited with Bucky Ethier, Jack Elliott and Barry Titterson earning single assists.

Kellar with two goals and a helper, Hosking with a pair and Gary Guernsey with three assists, were best in a losing cause. Platt had a pair of assist. Carson and Bryant one each.

Fire Destroys Farm Home Near Roslin

ROSLIN (Special) — Mr. and Mrs. Everett Geen and their family of four, three boys and a girl were made homeless Saturday night when fire destroyed their farm house, one mile east of Roslin.

The fire is believed to have started from overheated stovepipes spread so rapidly that only downstairs furniture was saved. Belleville firemen answered the alarm but could do nothing to save the building and farmer their efforts toward saving other farm buildings.

The loss was said to be partially covered by insurance.

Minor Hockey

Red Wings, Maca, Bruins, Canadiens and Browns were winners Saturday morning as five games were played in the Jamieson Minor Hockey League.

Red Wings defeated Quinte 4-2 with Jim Ross and Art Lalast for the victors. Jim White and R. Reddick also scored and Al Stock had one helper. T. Mitchell and L. Rivers scored for Quinte, Carson and D. Anderson claiming assists.

The Macs downed Black Hawks 5-1 with two-goal efforts by Bob Ridley and Richard Eves. B. DeGenova had the other goal and A. Mott one assist. Wayne Brenton tallied for the Hawks unassisted.

P. Emerson's three-goal hat trick sparked the Bruins to a 4-1 win over the Rangers. All Emerson's goals were solo efforts while B. McBride also scored with Rathwell assisting. Tony Potts scored for the Rangers.

Dennis Ray was the big gun as Canadiens defeated Maple Leafs 5-1. Ray had a brace of goals and Ron Stanat while Boomhower had one and one. York and Kinnaird scored with Skinner, Wood and Parker gathering helpers. Bill Allin was the Leaf scorer with help from K. Rydman.

Fox Shot in Shed On Front Street Believed Rabid

Although all indications point to the animal being rabid, the body of a fox shot in the downtown Belleville area Friday night has been shipped to laboratories in Hull, Quebec, for a definite rabies test.

Mr. William Sargent, operator of a Front Street beauty salon, shot the animal about nine o'clock Friday night after it darted into a shed at the rear of Hibord's Electrical Shop, south of the upper bridge.

A local Christmas tree vendor had trees for sale in the shed at the rear of the Front Street business and as Mr. Sargent and the tree vendor opened the door of the shed the fox darted between their legs and into the building.

First thought was to kill the animal with a shovel but due to the rabies possibility it was decided to stay clear of the fox. Mr. Sargent ran to a nearby hardware store and borrowed a rifle and promised three bullets into the animal.

The body of the fox was turned over to federal district veterinary Dr. H. M. Youngbusband, who was quoted as saying that undoubtedly the animal was rabid as it would not normally have entered the city.

The fox is believed to have made its way down the river to the downtown area.

"I've done a lot of fox hunting in my day, but this is the first time a fox ever hunted me," stated Mr. Sargent. "It's fortunate that fox ran into adults and not children."

Lodge was closed and a delicious Christmas luncheon was served by the lunch committee.

Medical Soc. W.A. Plans Spring Tea

The regular monthly meeting of the Women's Auxiliary to the Hastings and Prince Edward County Medical Society was held at the home of Dr. and Mrs. W. L. Griffiths of Trenton.

The meeting was conducted by the president, Mrs. F. R. Ross of Belleville.

During the business period, Mrs. A. Elliott, representative of the group to the Canadian Arthritis and Rheumatism Society, asked for and received the names of volunteers to give donations of various items of food required for a Christmas supper party planned for that society.

At this time also, a motion was carried that a sum of money be sent to the Bursary Fund for medical students at the Ontario Medical Association headquarters.

SPRING TEA PLANNED

Preliminary plans were discussed and outlined for a spring tea. The committees formed for the organization of this project will include: Mrs. E. Dow, Mrs. T. Loder, Mrs. J. Nelles, Mrs. B. Nugent and Mrs. A. Rota.

Following the adjournment of the meeting a most interesting demonstration of beauty culture was enjoyed by the group.

A social coffee hour brought the evening to a close.

Women's Institute

QUINTE WOMEN'S INSTITUTE

The December meeting of the Quinte Women's Institute was held on Friday, December 5, at the home of Mrs. Doug Atkins, with 24 members and four visitors present, with the first vice-president, Mrs. Robert Atkins, presiding.

Mrs. Atkins welcomed all and thanked the hostess for opening her home.

Correspondence was read and Mrs. H. McMullen gave a report on the rug-making course, and the first lesson to be held in January. Several members are planning on taking the course. Plans were made for catering at two banquets held recently in the Quinte Institute Memorial hall.

Mrs. R. Atkins and Mrs. J. Parrott were conveners for the Christmas program, which opened with community singing of Christmas carols, "Noel" and "O Little Town of Bethlehem."

Mrs. Farnsworth gave a paper on the motto, "Christmas is the Time for the Open Hand, the Open House and the Open Heart."

Mrs. C. Reid and Mrs. J. Parrott favored with a duet, "Sleep, Baby Sleep."

The topic of the meeting was given by Miss Helen Sulman, "Little Black Lamb." The members were delighted to have an institute member from Wales — Mrs. Jones, visiting friends here, who spoke briefly of their work and activities.

Mrs. H. Grills gave a reading on Christmas Eve. Roll call was answered with exchanging of gifts, followed with carol singing, "Hark, The Herald Angels Sing," "Silent Night."

Refreshments were served by the hostess and her assistants.

DISTRICT WOMEN'S ACTIVITIES

THOMASBURG W.A.

Mrs. Dyson was hostess to the Thomasburg W.A. for the Christmas meeting.

Mrs. Henry Morton opened the meeting with "Silent Night, Holy Night."

Happiness events of the year were read. The devotional was in charge of Mrs. C. Adams with Scripture reading by Mrs. Dyson, followed by several carols in charge of Mrs. Dyson.

The topic, "Home for Christmas," was given by three ladies, Mrs. Dyson, Mrs. Preston, and Mrs. A. Brough.

Mr. and Mrs. Dyson sang "Christians Awake! Salute the Happy Morn."

Mr. Dyson closed with prayer. Roll call was answered with a donation of a stamped Christmas card to be sent to shut-ins.

The treasurer reported a successful year, financially.

Cards and notes of thanks were read. Flower convener reports were read; birthday money received and arrangements were made for the purchase of new hymn books.

The program was as follows: readings by Mrs. H. Vance, "A December Night" and "Long, Long Ago" and by Mrs. Carter, "When I Whine"; and Mrs. Dyson on writers who wrote, "Away In A Manger" and "O Little Town of Bethlehem"; and Mrs. L. Grills, "The Legend of the Poinsettia."

The meeting closed with prayer followed by exchange of Christmas gifts. Refreshments were served.

IVANHOE W.M.S.

The December meeting of the Ivanhoe Woman's Missionary Society was held in Beulah United Church.

Mrs. Samuel Twiddy presided over the Christmas program and opened the service with a reading, "The Spirit of Christmas Is A Spirit of Giving," but not in a selfish way, but giving as Christ gave to all in need.

All joined in singing, "Silent Night, Holy Night" and "It came Upon A Midnight Clear."

The Scripture reading was given by Mrs. Malcolm Hamilton and Mrs. Twiddy led in prayer.

Mrs. Elmer Rollins gave a reading based on the Scripture reading, "I have showed you all things, how that so laboring ye ought to support the weak and remember the words of the Lord Jesus, how He said, 'It is more blessed to give than to receive'."

Mrs. Arthur Phillips gave a reading, "Just A Little Bit of Christmas."

Gifts were brought for the Inter Mission, also for the out-ins of the community.

"Joy To the World," was sung and the Rev. J. Stobbert gave the closing prayer.

Every Flower In Book Seen In Hat Designs

By SYLVIA HACK
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP)—A spring hat collection featuring nearly every seasonal flower in the book is the first of a series leaking the house of Dior with the British hat industry.

The collection, designed by Dior's successor, Yves St. Laurent, was made by the House of Dolcroz and receives its first showing in a flower - bedecked, perfumed salon, near Oxford street.

The distributors describe the collection as influenced by the fountains of Paris and by the colors of the flowers and headdresses of the statues of fairy sprites which surround them.

CLOCHE PROMINENT

It is gay and frothy, with the cloche shape predominating. A variety of straw and grosgrain fabrics is used with pastel shades of green, blue and coral to the fore.

Where flowers are featured, they are used with abundance and sometimes it's difficult to see the hat under the horticulture.

One pink creation, looking as if the wearer had tumbled into a poppy field, is covered from corner to corner with the blooms. It is worn well down on the back of the head and over the ears.

Another eye-catcher is a cloche made entirely of lilies-of-the-valley, with a fringe of blossom falling softly on to the forehead. Hiding amid a swath of black tulle is a small white straw cloche worn high above the ears and trimmed with black satin ribbon.

For cocktail wear, clusters of blooms in the form of headache bands are suggested. Two of the most dramatic are a single huge pink rose, worn atop the head with a stalk rising from the centre like an antenna, and a circle of black satin topped off with large black and yellow dahlias.

Although the collection is strongly prejudiced towards the cloche, there are a few variations, including pill-box types, a turban of minty blue veiling and a navy straw shaped like an inverted bucket. The collection will be going to Canada before next spring.

Shadow In the Sun

(The frontispiece in Wallace Havelock Robb's latest book, "Tecumtha", was photographed from an original black and white oil-painting by the Toronto artist, Adelaide Cox. On Sunday afternoon June 1, 1958, I was present at a rather strange ceremony on the quiet lawn at Abbey Dawn, where photographer Joe Robb had the painting propped up on the grass, face-up in the sunlight with the camera focused directly on it from above on a tripod. I was requested to cast my shadow on the painting pending the "shot", lest the strong rays of the sun soften or cause the oils in the painting to run and on a prearranged signal, I was to step quickly aside. The impact and curious position of his painting hit me very forcibly out there on the front lawn in the sunlight — Tecumtha!— who was to all intent and purposes looking up at us out of the grass, the sod and the gravel! This great, Shawnee chieftain's name is translated into the English as, "Shooting Star".)

Tecumtha from the grass aspires
Sad and wistful in the light;
A fleeting glimpse of lost desires,
A trace of fierce burning fire
Leaps up, then fades from sight.

O passing stranger is a shooting star
Across the galaxy-array
That arcs the heaven's dome afar
In night, but now, this avatar
Streaks forth its brilliance in the day!

Tecumtha, proud in silent sun,
Forgive my shadow on the ground;
For you, this interlude is done
And all your dreams whose course is run
Will flower, in epic lines of sound!

WHY "THE BRIDE'S SIDE" OF THE CHURCH AT LEFT?

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Until my fiance and I began to make plans for our formal church wedding next Spring, neither of us had ever given any thought as to why the "left side of the church" is "the groom's side," and the left side of the church "the bride's side." Is there any special reason for this? — Bride-to-be

Yes, indeed there is a special reason for this. This procedure follows the tradition that honored guests are always seated at the right of the hostess or host. At a wedding the bridegroom's mother and father are the honored guests of the bride's family, therefore the bridegroom's mother and father are seated in the first pew at the right of the aisle; and in the pews behind them his other relatives and friends.

(As you make your wedding plans, remember too that this tradition is also the reason why at the wedding reception, the groom's mother, the woman guest of honor, is seated at the right of the bride's father, the host of the wedding; and the groom's father, the man guest of honor, is seated at the right of the bride's mother, the hostess of the wedding.)

ADDRESS INVITATION-REPLY TO BRIDE'S PARENTS

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I knew we were to receive a formal invitation to a church wedding and to the reception at a private suite in a large hotel here — and so I carefully saved your recent column on how to reply to this kind of formal invitation. Now I won'd like to know whether I should address a note acceptance to the bride-to-be or to her parents. — Reader

Address your reply to the parents . . . since it was they who issued the invitations.

THE FAMILY COUNCIL

Editor's Note: The Family Council consists of a judge, a psychiatrist, three clergymen, a newspaper editor, a novelist, editor and their wives. Each month at a meeting of an actual case history, the Council reports on problems that have been dealt with by responsible agencies and counsellors.

Julius J. — I want him to look on me as his father.

Enid J. — He hasn't forgotten his own father.

Julius J. — My wife and I are in our mid-30's and have been married ten years. Enid was a widow with a 5-year-old son when I married her.

We now have three children of our own and I adopted the little boy, Lenny, whom I love like my own. I would do anything in the world for him, but in spite of this he has been a source of trouble in our marriage. I want him to look on me as his own father and Enid thinks he ought to forget and remember his real father.

I feel that Lenny is much too young for such explanations. Already he falls back to saying, "You can't tell me. You're not my father." If I try to talk sailing through the door when he talks like that, Enid encourages it by spoiling a close attachment between him and his father's parents.

Enid J. — When my husband died I promised his parents that whatever I did about my own children I would keep their memory alive in Lenny. Lenny's father was their only son and it means everything to them to have him know all about his real father. They decided to buy my home, thinking Lenny might be more inclined to remain in it. They did!

Lately Enid has made it quite plain that letting Lenny be his own is the best way to keep Lenny alive. It seems to me that I have to keep him in touch. He's all they have left of their son.

Julius doesn't seem to understand that Lenny really loves him like a father. It's only when he gets angry that he talks like that. He doesn't mean it half the time and is always sorry afterwards. Every night I say my prayers and he must be reminded both his fathers.

The Council thinks Julius should be glad that what they feel hurt or angry inside childred fantasy that Lenny expresses your discomfort. Some like to imagine that they were stolen by the gypsies and sold to their present parents, or that they were adopted.

If they have something real to go on as Lenny has, this fantasy is encouraged. But in long to the future I would keep their memory alive in Lenny. Lenny's father was their only son and it means everything to them to have him know all about his real father. They decided to buy my home, thinking Lenny might be more inclined to remain in it. They did!

Enid should try to find a way of pointing this family to the grandparents. She might suggest that Lenny could be a happier youngster if his child dream hymnmuch on his dead father — and that his father would probably prefer it this way.

Canada Makes Known Ideas on German Question

OTTAWA (CP)—External Affairs Minister Smith says that Canada will have further ideas to offer in the Western counter-proposals to the Russian proposal on the Berlin situation.

He said in an interview on his return from the NATO council meeting in Paris that Canada will have more to present before the West makes its formal counter-proposals to the Soviet Union late next month.

Mr. Smith said that the Canadian government fully supported the view that the West reject Russia's proposal to demilitarize Berlin.

Ford of Canada Workers Take Strike Vote

WINDSOR (CP)—Members of local 200, United Auto Workers Union (CLC), met here Sunday to vote on whether to strike against Ford of Canada.

The strike vote was ordered last week by the union, which is currently negotiating a new Ford contract. The UAW seeks a settlement matching one worked out with General Motors of Canada earlier this month. It provided for three annual wage increases of six cents an hour or 3½ per cent where that is greater, plus an eight-cent hourly premium for skilled workers.

Local president Victor White said the result of the vote would not be announced until late today, after votes have been held by Ford employees at the Oakville assembly plant and the North York parts depot.

Mr. White said there was "a very good turnout" at Sunday's meeting.

600-Mile Fraser Swim Finished By Frogman

VANCOUVER (CP) — Louis Lourmais, former captain in the French underground stepped from the near-freezing Fraser River Sunday after completing a 600-mile trip from Prince George to the sea.

The 38-year-old frogman finished the long mid-winter swim in 17 days. Each night he paused to rest. Near Quesnel, 300 miles to the northeast, the river began to freeze over. He left the water there and travelled by car for 100 miles.

Lourmais became the first man to swim through Hell's Gate Canyon, last upriver from Hope, B.C. He shot in and out of the maelstrom at 20 miles an hour, smashing his snorkel and goggles — the same equipment that was covered with ice in the swim's earlier stages.

When ushered from the muddy Fraser Sunday, Brittany - born Lourmais said swim had answered "all the people who said there was no place for me in B.C."

PROVES CLAIM

Scarred, bruised and aching he said he had "double proved" there is a place for frogmen in the cold-fish waters of the province.

"When I came here from Eastern Canada 18 months ago, I could see a great future for frogmen in B.C.," he said.

"Nowhere in the world are there bigger sea mammals, octupi, sea weeds, sharks or crabs than off the B.C. coast.

"These waters hold untold wealth in both mineral's and food but we know nothing about them. We have never studied them.

"Everyone told me the weather was too cold and I got fed up with their expert opinion. I knew I had to prove a frogman could stand cold, fast water and this should do it."

WON $200 BET

Lourmais had no sponsor for his fantastic swim. However, he "won" $200 from Vancouver hotel operator Julius Balshine, who bet Lourmais would not finish the swim.

"I am going to use this cheque to start a survey of the cold waters of B.C. to show what frogmen can do for industry in this province," he said.

Louis, a good-humored man, has been diving for 20 years. He worked on the St. Lawrence Seaway before coming here.

EXPECT

The contract does not call for the company to pay a retroactive increase for the seven - month period from the end of the former two-year contract June 1 this year to the start of the new contract.

President Mike Solski of mine-mill's Local 598 told employees at a closed meeting their only 48 working days were lost during the strike because "we're now on the four-day week and indications were clear and explicit that the four-day week was in the offering for a long time. Some reports said three years."

He said the 40 - hour week means all wages took will be regained in less than a year" and the regaining of "an average of $75.00 per week will more than reduction to the 32 hours. The men benefit in events an hour on that issue alone."

If the vote is favorable mainstream employers will return to work Friday with production workers returning Job. 2. It would be four weeks before some employees were back at work.

The company had announced it would pay its usual $25 Christmas bonus.

TO BOOST DUES

The union announced it proposes "for the purpose of strengthening our future position in negotiations, that union dues be increased by $1 per month to become effective in April, 1959, in order to rebuild and establish a strike fund." Present dues are $3.50 a month.

Workers interviewed following the meetings indicated they were satisfied with contract proposals and felt dues increases necessary.

During the 87-day off - work period the union estimated it spent $60,000 on strike pay and other assistance to strikers. Mr. Solski said the union would continue until workers were back on their jobs.

Nearly $1,000,000 a week was lost in wages. Costs to Inco are estimated unofficially at $2,000,000.

Other terms of the agreement call for changes in the methods of recalling workers, arbitration panels, the setting up of new departments, changes in pay for statutory, holidays and job reclassification.

The company agreed to pay its share of insurance payments for the period between contracts, deducting labor's contributions over a period of time. Both sides will continue to split these payments and under the Ontario hospital insurance plan, starting in the new year, plus present plans, workers will get extra benefits.

A heavy turnout of voters is expected today despite 20-below zero weather. Strong endorsement of the union executives's recommendations is certain.

Meanwhile, Catholic charities and the Salvation Army announced they will continue to supply needy families with fuel and food. Donations of food, money and clothing have come in from all parts of Canada.

Prayers of thanksgiving for the end of the strike were said in Sudbury churches Sunday. Roman Catholic churches in the district held a mass of thanksgiving and te deum.

Weekend celebrating was quiet. There were no arrests in the city. Saturday night despite reports of a heavy run on liquor, beer and wine stores after the announcement of settlement Friday afternoon.

Several hundred families, some of Inco employees but out of work because of the strike, were left destitute by it. The city estimates welfare payments will total $118,000 this year.

UNION VICTORY

Mr. Solski said the union had won out over "the most insidiously planned campaign intended to demoralize our people."

He said "every trick in the union - and strike-busting book was thrown at us with full cooperation of the press, some politicians and even a small number of phonies in our own ranks. Whose importance and influence was inflated by the press and these politicians to ridiculous proportions."

Real Hope for Peace Says Diefenbaker in Reporting On His Recent World Tour

Dispatcher Calls Cab for Prisoner, Helps Escape

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Police Chief Vernon Whitesides of suburban Florissant said, a prisoner escaped Saturday night with the help of a police dispatcher who called him a cab.

The prisoner, Robert Smith, 28, was in the dispatcher's office sipping a bottle of soda while patrolman Forrest Hancock doubled as a dispatcher.

Patrolman Hancock was relieved at the change of shifts by William Byrne, 65, of Florissant.

Byrne says he told Hancock to put the prisoner in his cell. Hancock says he didn't hear any such order.

Anyway, Smith asked Byrne to call a cab, Byrne did and Smith hasn't been seen since.

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Diefenbaker said Sunday night in a report to the country on his recent world trip that there is real hope for peace.

In a nationally-televised broadcast on the CBC English and French networks, Mr. Diefenbaker said:

"In essence . . . there is real hope for the maintenance of the peace in spite of the great problems that still confront us, because there is among most of the leaders of the nations, a determination to confine and confound the schemes and ambitions of those who would destroy that peace.

"There is a high resolve among the free nations to work together constructively and positively as never before in history, to maintain a strong and united front as an effective deterrent to aggression."

TALKS TRADE

Mr. Diefenbaker gave a country-by-country report of his tour, beginning in Britain where, he said, he resumed trade and other negotiations with Prime Minister Macmillan.

It was in the United Kingdom and other Commonwealth countries that Canada must expand trade of offset our heavy imports over exports in our trade with the United States. He was glad to report "excellent prospects" for further expansion of trade with Britain.

Of his visit to France, Mr. Diefenbaker said he was asked comment on the prospects of the new Fifth Republic except to say that General de Gaulle is "dedicated to his fellow citizens and interested to devote his talents to the cause of France and her allies among the free nations."

In West Germany, "that vital, valiant outpost of the line of freedom," Canadian armed forces are "adding credit to the name and fame of Canada by their exemplary conduct and professional efficiency."

In Italy, the battle against Communist infiltration was being won.

ASIAN VIEW

Mr. Diefenbaker said that in Pakistan and India he experienced "at first hand the valuable role of all the Asian members of the Commonwealth for the quickest possible bridging of the gulf between the East and the West of the free nations."

"That it can and will be achieved, I have not the slightest doubt if we do our part," he said.

Colombo plan assistance from Canada to Ceylon was paying dividends "in the kind of practical goodwill that will make Canadians and their products acceptable and welcome."

Turning to domestic problems, Mr. Diefenbaker said: "It is here that my first responsibility lies."

"Every possible resource of the government is being used to combat the national problems and individual hardships resulting from the worldwide economic slowdown."

39 Fatalities Across Canada During Weekend

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Thirty nine Canadians died in various mishaps during the weekend, a Canadian Press survey showed today.

There were 24 deaths in traffic accidents, nine of them in Ontario where four air force personnel perished in a two-car collision early Saturday near Exeter.

Two persons died in fires. One was a one-year-old twin who died in hospital in Montreal Sunday. Two people were asphyxiated and one was suffocated.

The toll by provinces with traffic deaths included: British Columbia 6 (5), Alberta 2 (2), Manitoba 1 (1), Ontario 11 (9), Quebec 7 (4), Nova Scotia 1 (1), and Newfoundland 2 (2).

The CP survey covered the period from 6 p.m. local time Friday to midnight Sunday.

The Ontario dead:

LAC J. G. Y. A. Belanger, 24, Montreal; LAC C. C. Sorenson, 35, Stanhope, Que.; LAC Metro Walchuk, 24, Moose Jaw, Sask.; and LAC Walter Dobko, 23, Grand Prairie, Alta., killed early Saturday when two cars collided near Exeter, 30 miles northwest of London.

Star Jesis, 60, of the Sagamok Indian Reserve at Spanish, Ont., killed Friday night when he was struck by a car on Highway 17 near Walford.

Mrs. Frank Windsor, 38, of North Bay, killed when her husband's car hit another near Sundridge, 34 miles south of North Bay. Mr. Windsor was reported in serious condition in hospital.

Chambers Faye, 15, and Lorne, 6, were in satisfactory condition. Jack Cota, of Cobalt, owner of the other car, suffered minor bruised injuries and was taken to hospital.

Elizabeth, Ann Whiteside, 19, of Toronto, killed in the city's Eastern suburb of Scarborough early Sunday when she was thrown from a car after it collided with another.

SOLDIER KILLED

Sgt. D. G. Quinn, 28, of the 1st Battalion, RCR, Camp Ipperwash, killed Saturday when his jeep left the highway and crashed into a fence. Sgt. Quinn was born in Northern Ontario.

Kerry Laughlin, one year, who perished early Sunday in fire which destroyed the family home at Coldwater, near Orillia.

Albert Bennett, 84-year-old resident of the Hastings County Home for the Aged, killed Saturday when he was hit by a train at Belleville.

Mrs. Sarah Goldberg, 70, fatally injured Saturday when she was knocked down by a car in Hamilton.

Six European Ships Break Through Ice Jam

MONTREAL (CP)—Six European ships broke through the ice-filled St. Lawrence River and blockades between Montreal and Quebec City during the weekend to steam confidently for the open waters of the Atlantic and their home ports.

The six are the Swedish freighter Uddeholm, the German ships Christian Sartori and Alexandra Sartori, the British Vanguard and Asia and the Norwegian Thorsdrake.

More were to follow them into the St. Lawrence estuary below Quebec City today, including five which were tied up at the provincial capital during the night.

Twenty other ocean ships still had to break free of the growing ice jams in the 180 miles from Montreal downriver to Quebec City. Icebreakers were hurried to help the ships as subzero temperatures persisted.

GOOD MAN STRIKES

"There's jams all over," said a spokesman for the transport department in Ottawa. "That's the cold that's doing it."

The ice was the only threatening the ships—they are also causing the water level around Montreal to rise to dangerous levels.

Of the 20, five pulled out of Montreal harbor and others downstream from the city's inner harbor, during the weekend down a passage hacked for them through a 20-mile jam extending from Montreal by the icebreakers J. B. McLean and Ernest Lapointe.

The first four of the five were stuck Sunday night in a new ice jam in Lake St. Peter, a bulge in the St. Lawrence River just above Trois-Rivieres, 70 miles downriver from Montreal.

The fifth, the German Transmichigan, reached Trois-Rivieres

Soldiers Ready To Return Home After Duty Tour

OTTAWA (CP) — "You are soldiers of Canada but of the world."

This remark was made by Lt.-Gen. E. L. M. Burns, Canadian commander of the United Nations Emergency Force, to a group of Canadian soldiers preparing to return home after a tour of duty in Egypt.

It signifies the Canadian Army's involvement in UN duties around the world, the army says in a year-end review of its activities.

More than 1,000 Canadian soldiers are serving in the UNEF in Egypt. Others help to form UN truce teams in Palestine and Kashmir. Another 77 were sent to the UN team in Lebanon. About 100 more are serving with the International Truce Supervisory Commission in Indo-China.

Canadian troops serving overseas now number some 6,500, the majority with the 4th Infantry Brigade group in West Germany.

Army headquarters said that at home and abroad the army has undergone a gradual but general reorganization in 1958 to meet the changing concepts of war.

NEW MISSILES

The government announced in October that the army would be supplied with American Lacrosse surface-to-surface guided missiles. During the year, 120 officers and men of the Royal Canadian Artillery received guided missile training at Fort Sill, Okla., and Fort Bliss, Tex.

A new armored regiment, the Fort Gerry Horse, was brought into being at Camp Petawawa. Each of the four brigades in the army now has an armored reconnaissance regiment in support.

Prototypes of the Bobcat, an amphibious armored carrier, were unveiled for the first time.

Lt.-Gen. S. Findlay Clark, 49, succeeded Lt.-Gen. Howard D. Graham, 55, as chief of the general staff Aug. 31.

OUTDOORS
with John Alden Knight

Villainous Crow Has Good Points

That much-maligned bird — the crow — has the outdoor public fairly well divided into two schools of thought concerning the desirability, or lack of it. For some reason, you will find a few folks who know the outdoors to be in any way moderate in their views on crows. Either they admire the bird or they detest him — no half-way measures in either case.

Without question, the crow is the smartest bird that flies. In any of our game birds such as grouse, woodcock, quail or the wily old ringneck, had half the common sense that is the crow's heritage, our upland shooting would be dreary business indeed. No crow would be stupid enough to permit a dog to point him while the hunters walk in for the shot.

Of course, the crow receives credit for being the number-one bonehim of the outdoors. In the spring, crows do much damage to nesting birds. But crows are not the only nest robbers. Opossum, skunks, red squirrels, chipmunks, etc., do just as much damage as crows.

Farmers complain about crows making heavy inroads on newly planted corn. Well, maybe so. But some day take time to watch an old ringneck rooster walk down a freshly planted corn row. He won't pick a single kernel and he'll keep going until his crop is filled to the bursting point with nice expensive seed corn.

We have our house on a six-acre piece of land outside the city limits, next to the golf course. One acre is devoted to house and lawn; the other five grow wild and act as a small wildlife sanctuary. Along with other wildlife, there is a flock of crows that lives in this area.

Just let a predator, such as an owl, Cooper's hawk, hunting cat, etc., show up in our place and the crows let us know about it immediately. We don't shoot these crows as we figure they do more good, policing the place, than they do harm.

INTERESTING PETS

Tame crows make interesting pets. To be sure, they are mischievous and they will steal and hide anything which happens to strike their fancy, but they are amusing and amazingly intelligent. With the patience it is not difficult to teach a young crow to talk. Try to teach a captive grouse or ringneck to talk and see how you make out.

One of our damaging insect imports is the Japanese beetle. These hardshelled pests at first had no natural enemies in our country. Now a number of birds have learned how to utilize these insects as food, among them the crow. I have watched our flock here parading up number six fairway, stuffing themselves with beetle grubs which they have learned to find among the grass roots.

To be sure, too many crows can be a threat both to farm crops and beneficial wildlife, such as upland game and song birds. For this reason, it is a good thing to thin down the numbers during the winter months. To say that they provide excellent wing shooting is to put it mildly. They are a definite challenge to any wing shooter.

Learning to hunt these birds successfully is a study in itself. Having the intelligence that they do, a hunter offgit is hard pressed to bring them within range of his gun. And what is more, once they are within that range, their erratic flight makes them exceedingly difficult targets.

Frankly, I would like to see the crow given some legal protection. There should be a closed season on him while he is nesting and raising his young. During the shooting season, he should at least be accorded the dignity of being game only for shotguns.

This business of feeding crows poisoned corn and dynamiting the roosts should not be allowed. Anyone who makes a serious study of crow shooting can tell you that you can have just as much fun afield outwitting a fully clever bird as you can in any form of upland gunning.

In writing this, we realize that many who read it will not agree with us. Crows are vermin and should be treated as such. Just the same, if these crow-haters ever took the time to study the bird and to enjoy the wing shooting that he has to offer, their ideas may very well undergo considerable revision.

Trenton Team Drops Out of Junior League

It was announced over the week-end that Trenton Lafferty Sees of the OHA Central Ontario Junior "B" league have withdrawn out of the league for the remainder of the season.

Reason given for the withdrawal was lack of support at the box office. The Bees were in last place in the five-team grouping, with Peterborough, Kingston, Belleville and Picton, having won a single game in 10 starts.

A meeting has been scheduled for Memorial Arena here tonight at 7:30 to arrange the remainder of the schedule which is slated to end February 10th. There is a possibility another team will complete the schedule in place of the Trenton club.

Brown Panther Harry Wills Boxing Star of Roaring 20's

NEW YORK (AP) — The old Brown Panther, who received $50,000 for not stalking Jack Dempsey, is dead at 68.

Harry Wills, one of the heavyweights who fighted boxing's star-studded sky during the roaring 20s, died Sunday night from diabetes.

Wills, who earned the Old Brown Panther tag because of his smooth, lithe fighting and sidestepping motions in the ring, had more than 100 recorded fights. He often joshed about being paid for 7-round bouts that lasted only a few minutes.

Wills' career began in 1911 in New Orleans and spanned 21 years. Twenty-two of his fights were with Sam Langford, another of that generation's great heavies.

FAMOUS FASTS

For 26 years, during and after his boxing career, Wills would avoid food for 30 days to "burn off the impurities."

His self - imposed diet would consist only of water for a month. Then he would take a light collation, spend two days on juices, switch to milk for two more then have a meal of pork chops and sweet potatoes to celebrate.

During his ordeal he would walk 12 miles a day and sleep only four or five hours a night. He claimed the hunger pangs left after the third day.

In one session, he lost 46 pounds. During the 26 years, he figured he lost more than a ton of sweat.

Wills invested his ring earnings wisely, and at his death had considerable real estate earnings in Harlem, and a 32-family apartment house in the Bronx.

He didn't think much of today's fighters, mourning the lost art of sidestepping and feinting in the ring. "I only forgot to duck twice," he said when queried on his fight record.

Many Get up Early to Take NBC-TV Course in Physics

By CHARLES MERCER

NEW YORK (AP) — As best I can figure out there now are about 710,000 persons throughout the U.S. tuning their TV sets at 6:45 a.m. local time five mornings a week to NBC-TV's stations for a course in physics.

Continental Classroom is the name of the 30-minute - through - Friday series whose co-partners are NBC, the American Association of Colleges for Teacher Education and the Fund for the Advancement of Education.

Dr. Harvey E. White, who is conducting the course, said the other day that besides about 3,000 students enlisted in the TV course, for regular credits from 250 colleges and universities, mail about the series is pouring in from individual viewers who include teachers, technicians, advanced students, housewives and "I ain't sure what else. I'm just about convinced everybody."

Dr. White, professor of physics at the University of California at Berkeley and consultant to the Atomic Energy Commission said that "one of the most significant things to me is the large number of youngsters between the ages of six and 14 who regularly watch the program.

"Probably most of them can't work the problems which we pose. But in the long run this group of young viewers may be the most important contribution of Continental Classroom, since it is influencing them to take an interest in scientific careers at an early age."

The variety of viewers is surprising. In Montclair, N.J., a high school class gathers at 6:30 a.m. each morning to take the course.

In Dr. White's words: "This program shows that there's an appreciative audience for education and television."

Black Hawks Farm Teams Doing Well

TORONTO (CP) — Chicago Black Hawks, mired in fifth place in the National Hockey League, could well take a lesson from six of their farm clubs in Ontario.

Four of the teams are leading their league and the two others are battling for the top spot. As of Friday Hawk farm clubs in the province had won 64 of 81 games.

St. Catharines Teepees are runaway leaders of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series, which they dominated last winter, and St. Catharines Junior B's are out in front on the Niagara District Junior B loop.

Sarnia Sailors, defending Ontario Junior B champions, are nearly out of sight in the central Junior B circuit and Sault Ste. Marie juveniles are outclassing their opposition.

In the minor - up class are Dixie Beehives of the Metropolitan Toronto Junior B. loop and Orillia's Junior C. Bulldozers.

Showpiece of the Chicago system in the Teepee club, which under coach Harry Watson has won 20 of 25 starts after losing seven of last year's top players to clubs of higher classification.

Canucks Send Phil Maloney To Chihawks

VANCOUVER (CP) — Coleman Hall, general manager of the Western Hockey League Vancouver Canucks, said Sunday a deal has been completed to send Phil Maloney, Canuck forward, to Chicago Black Hawks of the National Hockey League.

Hall said: "Our conditions have been met. Maloney will go if he wants to—but only then."

Today Hall will ask Maloney whether he wants to go.

Maloney last night: "It's the price I'll go. And if I know I'll be back with Vancouver if I don't make Chicago, I'll go. But I'm not going to be shipped down to Buffalo (American hockey first."

Hall dealt directly with Muzz Patrick, general manager of New York Rangers.

Hugh O'Brian Heads List As Most Eligible Bachelor

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Here it is girls—the Hollywood bachelor future book for 1959. Heading the list in the marital stakes is straight - shooting, elusive Hugh O'Brian.

This was a bad year for marriage in the film capital. Among the many unions that hit the rocks were those of the Ernest Borgnines, Rock Hudsons, Marlon Brandos, Cary Grants, Mickey Rooneys, Eddie Fishers, Tony Bartleys, Deborah Kerr, Van Johnsons, Dewey Martins (Peggy Lee) and Ben Gages (Elaine Stritch).

GOOD HUNTING YEAR

These things usually go in cycles, so 1959 should shape up as a happy hunting season for the dolls, even if it isn't leap year.

Of Hollywood bachelorettes, who remain anonymous for obvious reasons, have gone so far as to compile a list of the most eligible males.

In the interest of maintaining some order, only bona fide bachelors are included—no grass widowers allowed.

The gals chose Hugh O'Brian as the No. 1 man. They argue that he has all the needed factors—looks, success, future. Informed of the honor, TV's Wyatt Earp said:

"I'm not anti-marriage. I'd like to get married and raise a family—but the right girl comes along. It could happen in 1959."

THE GARETS

Here are the others on the list: 2. Tony Perkins. He seems engrossed in his career so far, but he could be trapped.

3. David Nelson. The elder of the Nelson boys might get married if the draft doesn't get him first. Of course, his brother Ricky could also be a prime catch, but he's too young and cautious.

4. Gary Crosby. The Crosbys are the marrying kind, and two of the boys have gone already. Gary is the eldest.

5. Montgomery Clift. He's a loner, one just might be looking for a girl to tell his troubles to.

6. Cesar Romero. But he create a challenge for the girls. Cesar is included on the list. He has been one of the town's leading escorts and open-field runner in the marital game, too.

But then, Jimmy Stewart didn't marry until past 40 and look how domestic he is.

7. Tab Hunter. Will he tire of the girls? There's a chance here.

Next year at this time, we'll bring out the list and see how the girls did. Good hunting!

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARTER, Sports Editor

"The McFarlands have a good hockey club and from what we saw of some of their potential in the third period against Cornwall last night, they should come home with the world championship next March."

That was the joint opinion of president Bob Lobel and secretary-manager George Dudley of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association given to this reporter in an interview Saturday morning before the officials addressed the McFarlands at a city hall meeting.

They were not duly impressed with the somewhat scrambly hockey played by both clubs in the first two periods, but "the Mac lads got very impressive in the third when they played the best hockey of the night," said Mr. Lobel.

While in their talks to the club both CAHA officials stressed very strongly the importance of the McFarlands learning and adopting major changes in international rules, Mr. Dudley went into some detail on the non-icing regulation.

Canadian teams overseas, he said, trained as they might be in observing the body checking rule to the effective play, are bound to run into penalties. And since there is no icing the puck in international rules, they must organize and perfect a defence when they are short-handed.

"It is up to the coach to do this," Mr. Dudley said. "but any suggestion for successful penalty-killing action against the European teams is a short passing play, thus keeping possession of the puck as long as possible."

While the European teams, especially the Russians, are adept at the short passing play, they have not perfected the shoot power play. Their passing pattern is perfect but they do not know what to do once they get over the opposition blueline. They still limit their attack to the point-to-point system in brawn, they go back to reorganize, he said.

"This was exemplified in Moscow in the final game between the Kelowna Packers and the Russian all-star team, which the Packers won 5-1," Mr. Dudley said.

"Coach Jack O'Reilly of the Packers had studied the Russian style of play, including the passing, when they had a near-perfect advantage. He coached the Packers in the short-passing game as a penalty-killing weapon — and it worked."

Mr. Dudley was asked if the CAHA's policy in sending hockey experts to study overseas representative clubs with a view to suggesting strengthening possible weak spots would apply to the McFarlands. He replied, "Mr. Lobel and I have not given that much thought as yet."

"This is not a popular move with the hockey people we asked," he said. "We wanted to send Sid Smith to Kelowna, but the Whitby star changed his mind at the last minute. Jack McKenzie did go, but the job was not a popular one with him.

His personal opinion was that the Macs could stand a couple of additions. "With these," he said, "I think you have a team good enough to win the world championship."

Asked about Canadian representation at the 1960 Olympics the CAHA secretary-manager said nothing definite has been done as yet regarding selection.

"After all the newspaper talk about the Whitby Dunlops, Mr. Bialt has decided to withdraw the world championships from Olympic competition. The latter three applications, then for, Kitchener, Kelowna and Fort William," he said.

The CAHA, he said, did not look with favor on combined teams as has been suggested by certain quarters recently. It is recalled that Blair at one time suggested combining his "amateurs" with those of the Kitchener Dutchmen, and on another occasion joining forces with Sammy Pollock's Hull-Ottawa Canadiens.

"It would mean the breaking up of two teams so that selected players could be coached properly and weld-ed into an effective whole. We did not feel this could be done satisfactorily," he said.

Terry Brennan

Notre Dame Football Coach Said Fired Without Reason

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Terry Brennan, Notre Dame's sixth football coach since the death of Knute Rockne in 1931, was fired Sunday night.

No definite reason was given for the dismissal other than the action had been recommended to Rev. Theodore M. Hesburgh, CSC president of Notre Dame, by the faculty board in control of athletics.

Father Hesburgh, who said he accepted the boards recommendation "with regret," however, gave no indication who would succeed the 30-year-old former All-American as head coach would be named in the very near future.

The Associated Press, however, learned that Joe Kuharich, who played for the Irish from 1935-37 and was freshman coach in 1938, will take over. Kuharich, a native of South Bend, is currently head coach of the professional Washington Redskins with whom he succeeded in a five-year contract.

Kuharich could not be reached for comment but George Preston Marshall, owner of the Redskins, said, "I don't know anything about it—I ought to know something in the morning."

Terry in 1954, Brennan, then only 25, was named to succeed Frank Leahy who resigned for reasons given as ill health. Leahy quit with a record of 87-11-4 in second only to Rockne's 105-12-5.

Colts Need Best Effort to Beat Giants

BALTIMORE (AP) — Coach Weeb Ewbank thinks his Baltimore Colts will need their "best effort of the year" to beat New York Giants in the National Football League's championship game next Sunday.

Ewbank and the rest of his staff, along with Colt owner Carroll Rosenbloom and Gen. Mgr. Don Kellett, were in New York's Yankee Stadium Sunday to watch the Giants smash Cleveland Browns 10-6 to win the eastern conference crown.

Especially impressed was Ewbank said.

Kellett said he had never "seen a team with as much desire" as the Giants.

The loss to the Giants was the only "pressure" game dropped by the Colts this season. The others two losses in their 9-2 record were to Los Angeles and San Francisco in the final two weeks of the regular season after they already had clinched the western conference title.

Canadiens Pour At Boston Hockey Tea Party

Add Brawlers to Hawk Victims To Stretch Lead to Eleven; Leafs Tie, Beaten by Rangers

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

There's a growing feeling in National Hockey League should That four of the other five NHL clubs could battle each other for a chance to meet Montreal in the Stanley Cup finals and Canadiens would be spared the boring chore of proving their obvious superiority.

They did it twice on the week-end but it's becoming apparent they find it difficult to maintain much interest in the task after two periods.

Saturday they whipped Chicago Black Hawks 4-1 in Montreal. Dickie Moore got goals in the first and the other in the second and Sunday they clubbed Boston Bruins 5-0 in Boston, again getting three in the first and two in the second.

CANADIENS 10 POINTS AHEAD

The two wins put Canadiens 10 points ahead of Detroit Red Wings—who lead the "B" section of the league.

Red Wings, who haven't been able to do any better than tie Montreal this season, lost their only weekend game 4-2 to Chicago a game which ended with the dismaying sight of Wings' Gordie Howe putting the puck in his own net.

Toronto Maple Leafs failed in their attempt to climb out of the cellar—tying Boston 2-2 Saturday but succumbing 5-1 to New York Rangers Sunday. Rangers now are tied with Boston for third.

Montreal is unbeaten over 10 games and Sunday night just about put paid to hopes that the nine-check Bruins might continue to provide the all-conquering Habs with their only real league opposition.

Marcel Pronovost and Bonin started things off with his goal at 3:33 and Dickie Moore and Bernie Geoffrion raised it to 3-0 by the end of the first. Jean Beliveau and Ralph Backstrom rounded out Bruins' humiliation in the second.

THE WANDERING WONDER

Bruins had 33 shots at Jacques Plante but the wandering wonder, who occasionally looked like the closest thing to a weak link in Canadiens armour earlier this season, was equal to everything.

It was Plante's fifth shutout and gives him a big lead on his fourth consecutive Vezina Trophy for the league's least scored-upon netminder.

Saturday it was the same old story of overwhelming Canadiens power, this time led by Maurice Richard. Richard got two goals, both of them in the second period, and assisted on an earlier one scored by Moore. Andre Pronovost scored the first Montreal goal of the night.

Ron Murphy got Hawks' lone counter.

In Chicago Sunday, rookie centre Ken Wharram had his biggest night this season with a hat-trick—Chicago's first — and two assists.

The former American Hockey League star gave Hawks a 1-0 first period lead but Detroit's rookie Charlie Burns countered that with a second-period goal.

SAWCHUK FULLBACK

In the third, Chicago's Eric Nesterenko scored on Wharram's relay to put Hawks up again but Warren Godfrey put Detroit back in the game. Then big Ernest Sawchuk, who looked after the lead at 18:38 and with a minute to go Sid Abel sent defenceman Terry Sawchuk from the Red Wings nets.

That set the stage for Howe's gaffe. The classic right winger scrambled to get control of a rebound Detroit net, but the puck inexplicably rolled away and Howe tied into the corner. The goal was given to Chicago's Earl Balfour.

In Toronto Saturday George Armstrong scored to put Leafs up 1-0 in the first and Ron Stewart beat Ed Giacomin in the second but one minute and 56 seconds later Rangers were back in front. Boston's Guy Gendron cut it to 2-1 and in the third period Andy Bathgate scored a pair. Bruins' Don McKenney tied it for good and all.

In Sunday's game Rangers' Andy Sullivan got New York's first and Hank Ciesla made it 2-0 before the period was done. Then in the second Barry Cullen scored for Leafs but before the period was done Bill Gadsby, Larry Popein and Andy Hebenton scored for New York.

Irish Blank Biltmores 5-0; Marlies Win

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Toronto St. Michael's Majors have climbed to OHA Junior A second spot and look set to stay there.

Led by three goals from right winger Bob Leiter they stormed to a 5-0 win over Guelph Biltmores Sunday to take a five-point lead over third - place Peterborough Petes. Toronto Marlboros gave 1,764 Toronto fans another win in the other half of Sunday's double-header, edging Barrie Flyers 3-2.

In other weekend action Fred Hills scored four goals Saturday to pace St. Catharines TeePees to a 8-4 win over Hamilton Cubs. It was the league-leading TeePees' 21st win.

Cesare Maniago picked up his second shutout of the season in the St. Michael's net as he kicked out 25 Guelph shots. Les Kozak and Dave Chambers scored the other Majors' goals.

COME FROM BEHIND

Marlboros were behind 1-0 after the first period but found the Barrie net twice in the second.

Dan Patrick's opening goal for Barrie, Gaetan Secours fired the other Flyers' marker.

Bob Davidson, Jim Murchis and Don Cornett scored one apiece for Marlboros.

TeePees had trouble keeping their margin over Hamilton Cubs in the final period as Stu McNeil scored twice for Cubs to cut the TeePee lead.

Hills, former star of Edmonton Oil Kings of the Western Junior League, scored his first for St. Catharines in the opening period to break a Hamilton 1-0 lead. He netted a pair in the second and another the fourth in the final period.

Chuck Maki and Ray Cullen rounded out the TeePee scoring.

Gary Bergman and Blair Constantine added singles to McNeil's pair for Cubs.

Industrial Hockey League Results

Sports Centre and Hillcrest Wreckers held onto their early two points in the Industrial Hockey League standing over the weekend with another pair of victories.

Sports Centre downed Circle TV by a 6-4 score while Hillcrest Wreckers handed Bell Telephone a 6-1 shellack.

Games for the next two weeks-ends have been set back due to the Christmas and New Year holidays. The schedule will re-sume on January 4th with Sports Centre TV meeting Bell Telephone while Hillcrest and Sports Centre will clash for the league lead on that date.

Four Horses Stand Out in Derby Crop

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—The crop of prospective Kentucky Derby horses is larger than usual but four stand out at this time, says H. A. (Jimmy) Jones.

Jones, who trains Calumet Farm stars at Citation, Ponder, Gen. Duke, Iron Liege and Tim Tam says the best he has seen are Christopher T. Chenery's "first Landing," and Thomas Jr.'s Tomy Lee. Brookfield Farm's intentionally and Brookmeade Stable's Sword Dancer.

"As for the others," Jones said, "you can take all of them, put 'em in a bag and shake 'em up. Take the first one that comes out."

And what about Calumet? "We're walking," Jones replied. "Haven't got a thing. There's one—Numo—we might have in the Preakness. Depending on how he develops, but we haven't got a thing in sight."

Heads Syndicate To Purchase Lion Franchise

VANCOUVER (CP)— General manager Coley Hall of the Western Hockey League Vancouver Canucks says he heads a six-man syndicate which will make a bid for the British Columbia Lions' professional football franchise is offered for sale.

His statement came two days after Nat Bailey, president of Vancouver Mounties of the Pacific Coast Baseball League, said he was the "front man" of a local syndicate which hopes to purchase the city-owned team and convert it to private ownership.

Hall would not disclose names of those in his private syndicate but said they are all Vancouver businessmen.

One of the chief complaints with the Lions has been their operational setup, with 28 directors and scattered committees through leading Canada in attendance and gate receipts, Lions have finished last twice and 4th three times in the five-team Western Interprovincial Football Union.

RUSSIANS PLAN

96,100,000,000 ($24,025,000,000) as compared with a 1958 defence appropriation of 86,900,000,000 rubles.

(The actual figure for Soviet defence spending is far greater than that given for the defence appropriation but cannot be estimated. This is because much of the Kremlin's military expenditure is concealed under such budget headings as capital investment, scientific research and educational appropriations.

(Western economists also consider it likely that the prices charged the ministry of defence for war materials produced in state factories are listed at much below the actual cost of production, with the resultant factory profits covered out of special appropriations.)

Zverev's speech also included a new attack on the "anti-party" group—former premiers Malenkov and Bulganin, former foreign ministers Molotov and Shepilov and economic chief Lazar Kaganovich.

Premier Nikita Khrushchev was on hand for the session, along with other members of the presidium which acts for the Supreme Soviet when it is not meeting.

Atlas Launching Known Before By Only 35 Men

WASHINGTON (CP) — Fear that an unannounced satellite launching could accidentally touch off nuclear war is expressed in a report drafted by a congressional committee's staff.

The report was prepared before the launching of the new Atlas satellite — a plan known beforehand to only 35 men.

But George J. Feldman, staff director for the House of Representatives' special committee on astronautics and space exploration, said Saturday:

"The launching of Atlas gives particular moment to the report. The danger is clear and present, as the committee staff pointed out."

The report posed this question: What if Russia or the U. S. mistakes an unannounced satellite launching for a war missile and fires off a counter-attack?

It also recommended an answer: Require advance filing of satellite flight plans.

Before the Atlas took off even persons in the blockhouse thought it was to be another test of its quadruple as an intercontinental ballistic missile. The report said:

"The technically advanced nations could some day obliterate themselves — not for any real cause, but purely through accident — by throwing the automatic war switch in the mistaken belief that an attack is being made. Conversely, the lack of flight plans might mean inability to protect oneself if a real attack occurs."

Ontario Farmers May Join West In Plea for Aid

GUELPH (CP)—The Ontario Farmers' Union may participate in a proposed delegation to Ottawa urging more government consideration for agriculture, President Gordon Hill says.

The annual meeting of the Interprovincial Farm Union Council in Winnipeg Dec. 16-17 studied plans for a large delegation in support of a demand or deficiency payments on all agricultural products.

Farm unions in the western provinces have been considering a mass delegation in support of deficiency payments for grain.

Mr. Hill, in a statement, said if the points of references are broadened to include all agricultural products, Ontario farmers would participate.

He said recent increases in freight rates and farm equipment prices have added to the cost-price-squeeze, which, coupled with falling farm prices, has placed Canadian agriculture "in a very shaky position."

"Lower prices for eggs, dairy products, soya beans and other cash crops, fruit and vegetables, hogs and poultry, demand government action which has been sadly lacking to date," he said.

Gross National Product Higher Due Prices' Rise

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's gross national product—value of goods and services produced—likely will total about $32,000,000,000 this year, a rise of two per cent over 1957, the bureau of statistics estimated today.

The small rise, compared with a post-war annual average of about four per cent, would be entirely due to increases in prices, the bureau said in a preliminary report dealing mainly with changes in the June-October period. Volume of production was expected to remain unchanged for the second consecutive year.

The gross national product is a key indicator of the state of the country's economic health. Federal officials have forecast a rise for 1959, perhaps of four per cent, boosting national production to $33,300,000,000.

Some indications of a step-up were shown in the third quarter, when national production rose to an annual rate of $32,388,000,000, up one-half of one per cent from the second quarter annual rate of $32,176,000,000.

BOOST STOCKPILES

This latest increase reflects a small advance in production volume, the bureau said. Detected in the third quarter was a resumption of business stockpiling of goods instead of reducing stockpiles as occurred in earlier periods.

Other segments of the indicator showed little change. Spending by governments and consumers showed only a minor rise. Labor income remained fairly steady while corporation profits increased three per cent, before taxes.

For the year as a whole, the trend was one of declining business spending on industrial expansion and on stockpiling of goods, offset by higher spending by consumers and governments and an upswing in house construction.

WAGES INCREASE

In the July-September period wages and other labor income increased to an annual rate of 167,136,00,000 compared with $16,048,000,000 in the similar period last year.

But corporation profits before taxes eased to $2,280,000,000 from $2,420,000,000. Net farm income climbed to $1,200,000,00 from $1,92,000,000.

National income increased to $24,744,000,000 from $24,152,000,000.

These developments pushed the gross national product to a third-quarter annual rate of $32,388,000,000 from 31,680,000,000 in the similar period last year.

For the year as a whole the gross national product totalled $31,443,000,000 in 1957. The bureau's expectation that there would be no rise in volume of production this year for the second successive year compared with volume increases of seven per cent in 1956 and nine per cent in 1955.

Publishers Stand Pat

NEW YORK (AP)—Publishers of nine closed New York city newspaper have agreed to stand pat on their pre-walkout wage offer to striking deliverymen.

The publishers decided at a meeting Sunday to present their wage offer of $7 a week spread over two years when joint negotiations resume today. The offer includes fringe benefits.

Before meeting this afternoon with the publishers, the striking Newspaper and Mail Deliverers Union had talks scheduled with federal mediators.

The $7 offer has been turned down once by the union's membership. At a second membership meeting, the union voted not to reconsider the offer.

The deliverers have termed the wage offer unacceptable only if the work week is reduced to at least 37 hours from 40, also spread over two years. It also has asked an extra holiday.

The basic wage for deliverers under a contract which expired Dec. 7 was $103.82 a week.

Truck Carrying Bottled Gas Blows Up, Four Killed

160, Mostly Spectators, Injured Near Texas Town

EXPLOSION SCENE

An explosion and fire left a two-storey brick and wood tenement building in east-end Montreal a pile of smoking ruins in which at least two children perished. Firemen probe the rubble for more bodies after four persons were reported missing. Cause of the explosion was not known. (CP Wirephoto).

BROWNFIELD, Tex. (AP) — Four men perished when a truck carrying bottled gas blew up Monday night in a shattering eruption of shooting flames and flying steel.

An estimated 160 persons, most of them spectators, suffered wounds and burns, and about 45 remained in hospital today.

"The whole sky seemed to be on fire," a witness exclaimed.

The community of 7,000 turned out to help the wounded and the burned. Rev. James Tidwell, a Methodist minister, called it "the most terrible disaster and sight I ever saw."

The fire followed a collision of a pickup truck and a gas transport truck at the southwest edge of this west Texas city.

The accident started a fire in the overturned cab of the truck transport truck. About 20 firemen were at the scene, surrounded by a small group of spectators. Several hundred other spectators had passed the other side on the highway.

Phillip Thompson, a volunteer fireman, said:

"There was a terrific explosion. The concussion knocked me out but I came to right away. There was a terrible roar and I had to run—there seemed to be on fire.

"Animal fleas are too weak.

"These days I get most of the fleas from what I pillage in the land.

"Ideally, we should have about 20 in reserve—now we have none."

Flea Circus Replacements Hard to Find

LONDON (Reuters) — Alfred Testo, 80-year-old master of a flea circus, has appealed to the public to maintain the supply of performers he needs to keep his show on the road.

He said Monday night he is willing to pay two shillings a flea to keep his circus going in these hygienic times.

"What's bling me," he said, "is this hygiene lark.

"What with chemicals, sprays, soap powders and disinfectants a flea hasn't got a dog's chance.

"In the old days when there were plenty of thatched buildings with lots of wooden beams and the vacuum cleaner was a novelty, there was never any problem at all in getting fleas at sixpence a time.

"Now business is—lousy.

"Last year we put the price up to a shilling but supplies were so short we are now up to two shillings—but only for human or horse fleas.

"Animal fleas are too weak.

"These days I get most of my fleas from what I pillage in the land.

"Ideally, we should have about 20 in reserve—now we have none."

Gas Company Seeking Cause Of 4-Death Blast

MONTREAL (CP) — Quebec Natural Gas Corporation officials today continued an investigation to determine the cause of an explosion that ripped an east-end tenement housing two families of Polish immigrants, killing four persons Monday.

Three others were sent to hospital and two were released after treatment. One child, a woman described in "serious" condition, with burns over 35 per cent of her body.

A corporation spokesman said Monday that no leaks in the main gas had been found but work crews were still searching the debris of the two-storey brick and wood building.

WALLS BLOWN OUT

The blast pushed out the walls of the structure, showering rubble and flames in all directions. The cement-block wall of an adjoining single-dwelling was smashed. Two parked cars were damaged, one nearly buried by the wreckage.

Fifty firemen using five pieces of equipment and three streams of water prevented flames that followed the blast from spreading to nearby structures.

Civil defence officials identified the dead as Jan Raczkowski, 42, his daughters, Nellie, 5, and Josepha, 4, and Lucie Gorlaczyk, 2.

LIST OF INJURED

Mrs. Raczkowski, 37, was the most severely injured and burned. Mrs. Gorslaczyk suffered her six-year - old son Henry were treated in hospital and released. Both suffered shock.

Two boys of the Raczkowski family, aged 11 and 12, were at school at the time of the blast.

The Raczkowski family lived on the building's ground floor, and the Gorslaczyks upstairs. One family lived here from Poland only recently and the other some time earlier.

Christmas Party Fraud Charged

TORONTO (CP) — Police said today two men, who set up an office in a downtown Bay Street building, collected cash and gifts for a Christmas party for children and members of the Canadian Merchant Marine Veterans Association, were arrested Monday on charges of defrauding the public.

Police said the men arrested after police checked a College Street hall — where the party was supposed to be held — and found no arrangements had been made. Police were called by parents of children who showed up and found no party was to be held.

Police went to the office of the association and found it occupied by businessmen. Scattered about the floor were 57 empty wine bottles.

Police said there is no such organization as the Canadian Merchant Marine Veterans Association.

Forecasters Predict Continuing Cold Weather and White Christmas

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Most Canadians can look forward to a white Christmas. With plenty of snow on the ground, the weather prediction continuing cold weather and little chance of a thaw by Thursday.

This month will be one of the coldest in years with below-normal temperatures in most provinces and heavier-than-usual snowfalls.

Although temperatures have climbed to near normal in the last few days, forecasters don't expect the warming trend will rob the Christmas scene of its traditional winter-white.

However, there are exceptions and Calgary expects a green festive season. The southern Alberta city has only a few patches of dirty snow on the ground.

The odds are against a white Christmas for the Vancouver area. Saskatchewan and Manitoba both expect to have lots of snow by the end of the week.

Ontario's weather is expected to be cold but not severe. It will be about normal for this time of year. Readings have been well below the average during the last few weeks.

Afternoon temperatures for the next few days in Southern Ontario will probably be in the low 20s and between 15 and 20 at night. Some snow is likely to thaw but not much. Eastern Ontario appears to be in for colder weather and its deep snow cover will be retained over the Christmas period.

Cold weather is expected to continue in Quebec and prospects also are good for a white Christmas in the Maritimes.

NICKEL WORKERS ACCEPT TERMS OF SETTLEMENT

Pickets Withdrawn At Inco Plant

SUDBURY (CP) — The International Nickel Company's mines and smelter plant were free of union picket lines today for the first time since Sept. 24.

Pickets disbanded Monday night shortly after the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers tinds announced that a membership vote had overwhelmingly approved terms of a strike-settling agreement.

President Mike Solski of Local 598 said the vote, here and at Port Colborne refinery, was 7,429 to 701 in favor of signing a contract on the terms reached at government - sponsored talks in Toronto last week.

APPROVE NEW DUES

The question of an increase in monthly union dues to $1.50 from $2.50 was also supported, he said, with 5,571 favoring it and 2,085 opposed.

Even as the all-day voting went on, crews were clearing the Inco buildings of gloves, dust masks, machines, refrigerators, food and other equipment brought here during the strike. The equipment had been used by company maintenance crews and is to be resold to district stores at cut rates.

Inco executives held talks on the reopening of operations. Some employees will start work Sunday and full production men won't return until Jan. 2.

The new contract provides a wage increase of one per cent

Way Yule Drinkers Treated Differs Widely Across Canada

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

If you're in Calgary Christmas Eve New Year's Eve and you have one for the road — or two or maybe three—don't try to drive your car.

Go to the nearest phone and call the law. A policeman will drop round and drive you home. No charge—official.

Lethbridge, Medicine Hat and Quebec City will operate a similar service on both days. Off-duty policemen volunteer to get you safely home. In Quebec there's someone sober to leave the keys with, okay otherwise, the policeman takes them with him and they can be picked up next day at the station.

But if you're in Edmonton Christmas or New Year's Eve, thing will be a little different. Police in the Alberta capital, among those canvassed in a Canadian Press survey of municipal police plans for holiday law enforcement, against drunken drivers—say they're "not going into the taxi business."

If there are any rides, they'll be "you take one, I'll take the" spokesman added.

At Halifax, the police traffic division said the only free rides they have plans for are to the Santa Claus parade.

The RCMP, which policies all provincial highways in New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island, Nova Scotia and Newfoundland, said there will be no leniency for drunken drivers.

Votes Endorsing Strike Action Will Affect 12,000 Workers

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Votes endorsing strike action which would affect more than 12,000 workers in five Ontario centres were announced today.

The United Auto Workers of America (CLC) said Ford of Canada employees at Windsor and Oakville cast an overwhelmingly unanimous vote in favor of a strike to back up demands which are now in the negotiation stage.

UAW officials said workers at Massey-Ferguson Limited plants in Toronto, Brantford and Woodstock voted 94.3 per cent in favor of a walkout if the company refuses to implement proposals presented to a union-approved conciliation board.

The Ford dispute, involving 5,500, is believed to be near settlement. Negotiators are reported to have agreed on a general wage increase of six cents an hour or 2½ per cent, whichever is greater in each year of a three-year contract.

This wage boost, plus improved pensions and supplementary employment benefits, would match an agreement reached earlier this month by the UAW and General Motors of Canada.

POPE JOHN CALLS FOR UNITY, PEACE IN YULE MESSAGE

'Night Is Darkening' Requiring Vigilance

VATICAN CITY (CP) — Pope John XXIII, in his first Christmas address, called today for unity and peace. But he said his plea is not likely to be heard in Communist lands.

The 77-year-old supreme ruler of the Roman Catholic Church asked men of faith to put aside military and violent thoughts.

Then he warned them to be vigilant "in the night that is darkening" and ready to defend Christian principles against the "insidious cunning of the enemies of God."

The Pope paid high tribute to his predecessor Pope Pius XII, whose death his reign delivered 19 Christmas messages in which he tirelessly pleaded for peace and Christian unity.

The Pope's message was in reply to traditional Christmas greetings presented by Eugene Cardinal Tisserant, dean of the Sacred College of Cardinals.

The Pope said that the lack of good will in following God's call is "the most terrible problem of human history and of the lives of individual men and peoples."

In a 15,000-word speech, the pontiff referred to the "atheist and materialistic creation" in which some nations find themselves.

The pontiff spoke of the "slavery for individuals and the masses, the slavery of hatred, slavery of work."

He said that in several areas of the world new towers of Babel are being erected "and they will soon reach the first one."

'MENACING RUIN'

The Pope continued:

"But for many the illusion is great and the ruin is menacing. Only unity and openness in strengthening the apostolate of truth and of true human and Christian brotherhood will be able to halt the grave perils overhanging mankind."

The Pope said the split unity of Christ's people is a source of disturbance and prejudice.

"The sadness of this painful fact does not prevent, we hope, but helps to maintain our loving invitation to those of our dear separated brethren who call on Christ's name and read His holy books and blessed gospels, ready and sensible to the inspirations of religious piety and beneficient and paternal charity."

In his references to the situation of the Church behind the Iron Curtain he recalled that he spoke recently of the "persecution" in China. The pope

Ford Workers Vote to Strike If Necessary

TORONTO (CP) — Officials of Ford Motor Company of Canada and auto union leaders of America CLC resumed negotiations today following an employees' vote in favor, if necessary, to back up contract demands.

Employees at Ford plants in Oakville, Windsor and Ontario at Toronto Suburb, voted overwhelmingly in favor of a strike if talks should break down.

Tom McLean, assistant Canadian director of the union, said "I am hoping we have a settlement. We'll know better today."

Huron, Destroyer Escort Damaged By Heavy Winds

Ship 600 Miles off N.S. Coast in No Danger

HALIFAX (CP) — Two naval ships and an RCAF plane sped to the side of the damaged Canadian destroyer Huron in the western Atlantic today.

The Huron, buckling head winds and heavy seas, was flooded in one compartment but Atlantic fleet headquarters here said she was in no danger.

The destroyer carries a skeleton crew of 150 men under Cmdr. William Howe of Fort William, Ont., son of Ernest Liberal minister C. D. Howe.

Cmdr. Howe radioed that his ship was flooded in the fore peak but other compartments were dry. She was vibrating badly and slowed to a speed of nine knots.

600 MILES FROM HALIFAX

The navy ordered the destroyer Saguenay out of port to go to the Huron's side. She left here at 2 a.m. AST. The Huron's position was given as about 600 miles east of Halifax.

Later the frigate Buckingham was diverted from exercises off the coast to go to the Huron. She was about 200 miles away and was expected to reach the damaged destroyer first.

The RCAF sent a maritime patrol plane from Greenwood, N.S., to help locate the vessels and direct the rendezvous.

The Saguenay's crew was turned up in the middle of the night. About 200 were on board when the call came. Most normally carries about 290.

Early today the Saguenay was making 24 knots with a following wind and sea. At this rate she was expected to reach the Huron early Wednesday morning. The Buckingham, a sister ship, was expected to get there a few hours earlier.

Cmdr. Howe reported he thought the heavy weather had loosened a plate in the Huron's hull. She was damaged last month during NATO naval manoeuvres in the Mediterranean and given temporary repairs at Gibraltar.

She left Toulon Dec. 13 and was originally due here Monday to give the crew Christmas ashore. Prospects are that they will be spending it aboard the Saguenay and will spend at least part of Christmas at sea.

The Huron ran into a storm soon after leaving Toulon. Another office said another intense storm centered off the Azores Dec. 17 with roaring gales in the western Atlantic. Pressure at the storm centre was down to 27.47 inches, an abnormally low reading.

HEAVY WINDS AND SEAS

The Huron's skipper reported head winds gusting to 70 miles an hour and heavy seas. However the gale moderated slightly today and the ship was making good time at nine knots from eight.

The Huron's crew went to work to close bulkheads and making other preparations for trouble. The navy said there were "no precautionary measures." The crew of 150 said her men were "not in danger."

"The actions being taken are the precautions normally dictated by the severe weather conditions prevailing along the ship's course."

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP)— A minister wasn't able to have Santa Claus tossed in jail.

Santa, or Joe B. Hyden as he is known outside his costume, is circulating a petition calling for repeal of Oklahoma's prohibition law.

Rev. W. E. Cook, a Baptist, said it didn't seem right to him for Santa to be looking for signatures boosting booze. Police told the pastor Monday he would have to find a law that Santa was violating a specific statute before he could sign a complaint.

The preacher said he would look for one today.

A justice official said the committee will look first at the possibility of establishing a prison farm in the vicinity of Springhill, N.S., where an October mine disaster claimed 75 lives and threatened to make a ghost town of the place.

The committee will work its way west to British Columbia, studying federal and provincial institutions all along the way with a view to recommending a vast program of penal reform.

Some of the Scandinavian countries also are on the committee's itinerary.

TAKE ABOUT YEAR

An official estimated the travelling will take about six months and the committee will study the justice's recommendations, based on its observations and evidence, for about six almost that much more time.

Blue Jay Drinkers Treated Differs Widely Across Canada

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

If you're in Calgary Christmas Eve New Year's Eve and you have one for the road — or two or maybe three—don't try to drive your car.

Go to the nearest phone and call the law. A policeman will drop round and drive you home. No charge—official.

Lethbridge, Medicine Hat and Quebec City will operate a similar service on both days. Off-duty policemen volunteer to get you safely home. In Quebec there's someone sober to leave the keys with, okay otherwise, the policeman takes them with him and they can be picked up next day at the station.

But if you're in Edmonton Christmas or New Year's Eve, thing will be a little different. Police in the Alberta capital, among those canvassed in a Canadian Press survey of municipal police plans for holiday law enforcement against drunken drivers—say they're "not going into the taxi business."

If there are any rides, they'll be "you take one, I'll take the" spokesman added.

At Halifax, the police traffic division said the only free rides they have plans for are to the Santa Claus parade.

The RCMP, which policies all provincial highways in New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island, Nova Scotia and Newfoundland, said there will be no leniency for drunken drivers.

Pope John Calls For Unity, Peace In Yule Message

'Night Is Darkening' Requiring Vigilance

VATICAN CITY (CP) — Pope John XXIII, in his first Christmas address, called today for unity and peace. But he said his plea is not likely to be heard in Communist lands.

The 77-year-old supreme ruler of the Roman Catholic Church asked men of faith to put aside military and violent thoughts.

Then he warned them to be vigilant "in the night that is darkening" and ready to defend Christian principles against the "insidious cunning of the enemies of God."

The Pope paid high tribute to his predecessor Pope Pius XII, whose death his reign delivered 19 Christmas messages in which he tirelessly pleaded for peace and Christian unity.

The Pope's message was in reply to traditional Christmas greetings presented by Eugene Cardinal Tisserant, dean of the Sacred College of Cardinals.

The Pope said that the lack of good will in following God's call is "the most terrible problem of human history and of the lives of individual men and peoples."

In a 15,000-word speech, the pontiff referred to the "atheist and materialistic creation" in which some nations find themselves.

The pontiff spoke of the "slavery for individuals and the masses, the slavery of hatred, slavery of work."

He said that in several areas of the world new towers of Babel are being erected "and they will soon reach the first one."

'MENACING RUIN'

The Pope continued:

"But for many the illusion is great and the ruin is menacing. Only unity and openness in strengthening the apostolate of truth and of true human and Christian brotherhood will be able to halt the grave perils overhanging mankind."

The Pope said the split unity of Christ's people is a source of disturbance and prejudice.

"The sadness of this painful fact does not prevent, we hope, but helps to maintain our loving invitation to those of our dear separated brethren who call on Christ's name and read His holy books and blessed gospels, ready and sensible to the inspirations of religious piety and beneficient and paternal charity."

In his references to the situation of the Church behind the Iron Curtain he recalled that he spoke recently of the "persecution" in China. The pope

Ford Workers Vote to Strike If Necessary

TORONTO (CP) — Officials of Ford Motor Company of Canada and auto union leaders of America CLC resumed negotiations today following an employees' vote in favor, if necessary, to back up contract demands.

Employees at Ford plants in Oakville, Windsor and Ontario at Toronto Suburb, voted overwhelmingly in favor of a strike if talks should break down.

Tom McLean, assistant Canadian director of the union, said "I am hoping we have a settlement. We'll know better today."

City Blessed by Prosperity, Nagged by Fear, Is West Berlin

BERLIN (AP) — Children singing carols in banks instead of streets . . . minks and diamond studs at gay holiday parties and even Communist East . . . a city blessed by prosperity and nagged by fear.

This is West Berlin at Christmas time—five months and four days before the Russian ultimatum for the withdrawal of Allied troops expires.

"We West Berliners are no heroes," says Karl-Heinz Hagen, editor of the newspaper Telegraf. "But we will keep our nerve. There is no other choice."

So the 2,360,000 West Berliners celebrate Christmas in their traditional way and try to forget their isolation.

Christmas trees with strings of white lights stand everywhere.

In the shadow of the bombscarred Kaiser Wilhelm Memorial Church, glittering Kurfuerstendamm is filled with shoppers with merry-makers and last-minute bargainers.

The great cinemas are showing such pictures as Francoise Sagan's Bonjour Tristesse, and Walt Disney's film of a boy and his dog, Yellow Stone.

Theatres are sold out.

In annex cafes and on the roof garden on the new Jurgen Berlin Hilton Hotel champagne sparkles. Steaming rum grog and beer are relished in the pubs and cafes in the workers districts.

Yet under the city's skin, there is a gnawing apprehension of the Russians, blockade and war.

It doesn't show plainly in the newspapers or in casual conversation. There is no panic buying and businessmen are standing firm generally. But you overhear

Glenora Ferry Cat Survives 72 Hours in Ice

PICTON, Ont. (CP) — A cat which jumped from a ferry into the Bay of Quinte last Tuesday was found alive 72 hours later with its head and front paws encircled by ice and the rest of its body encased in ice more than three inches thick.

Its front paws were frozen to a rock it apparently tried to climb. The cat is owned by Mr. and Mrs. Roy Wright of Glenora near here.

When the cat jumped from the ferry, crew members could find no trace of it. Friday the staff of a fish hatchery board a scow under its dock and called Mr. Wright, who chopped a large circle of ice around the pet and slowly chipped the ice from the cat.

He said Monday the cat "appears to be back to normal health but half of its tail is lifeless and no doubt will have to be cut off."

Chiang Will Not Seek New Term As President

TAIPEI, Formosa (Reuters) — Chiang Kai-shek, virtual ruler of Nationalist China since 1927, said today he will not seek re-election as president after his present second term expires on May 19, 1960.

The 72-year-old generalissimo, named to his first six-year term in 1948, made the announcement to the mainland recovery planning board. Most of its members are members of the national assembly, which elects the president.

Chiang, also chief of the ruling Kuomintang (Nationalist) party, told the board's annual convention that he is opposed to any proposal to amend the constitution, which sets two presidential terms as the maximum a person may serve.

"The constitution," Chiang said, "is one of our weapons of waging war against the Communists."

He added: "We cannot abandon this weapon."

Chiang also told the 1,723-member board that the Nationalists would continue their peaceful mainland as soon as dissatisfaction of the people there rumbled into a general revolt.

Expect 12,300 Calls Will Be Made on Holiday

A record-breaking volume of out-of-town calls is anticipated throughout Bell Telephone's territory in Ontario and Quebec during the Christmas season starting at 6 p.m. Dec. 24.

It is expected that a total of 12,300 extra long distance centres will originate in Belleville on Christmas Eve and Christmas Day — an increase of 958 calls over the same period last year, according to Bell G.W. Proctor, Bell Telephone manager here.

A total of 10,000 calls are expected on New Year's Eve and New Year's Day — an increase of 853 over the same period a year ago.

Christmas calling follows a different pattern from that on any other day in the year, as more long distance calls are made to and from smaller communities than on business days. Although it is expected that calls to nearby cities should be completed in the usual delays may be encountered over the longer distance calls to distant places.

Mr. Proctor offered the following tips to avoid delays and speed up handling of calls: Call at the number eliminates the time required to contact "information" in a distant city. If you know that the called person will be home, it's faster to place station-to-station calls. If the circuits are busy or the call is not answered the first time, try again yourself rather than ask the operator to check at intervals and report to you. Call back at the time she suggests and if she has given you information about the route the call should take, pass the details on to the new operator.

Yuletide greetings telephoned overseas are expected in the same volume as last year, when more than 30,000 calls were handled by the overseas centre in Montreal during the three-day period. Christmas Eve, Christmas Day and Boxing Day, Mr. Proctor reports.

Advance appointments for Christmas overseas calls have been received from clients in other countries. For information regarding overseas calls, a telephone call to Belleville calls the long distance operator here who connects him with the overseas operator in Montreal.

A large number of overseas calls is also expected over the New Year's holiday. For example, calls to Scotland are often requested for the popular "Hogmanay," or New Year's celebrations.

Before September 1956, all overseas conversations took place over a single telephone circuit radiotelephone circuits. Opening of the trans-Atlantic telephone cable at that time provided greatly enlarged and improved facilities. Today more than five time as many calls are handled as before the cable was placed in service.

More than four out of five overseas calls take place between this country and the British Isles, but Christmas calls have been placed to such far-away lands as India and South Africa.

National Ballet Will Be Seen in 'The Nutcracker'

The National Ballet Company of Canada will play before the biggest audience in its history tonight on CBC Folio. And the ballet it will perform, Tchaikovsky's The Nutcracker, is also likely to set some sort of record for collecting an audience that ranges from the very young to the very old.

Canada's premiere ballet company has travelled widely, and has appeared in the nation's United States as well as in Canada, and it has appeared on Canadian television before. But tonight, the National Ballet Company will be seen coast to coast for the first time since the CTV network was extended from east to coast. CFWS-TV will carry the program.

Every youngster of kindergarten age is familiar with at least one segment of the music of The Nutcracker — even Spike Jones made a recording of it for children a few years ago. As for the story — well, it's of the stuff that fairy tales are made from.

NICKEL WORKERS

Jan. 2, a two-per-cent boost Jan. 2, 1960, and three per cent Jan. 2, 1961. There are fringe benefits in which there are improvements involving increased sickness and accident insurance payments by the company.

Originally the union struck for a one-year contract providing an eight-per-cent wage boost, inco held out for a three-year deal. Two months later Inco offered a three-year pact with no increase in the first year and 4½ per cent in each of the next two. The union voted down, countering with a reduced demand of three-per-cent increase in each of the three years.

40-HOUR WEEK

The settlement includes an Inco promise to restore the 40-hour week. Before the strike, the 14,000 workers were on a curtailed 32-hour week because of an oversupply in the world nickel market.

Inco also announced it would pay workers the regular 8% Christmas bonus this year.

Settlement of the dispute means that workers are eligible for unemployment insurance payments until 1959—again, to their jobs. Thousands were expected to file applications at district halls today.

The new Marysville Yard highway depot has been recently completed by the Department of Public Works for the Ontario Department of Highways. The depot, which is a major yard in the maintenance system being developed to service the 401 Highway system, will be servicing the Trenton-Belleville bypass, Highway No. 2 from Trenton to Napanee, and Highway 502 from Marysville to Napanee..

The depot, located one mile east of Marysville, on the north side of Highway 502, houses four 5-ton snow plows, four heavy sanders, two 2-ton trucks, and two half-ton trucks. During the winter months, from November 1st to March 31st, a 26-hour highway patrol is maintained from the depot with two shifts of road crews. During summer months an eight-hour day, five days a week system will be in effect.

City Solicitor Says Board Did Not Act Illegally

TORONTO (CP) — City solicitor Wallace Angus says civic officials have signed no new contracts during the municipal election Dec. 1.

He denied reports that the outgoing board of control may have acted illegally at its last meeting in authorizing the purchase of three new cars and awarding a three-year food concession in High Park.

The reports said contracts for some items might be illegal because the Ontario Municipal Act forbids an outgoing council to make new contracts after the civic election.

Mr. Angus said the food concession contract "was approved by board of control and passed since the election but it has not yet been signed. We plan to put it before the next year's council for further approval."

Harry Rogers, city property commissioner, said the city will not obtain delivery of a new limousine for the mayor and two new cars for board of control until about Jan. 15. "No contract is signed until we get delivery."

Vacation Trip for 2 Canucks Takes Another Bad Jolt

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla.-(CP)—A southern vacation for two Canadians that started going wrong with an unscheduled prolonged grilling by authorities in Cuba took another unpleasant jolt Monday when one was injured in a traffic accident.

Don Paquette, 20 - year - old rookie defensive end with Hamilton Tiger-Cats of the Big Four football league, was taken to hospital after a car police said he was driving skipped off the road, swiped a fire hydrant and slammed into a power pole. An American passenger was killed. Paquette was charged with reckless driving and driving without a licence. He suffered cuts and bruises, but James B. Banville, 18, of Syracuse, N.Y., was killed when thrown from the car.

TELEPHONES HOME

Leslie Clark, 23-year-old machine operator who accompanied Paquette on the vacation, telephoned his mother in Niagara-on-the-Lake, Ont., Monday to say they were both "fine."

Mrs. William B. Clark said her son asked her to tell Paquette's wife and relatives that he was in hospital.

Both Paquette and Clark live in Niagara-on-the-Lake.

Mrs. Clark said her son told her he and Paquette were held for 36 hours by Cuban authorities but "were not abused in any way."

He told her he and Paquette returned from Cuba Sunday night.

The first report that the two Canadians were being held by Cuban authorities came Saturday when an American, Eugene Erkman, told a Key West, Fla., newspaper that he had been held and mistreated by Cuban police last week.

He said Paquette and Clark were still being held when he was released and ordered to leave Cuba Thursday.

In Havana, Cuban officials said the Canadians arrived Thursday by air. They were questioned on suspicion that they were on the way to join rebel leader Fidel Castro. They were released and spent Thursday night and Friday in Havana, the official report said.

Another source, however, said the Canadians were taken from the airport to Camp Columbia Army headquarters and held there Thursday night. They were ordered to leave Cuba within 48 hours, the sources said.

The five Socialist members of the previous cabinet, including Premier Willem Drees, resigned 12 days ago after being defeated in Parliament on new taxation proposals.

Russian and U.S. Budgets Cannot Be Compared

By C. YATES McDANIEL

WASHINGTON (AP) — Trying to compare Russian and United States budgets is about like comparing apples and oranges and expecting to get an answer in terms of a single fruit.

The Soviet budget for the year 1960, announced in Moscow today, placed the total of Russian spending just under $177,000,000,000. Spending by the U.S. government for the fiscal year 1959, which ends next June 30, will run to just under $80,000,000,000.

A simple but misleading conclusion can be reached by comparing the totals of defence spending of the two governments. The Communist leaders said they would spend $24,000,000,000 for defence purposes, or about 13½ per cent of total spending. This year the U.S. is spending nearly $41,000,000,000 — or slightly more than half of total federal spending—for defence.

UPSETS COMPARISON

But then the new Soviet budget which upsets any comparative calculations is the huge provision for capital investment to expand Soviet industrial production. That item alone amounts to about $121,000,000,000. Obviously, much of this production expansion will be devoted to strengthening the Soviet defence. Exactly how much will go for military production increases only a few people in the Kremlin know.

In the U.S., private industry undertakes most of its own expansion, getting the money from stockholders or by borrowing. Private industry pays for most of the American productive capability, whereas in the Soviet Union the government directly or indirectly owns and operates not only production but also the basic industries.

U.S. officials believe Russian military outlays are vastly underestimated in the budget presented to the Supreme Soviet. Much military money is presumed to be hidden under such headings as research, education, and capital investment.

Artist's Appeal Is Dismissed

DARWIN, Australia (Reuter) — The Darwin Supreme Court today dismissed an appeal by aboriginal artist Albert Namatjira against his conviction On. Ltd. refinery at Port Colborne on a charge of supplying liquor to a native who was a ward of the state.

The court, while dismissing Namatjira's appeal, allowed the appeal on his sentence and reduced his jail term to three months from six.

Namatjira's case had attracted wide attention because of the view that Namatjira was bound by both white man's and aboriginal laws.

While the law forbade him to give liquor to a native ward of the state, the laws of his tribe, the Arantaz, stated that on member of the tribe must share any good fortune, including any of his possessions, with any other member of the tribe.

Treat Two Men After Contact With Rabid Steer

ST. CATHARINES (CP)—Two men, one of them a St. Catharines veterinarian are undergoing treatment today following contact with a rabid animal—the first case of rabies reported in the Niagara Peninsula since the First World War.

The infected animal, a steer, was brought from Northern Ontario to a Fonthill district farm by a drover. Because the animal was infected before it was brought into the district, authorities are not worried that it will result in other animals being infected.

The steer was slaughtered by St. Catharines veterinarian Dr. L. C. Swan. However he and veterinan Cliff Dunham of Fonthill received scratches while examining the animal.

THE RELIGION OF CHILDREN

The Brantford Expositor is disturbed over a ruling by Chief Justice E. K. Williams of the Manitoba Bench. He held that a parent cannot change a child's religion after its baptism. The decision as to faith, he said, "is made once and for all" at baptism. "Most surprisingly," says the Expositor, "the official organ of the Manitoba Bar Association calls this 'a most amazing proposition'."

"If parents, as the judge asserts and no one will deny, have the authority to choose their new-born's religion, why have they not equal authority to change that religion?" asks the Expositor. "Then suppose parents baptized in one faith are converted to another faith. Have they, in that event, no power to change the religion of their minor children still in their care and baptized in the parents' original faith?"

This fiction of parents having the right, or even the ability, to choose the religion of their children may be all very well from the standpoint of practical legal questions, which is what we are discussing here, but there seems to us to be implied in the Expositor's remarks a belief that parents can, indeed, select the religion of their children in fact as well as in legal fancy.

Surely an infant can not really be said to have any religion, because it is not capable of religious beliefs. And, equally surely, except to the extent that the growing child acquires religious beliefs of its own, the parents' ability to alter the child's religion diminishes. The parents may or may not possess the legal right to alter the child's religious tag, in the legal sense, but the more the child is entitled to be considered of one religious faith the less power the parents have to alter the child's religion.

This does not mean that the parents will not exert a powerful influence on the child. Such a child, reared in one faith, might suffer considerable mental anguish if forced to conform to another but we do not see how Chief Justice Williams' ruling protects the child in any way. The parents cannot possibly supervise the parents' control over the religious observances of their children, nor do we believe there are many people who would suggest that the courts should do so, even if they could. On the other hand, there seems something unjust about the law considering a minor to be of one faith if the child has been converted to another. The difficulty here, we suggest, is that children are capable of sincere religious convictions long before they cease to be minors. Perhaps the child should be given the right to choose his or her faith at such an age as the church or his or her choice will accept a minor into membership, with the child's choice being recognized by the law.

FUR-BREEDERS EFFICIENT

It is said of the modern pork-packing plant that it processes every part of the pig except the squeal.

A desire to emulate this example of efficiency is behind the establishment by South Africans of twelve young mink from Edmonton, Alberta. The mink, ten female and two male, have reached Windhoek, the capital of South-West Africa, and will be used to start a mink breeding industry there.

South-West Africa is already in the fur-farming business. In 1956 it exported 2,800,923 karakul pelts, worth nearly $6 apiece. Canada and the United States provide the largest market for these finished pelts, which are known to us as Persian lamb.

The karakul, the dictionary tells us, is a sheep of central Asia. The mink is found on other continents but claims besides Canada, but these particular mink which have been shipped to South-West Africa are "sapphire blue," a mutation which we believe was developed in Canada.

The South-West Africa fur breeders are not merely trying to add a little diversification to their operations. The mink will be fed on the meat available from slaughtered karakul sheep.

Here in Canada some mink breeders have experienced difficulty in procuring ample supplies of mink food, because of the decline in the number of old horses available for slaughter. This resulted in some breeders moving from Ontario to Newfoundland where, if memory serves us right, it was proposed to feed the mink on whale meat. The South-West Africans, though, appear to have hit on an even more novel method of satisfying the appetite of mink.

A CHRISTMAS WISH

By EDGAR A. GUEST

Wherever there is sickness
May Santa Claus bring health;
Wherever there is poverty
May Santa Claus bring wealth;
Wherever there is weeping
May tears be unlike five way;
Wherever sadness hovers
May joy come Christmas Day.

To every heart that's aching
May peace and comfort come,
And may an outlook rosy
Supplant each outlook glum.
May friends now separated
Soon reunited be,
And every one find gladness
Upon his Christmas tree.

Thunderer on Diefenbaker

The Times of London

At 63, the prime minister of Canada, John Diefenbaker, has a bold not only on Parliament but on the hearts and minds of Canadians — he has embarked on a career that promises to rival that of the greatest Canadian prime ministers. At his present rate, indeed, only Sir Wilfrid Laurier, whose political opponent he has faded completely into the face of the Diefenbaker onslaught. He is living in semi-retirement in Quebec City home, practicing a little law, unwept and unhonored, and virtually unsung. He will be remembered as Canada's most gentlemanly prime minister.

Mr. Diefenbaker has stolen the limelight completely. Canadians as a people are not overfilled with glamour — especially in their politics — but it is the general impression that the prime minister has directed most of his appeal, and his greatest triumphs, to ordinary folk. His tests at the polls appear to bear out this impression.

Canadians are notoriously indifferent to their own history. Everybody has taken on a newfound pride in his hands, and the whole nation to be enjoying the experience. The Conservative party, aiming to be coat-tails, has climbed to undreamed-of heights; only five years ago, trade and tariff were written off the Tories as a serious factor in the nation's affairs.

The Diefenbaker story has certainly had the most spectacular in the charging fortunes of the ancient "golden boy" of the Liberal party, Mr. Lester Pearson. Mr. Pearson since he took over the party leadership from Mr. St. Laurent last January, has seen every trick in his hand humiliated at the polls, he has been outmaneuvered in Parliament with the charm and skill that made him one of the world's to come.

Mr. most respected and best-known diplomats — certainly the most celebrated Canadian.

The winning of the 1957 Nobel Peace Prize seemed to leave Canadians cooler than ever. Mr. Pearson has often been compared to Mr. Adlai Stevenson, but Canadian voters were much harder on Mr. Pearson than their American cousins on Mr. Stevenson in 1952 and 1956.

Neither Mr. Pearson's good sportsmanship in defeat nor his willingness to see it have seemed to make much impression. In the recent session of Parliament he has, for instance, worked mightily to repair his own fortunes and those of his party by speaking on every topic that came up. As opposition polls and in two by-election victories — one of them at the expense of the already hard-pressed Liberals.

Th only political uncertainty at the moment is the extent of Mr. Diefenbaker's ambition. He shows every sign of seeking to become Number One statesman in the Commonwealth: he gives the impression of a man who is in a hurry — a hurry — a man who feels he should have been prime minister for years, and now has lost time to make up.

The suspicion that Mr. Diefenbaker was anti-American verse he have subsided. He protested against American trade and tariff restrictions that were hurting Canada, but he has revised the nation's defense policies in a way that has made Canada more dependent than ever on the United States. He has encouraged the setting up to a joint committee of the Canadian Parliament and the United States Congress, thus giving Canada a voice in Congress that no other nation possesses.

Altogether, it has been a memorable year for Mr. Diefenbaker. Now, in the new year, looms destined to direct Canada's affairs for many years to come.

Mongolia Transformed

BBC London Letter

Few people have the chance to visit Outer Mongolia nowadays, but Group Captain H. St. Clair Smallwood recently spent some time in Ulan Bator, the capital, and other areas, and on his return spoke both in the BBC's "London Calling" Asia program and in a program for listeners in Britain, "The Eyewitness." He saw enormous changes he saw in this Communist country since he last visited forty years ago. "In almost every walk of life the place is unrecognizable," he said. One of the greatest changes was the way motor oil-tank lorries can be seen speeding across the Gobi Desert — before the only means of transport had been camels, camel-carts and ponies — "the animal in which the Mongol is at home."

The Mongols were fine horsemen, Captain Smallwood said, and horse-racing, which would stage a race of about 20 miles, always was a normal diversion for a Mongol pony. This was extraordinary, considering that the animals were small — barely thirteen hands — and they carried not only a rider but without a saddle that weighed several times more than a heavy saddle. Saddles and bits and stirrups alone were solid masses of metal, often silver and gold brass. The people had presented him with a pair before he left, but he had forgotten to refuse a saddle which was too weighty for air travel.

The people in the country were essentially animal husbandmen, Captain Smallwood said, taking great pride in their herds of sheep, goats and cattle, their ponies and camels — and making great profit out of them. In the past they had contribute to the honesty of the people that they had no fear of leaving their goods in the capital during the desert carrying large sums of money after selling their flocks in the capital.

Captain Smallwood had seen the first work being put into industrialization. There was a huge combined factory which dealt with the woollen sausages, and treated hides, and another important factory which made soap and biscuits. Oil had been found in the Gobi and he had been assured that it would in due course supply fifty per cent of the requirements. Coal had been most impressed by a visit to a coal mine, which he visited by a lift which went underground in rather slippery, unpleasant conditions. He had been told that part of what was really quite a modern installation was the mud, and had found it comforting.

The Mongolians, said Captain Smallwood, were very actively engaged in scientific agricultural research. No fewer than two hundred sites of coal-fields had been discovered, and some really wonderful objects had been found in ancient tombs — five gold cups and vessels — which were now in the museum at Ulan Bator.

Letter To the Editor

Should Replace Those Holding Two Jobs

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer,

While on Front Street today, my attention to the fact that a job-finding commission has been set up in our city to relieve at the local level, the rising unemployment problem. A situation inegalled this year by an increase in the number of unemployed whose benefits have expired. In Canada this year to one hundred thousand.

May I, through your paper suggest to this commission that the time has come when business, industry and labour and the husband enjoying a living wage should cause the type of help be replaced by persons qualified and who need the work.

Als, as a labor man the same money should cover this job and where male labor is permanently employed are "moonlighting," or holding two jobs. Management should see to this. I happen to know that a correction here would cause many positions to open to persons now unemployed.

I feel that you will agree with me that the duty of our society is to "Help the needy and not the greedy."

TODAY'S TALK

CROWDS

We get a better idea of a proposition in its entirety. We get a less sense of the best things about a man, for instance, if we see him only in connection with an important question. If we study only a few plausible points on one side of it, we may think that question is wrong when in reality it is not. That is a valuable lesson taught by the crowd. By studying it as a whole, you notice and yet, such as you make t h e crowd.

The organized crowd teaches sympathy, enthusiasm, t e a m work, and a sense of responsibility that is inspiring. It you want to feel your real importance, g e t into a great crowd. For, subdued and unknown, there is chance for play of the finest sentiments in your character.

But a crowd cannot make the big thing out of the small man bigger!

In the final analysis the crowd is always human, made up wholly of human beings. T h e strong man stands out because he is big. The crowd could n o t take away from him what he could. The big man is big because of his knowledge of the crowd and the crowd's desires and the crowd's feeling; whereas the small, unimportant a n d unlearning man is immediately lost in the crowd.

In your daily endeavor, let the thought that you are of the crowd, making up life itself, lead you into service for the crowd.

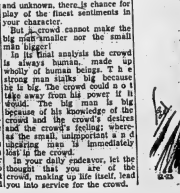
THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

One of my country nephews is a rabid music lover who makes up for living so far away from the bright lights by owning one of the finest hi-fi ensembles I ever heard, and about a hundred albums and hundreds of records of the world's greatest musicians.

One of his rare visits to the city coincided with the peak of the concert season, and besides our own fine symphony, a touring symphony, two famous singers and a distinguished pianist gave concerts during his t w o weeks with us. With each experience, he seemed more t e n down; and finally he said:

"None of this music comes up to my records."



Naturally. It takes many, many times records, to make a classical recording of a symphonic The orchestra, after rehearsing, plays ten or twenty bars over and over until they get a recording that is approved. Then, after lunch, they do the next few bars. What t h e record you buy consists of a series of these tenderings of ay set try, the choicest all strung together for your one half-hour, though it may have taken days to produce, bit by bit. Singers, pianists, instrumentalists of every kind and degree spend agonized hours doing over and over again what comes out as the ideally perfected piece for a build.

"Why," protested my nephew, "it's comedic music!"

Exactly.

Strength for The Day

GREATEST CHILD IN THE WORLD

Phillips Brooks, the great American preacher of seventy-five years ago, used to have an expression which he applied to men he saw a baby for the first time. Beaming radiantly, Brooks would cry out, "Now isn't a baby?"

He was not a hypocrite because he liked to look at a baby. Brooks himself was a bachelor. But this he knew, that in every man and woman in the world, their baby was not only the most marvelous baby in the world, but probably the most marvelous child that ever was born. They could see in the tight-shut eyes of the little fellow, and his slobbering lips a beauty which surpassed anything on earth. When he finally came to the place where he could make a few sounds, the oratory of Demosthenes was not to be compared with this miraculous achievement.

You are right about it, parents. That child of yours is the greatest child in the world. Of course called "lunacy by association".

He is to you. But there is a way in which he really does achieve that. Only those people God wants this human being to have. Only those people can be a good leader, but again he may grow up to be nothing at all distinguished. God has given him to you to be your child. And that makes him the greatest child in the world.

What a marvelous thing parenthood is! The newspapers are full of crimes, committed by people who have been wanting but starved creatures, wanting the love they should have, a n d have not had.

Yes, you are right about it. Your child or your baby is the greatest child in the world.

Canadian Artist Becomes Photographer by Accident

By JOSEPH MacSWEEN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

NEW YORK (CP) — When Canadian artist Rolof Beny bought a second-hand camera in Spain, he added a new dimension to his career.

Virtually by accident, Beny became a photographer as well as painter although he first intended the camera to be merely an aide to the brush.

"It's a trial to sketch under the hot Mediterranean sun, especially when curious children gather round," said Beny. "I thought the camera would be faster than sketching."

He was interviewed during a visit to New York—he now lives in Rome—in connection with the North American publication of his new book, The Thrones of Earth and Heaven (Longmans, Green), which amounts to a photographic tour of the Mediterranean and its historic monuments.

BOYHOOD HOBBY

"It doesn't matter aesthetically whether I use a lens or brush," said Beny, "it's like investigating another technique of expression. One doesn't exclude the other.

"It's idle to ask whether I consider myself a photographer or painter. One doesn't know from one day to the next."

Born in Medicine Hat and brought up in Lethbridge, where his parents still live, Beny won early recognition as a painter and has held some 15 shows in England, France, Italy, Greece and the United States as well as Canada.

Photography was merely a boyhood hobby and "I almost forgot it when I dedicated myself to painting at the age of 15," said Beny.

The dark-haired artist, who looks younger than his 34 years, said his apparent switch in photography has puzzled some friends and added:

"Why should a man define himself as this or that so long as he is open to impressions and learning."

"For the artist the search has to come before the goal, and each goal is the beginning of another search.

"As long as you are young enough to be aware of influences by all means be open to those influences and your selection will find something that is real to you.

NEW BOOK PLANNED

"Each artist is different. A carpenter or plumber has a pattern, but an artist has to make his own pattern, and even the need for a pattern."

Beny said he also is asked why no people are depicted in his new work but that only simply a matter of selection — "I prefer my monuments uncluttered by tourists or natives."

"My next book will be entirely about people, in the flesh and as represented by the sculptor's hand. People I've met or will meet."

Beny said he also plans a book on Canada, commissioned by his British publisher, and it is expected that here again he will give full scope to his varied talents of painting, photography and writing.

"I expect to devote some years to this work, not just some months," said Beny. "It will be Canada from every possible aspect and every geographical part."

At present he does a regular photographic diary for the British magazine the Queen and is starting a similar feature for Harper's Bazaar.

His book on the Mediterranean emerged from travels in Greece, France, Spain, Egypt, Italy and other countries during the last 10 years. It has been published in Britain and in Germany, where it has sold 25,000 copies. A French edition comes out soon.

It has a foreword by Sir Herbert Read, British author, and texts by such well-known names as Freya Stark, Jean Cocteau, Bernard Berenson, Rose Macaulay and Stephen Spender.

"The book is as refreshing as a whole as a journey through time," was the comment of the London Times.

Beny shoots with a Rolliflex. "He only carries it ever use or know how to use." Of the photographs, Sir Herbert says "they are painter's images and though they owe their precision to the prodigious skill of the photographer it is the painter that sees and the poet that relates."

Miss Truman Could Not Sing On Key--Traubel

NEW YORK (AP) — Soprano Helen Traubel says her three years as Margaret Truman's singing adviser cost her stature "in the eyes of the musical world for ever having my name connected with such a musical assistant."

In a pre-publication condensation of her memoirs appearing in the January issue of the Ladies' Home Journal, the former Metropolitan Opera star says she consented to the adviser role in 1948 when the then - president's daughter asked for help in launching a singing career, even though she found girl's voice "inexperienced and really rather bad."

"My first, greatest and unconquerable difficulty with (Margaret's) voice was simply keeping her on key," wrote Miss Traubel, adding that there simply was not enough of everything—or of anything—to make her really a concert or night-club singer.

WRONG TEMPERAMENT

"She did not have the right temperament although she was a glutton for work. The meaning of a song never escaped her. Her physical build was promising, but she lacked emotional understanding of what the tone and the projection of the music meant."

Miss Truman—now Mrs. Clifton Daniel, wife of a New York newspaper man—said she hadn't read the article, didn't plan to read it, and was glad it was over.

Miss Traubel says she took on the role of adviser but Miss Truman was neither her pupil nor her protegee, she insists.

In the fall of 1951 Miss Traubel withdrew from the arrangement. Her husband and manager, William Bass, telephoned President Truman at the White House to tell him of Miss Traubel's decision, and Truman terminated the conversation by slamming down the telephone, Miss Traubel recalls.

SHOWED IMPROVEMENT

Miss Truman's voice is a lyric soprano "with a very sweet quality," in Miss Traubel's judgment, and showed great improvement during the three years of their association.

"I think her great fault was that she could not hear herself," she comments. "She never knew what a real amateur she was—an honorable designation in our way of life. She failed because she had no gift for self-criticism."

20,000-Mile Trip Wins Her Leave to Wed

LONDON (AP) — Margaret Cator, a 17-year-old London model now has permission to marry after a 20,000-mile search trip convinced her mother she really is in love.

Margaret was discovered aboard the liner Himalaya 12 days out from England while trying to reach her boy friend in Australia.

She got as far as Singapore, spent a night in jail, then was sent home under guard on the liner Corfu.

Miss Margaret was smiling as the Corfu sailed up the Thames Monday.

She had just received a cable from boy friend Alan Wood to say he was leaving Australia for Christmas Eve to be with her again in England.

And as she stepped ashore into her mother's arms, Mrs. Cator told her:

"You've been a silly girl. But if you're really in love, it would be heartless to stand in your way."

Eisenhower's Budget Called 'Unrealistic'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Eisenhower's plan for a $71,000,000,000 balanced budget next year was described as unrealistic today by the opposition Democrats.

Eisenhower's announcement of his budget plans Monday, unprecedented in advance of the opening of Congress, said defence spending would be higher and other expenditures "consistent with the public interest" without any general increase in taxes.

His spending figure would be $2,000,000,000 below this year's estimated $79,200,000,000 total. At that level, a $12,000,0. deficit is expected this year, partly because the recession cut expected federal revenues.

PRESIDENTS TAKES HIGHER

Although no general tax increase is to be asked, Eisenhower said — again without giving details—that his budget will request higher postal rates and gasoline taxes, and some new user charges for government services.

Eisenhower originally had forecast a $50,000,000 surplus for the current year, based on lower spending, higher revenues and a postal-rate increase higher than that Congress later provided.

Without giving details for next year, Eisenhower said "reductions in total spending will be achieved in part by reason of the ending of temporary programs in agriculture, unemployment insurance and housing."

Due to expire next year are part of the soil bank program and a recession-born program of extended unemployment compensation benefits.

Senator Mike Mansfield (Dem.-Mont.), assistant Senate Democratic leader, commented that "I can't see a gas tax increase" as being in the cards and said Eisenhower will have trouble, too, in getting Congress to vote another increase in postal rates. These were raised only this year.

Five-Times-Wed Woman Denies Story of Murder Plot

VENTURA, Calif. (AP)—"It may not up a struggle at all, of course," says Mrs. Elizabeth Duncan in answer to the charge that she hired two men to kill her Canadian daughter-in-law. Those men were trying to do it, she says.

Authorities say five-times-wed Mrs. Duncan, 54, arranged the killing of pretty Olga Kupetyk Duncan, 30, because she was jealous of the nurse who married her son, a Santa Barbara lawyer.

The nurse, born near Dauphin, Man., came to California last year from Vancouver.

"I feel terrible about it," Mrs. Duncan told reporters Monday after she was told that Olga's body had been found in a shallow grave 20 miles from Ventura. "I liked her . . . and I believe she liked me."

SAYS $4,000 OFFERED

But Augustine Baldonado, 23, who led deputies to the spot where Olga Duncan was buried —perhaps alive—said Mrs. Duncan offered him and Luis Moya, 22, $6,000 to kill the woman.

"She told us she had acid and pills to do the job with," said Baldonado. "She wanted us to use the acid or her face, and said this would destroy her dental work, so she could not be identified."

They did not carry out this part of the plan, he said.

Baldonado said Moya went to Olga's Santa Barbara apartment late at night Nov. 17 and told the nurse a friend of his was sick in a car outside. The nurse, clad in a bathrobe, went to the car.

"I was lying on the floor in the back," said Baldonado. "When she opened the door, I grabbed her, and Moya hit her with the gun."

Papal Succession World's Top News Story of Year

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The papal succession was the world's top news story of 1958 in the opinion of Canadian newspaper men.

The blend of reverence, sorrow and pageantry implicit in the death Oct. 9 of Pius XII and election Oct. 28 of John XXIII ranked men's thoughts from politics, science and threats of war.

Top Canadian story was the epic of Springhill, the Oct. 23 mine upheaval that killed 75 men, but from which 19 came out alive days after hope was gone.

All 69 who voted in a Canadian Press poll of telegraph editors had the death and election in the Vatican among their choices of the year's six greatest news stories. It outranked the July 14 Iraqi coup, which touched off a new Middle East crisis, emergency of Gen. de Gaulle as ruler of France, Russian and American moon-shots, the Quemoy shelling, and Nikolai Bulganin's ousting from the ruling group in Russia.

All 69 had Springhill among their Canadian choices, mostly at the top. Some picked it also as world story. Next in line was the Progressive Conservative sweep March 31. The Vancouver Second Narrows bridge collapse June 23 with 18 dead edged out Princess Margaret's summer visit for third place, and the Nov. 11 freight rate increase, strike, rail strike — was fifth, outranking the Commons Tribury year from Vancouver.

The selections:

World: 1. Pope Pius dies, Pope John elected; 2. Middle Eastern crisis; 3. France picks de Gaulle; 4. Space race; 5. Quemoy shelling; 6. Vatican opens Bolshoi.

Canada: 1. Springhill; 2. election; 3. Vancouver bridge collapse; 4. Princess Margaret's visit; 5. Freight rate increase; 6. Sommers trial.

Other world stories rated high in news impact included the Dec. 1 Chicago school fire, the August voyage of the Nautilus under polar ice, the Democrats' sweep of the U.S. off-year elections, Boris Pasternak's forced rejection of the Nobel Prize, renewed integration troubles in the South, and the Russian attempt to oust the West from Berlin.

On the Canadian scene stories rated just under the six chosen included Whitby's winning of the world hockey title, the Kellock report and subsequent CPR rail strike, the Montreal newspaper Le Devoir's charges about gas distribution in Quebec, the Ottawa gas blast that destroyed a building Oct. 25, and the Montreal apartment house fire Nov. 9 in which 16 died.

Holloway St. W.A. Hears Talk On 'Christmas'

A friendly Yuletide spirit prevailed at Holloway St. church W. A. as the members gathered for their Christmas meeting in the church parlors, in spite of inclement weather, the attendance was good.

Christmas decorations were evident everywhere featuring the joyous, and reverent advent season.

The president, Mrs. F. Wilson presided and extended a gracious welcome and conducted the business period.

Gratifying reports were given by the various secretaries. Mrs. A. Campbell gave the financial report with a substantial balance and hand out of expenses paid; Mrs. F. Scott reported on flowers and Mrs. Cook on cards.

MEMBERSHIP CERTIFICATES

The highlight of the meeting was the presentation of two life membership pins and certificates to two worthy members, Mrs. A. Campbell and Mrs. Moorman had meant to do so. After the years as president she made the second presented her with a life membership and pin.

Mrs. G. Coulter called Mrs. R. Bunnett to the front and spoke in glowing terms of her faithful services as supply secretary of the W.M.S. and presented her with a life membership and pin.

Both these ladies, though completely taken by surprise, replied, thanking the members for this fine gesture and said, "They felt unworthy but would carry on the work which they enjoyed so much. They will always treasure the pins and certificates.

Mrs. Wilson called on Mrs. S. Westover, who led in the worship period. Mrs. Johns gave the Scriptures from Luke 2:4-16. Mrs. Westover based the meditation on the birth of the child Jesus.

"It was only a manger cold and bare,
Only a Maiden mild, only some shepherds kneeling there,
watching a little child,
And yet that Maiden's arms enfold
The King of Heaven above
And in the Christ Child we behold
The Lord of Life and love".

"There are many things today associated with Christmas that those who took part in the first Christmas never anticipated. To Mary and Joseph the first Christmas was a time of crisis in many ways. Nevertheless, it was joyous, for it brought the fulfillment of God's promise that He would provide a Saviour for men.

"It means that Jesus is One of us. It was not the birds, but the person who was born that was unusual. The inkeeper saw nothing different in the tired and poorly dressed couple who applied for lodging. The innkeeper possibly didn't mean to turn away the Saviour, for he didn't know. He might have had the honor of giving Jesus His first home, had he been wise to the situation.

"As a baby born in a stable and cradled in a manger, Jesus was both human and divine by the miracle of His birth and the heir of heaven. For as the Son of God He could declare Himself understandably to men.

"As we celebrate Christ's birth let us keep Christ in Christmas, in our hearts, in our homes and in our living with others."

Prayer and the singing of the carol, "Away in a Manger," closed the meditation.

GUEST SPEAKER

Mrs. C. Dobbs introduced the guest speaker, Mrs. Mac Hill of Trenton, Christian Stewardship secretary of the Presbyterial Department W. A. who gave a stirring message, telling of the important part women have played down through the years in the life and working of the world. She said, in part, "Christmas makes all all one. Will we spend it or keep it as we should? Some spend it breaking hearts of parents by intemperance and wickedness. So many spend it the wrong way. Let us find peace at Christmas.

Single Woman Missionary Distinct Help to Converts

By EDNA USHER
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO (CP)—Single Canadian women are needed to help recent converts to Christianity cope with problems of spinsterhood, says Rev. L. S. Albright.

Dr. Albright is the director of the Canadian School of Missions in Ceylon, which gives specialized training to would-be missionaries among students at Protestant theological colleges.

"The single woman missionary has a distinct function to perform where converts are being made from other religions to Christianity," he said.

"Introduction of Christianity means an end to polygamy, and this means women who would otherwise expect to be wives number two, three or four know they will not marry and must find ways of supporting themselves.

"Spinster missionaries know the problems these women face and can advise and help train them towards obtaining jobs."

About 40 women are taking courses at the School of Missions with men who are training to be ministers.

"We want to produce missionaries who are competent not merely in theology but in social work and special life, and who understand what is involved when a person is converted to Christianity," said Dr. Albright.

Among his students are a grade school teacher, a kindergarten teacher and a nurse.

Dorothy Napier, 25, of Brampton, Ont., will be studying at the United Church Training School. She plans to work in the poorer areas of Canadian cities or in rural areas of Western Canada.

After graduating from Toronto Teachers' College she worked for a year at a Toronto public school. She is on the national executive of the Young Peoples' Union of the United Church.

Margaret Seaby, 27, of Wall, Northumberland, England, came to Canada in 1955 and hopes to go to the Arctic when she has completed a three - year course at the Anglican Women's Training College.

She qualified as a kindergarten teacher in England, and taught in Toronto when she first arrived in Canada. She has already taught at an Indian school at Fort George on James Bay.

India is the goal of Mary MacNicol, who decided to be a missionary when she was 15. From Duntroon, near Collingwood, Ont., she is attending the Presbyterian missionary and deaconess training school. Girl Becoming Consultant for Hardware Firm

OTTAWA (CP)—It might seem difficult to most women to select the right doorknob from among hundreds of makes of this indispensable item. But not Alice Pyne and her selection will be easy.

Miss Pyne is on her way to becoming a professional architectural hardware consultant. She was the only woman among 24 persons who recently attended a three-day course held by the Builders' Hardware Club of Ontario near St. Catharines.

Miss Pyne has studied the different hardware products that builders need for construction, and has also learned how to read blueprints. Canada has few qualified hardware consultants, and Miss Pyne's firm (W. A. Raskin Limited) intends to send her to more courses.

LONG EXPERIENCE

Of Chinese and French-Canadian attraction, she worked in retail credit departments after she graduated from the High School of Commerce in 1943. She started in the hardware firm's credit department more than four years ago, and for more than two years has been secretary to the manager of the builders hardware department.

Official in the firm decided there was no reason why Alice couldn't become a hardware specialist.

She told a reporter her job entails working from architect's plans and in consultation with architects.

Since he firm does business from the Lakehead to Newfoundland, it could also involve considerable travelling.

Every child deserves a home
Many boys and girls of all ages are looking for the security and happiness that only a permanent home can bring.
Homes are needed for many children particularly in the 4 to 16 age group. These children, because of their age, religion, racial origin or slight physical handicap have yet to find the permanent homes they need.
While the demand for infants far exceeds the number of children available for adoption, it is not easy to find homes for these older children.
Consideration for adoption of a child is given to a married couple who enjoy good health and are financially able to care for the child's future.
Vital, too, is the desire to offer a healthy, happy home and the understanding and affection to meet the special needs of children.
Applications are now being accepted for adoption of children 4 to 16 years of age

GOOD MANNERS

By Mrs. Beekman

HOW TO REGRET FORMAL INVITATION TO WEDDING RECEPTION

Dear Mrs. Beekman:

My husband and I have just received a formal invitation to a church wedding and to the reception following. I have no idea how to reply to this. We are planning to attend the church ceremony, but not the reception. — B.

It is the invitation to the reception that requires a reply. Use the first page of white double-sheeted note-paper; write a n d space your reply like this:

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Hill regret that they are unable to accept the kind invitation of

Mr. and Mrs. Lane

Saturday, the third of January

(You need not mention the invitation to the ceremony . . . simply attend if you can.)

"SPINSTER DINNER" SAME IDEA AS "BACHELOR DINNER"

Dear Mrs. Beekman:

What in the world is a "spinster dinner"? I've never heard of this, but today I received an invitation to a "spinster dinner" from a friend of mine who is to be married soon. Since I am married, I wonder if I'm supposed to be invited. Please explain. — K. R.

In some communities the bride-to-be, the "spinster," gives a "spinster dinner" for a group of her friends, including of course her bridal attendants . . . t h e way the groom-to-be, the "bachelor," gives a "bachelor dinner" for his attendants and perhaps some other friends. Very often these two dinners are given on the same evening.

However, "spinster" applies to the hostess, and "bachelor" applies to the host . . . the guests at either dinner may be married or unmarried.

CHRISTMAS SEASON A GOOD TIME FOR GOOD MANNERS!

It's full inspiring and inspiring idea to make an extra contribution to the spirit of g o o d will in these important days. For example, why not set aside a "no" at least twice as often as now in your habit? Or t h r e e times or four times or five times as often! You'll soon discover that a good habit it will be to our spirit.

Open your eyes and your ears . . . open your heart, too . . . and let yourself become thrillingly aware of the thousand-and-one courtesies and kindnesses which some your way and which should e pleasantly responded to. Then pen your lips and give w i t h your gracious "Thank you," or "Yes, you, so much," or Thank you, very much indeed," "Thank you . . . you are very ful." Even in these busy, busy days there is always time for courtesy, always time to a s a your appreciation. Try it . . . you'll have a really good time trying "Thank you."

Svelte Suit

By VERA WINSTON

Here is a suit that is good on its own with furs, and fine under an extra coat when it gets really cold. The little jacket gains distinction via the self-fringed border at the buttoned closing and the small scarf. The skirt is attached at the Empire line to a bodice of matching wool jersey. The suit fabric is a spongy woolen.

Mr. and Mrs. Russell Eckert Celebrate Diamond Wedding Anniversary

Last Sunday afternoon, Mr. and Mrs. Russell Eckert, of East Zetland, were "at home" to their many friends and relatives on the occasion of their 60th wedding anniversary.

Mrs. Eckert, wearing a lovely royal blue gown and corsage of red, Sweetheart roses, assisted by Mr. Eckert in his wheel chair, with white carnation boutonnieres, graciously received and welcomed their guests, into a gayly adorned home for this special occasion.

Mr. and Mrs. Eckert were married on December 21st, 1898, at the Methodist parsonage in Bloomfield by the Reverend Mr. Harris, and following the ceremony they left by horse and cutter for the station and the train for Trenton.

At the conclusion of their honeymoon, they settled at East Lake as farmers, later leaving the farm they moved to Trenton, where Mr. Eckert ran a bakery for some time. They then eventually moved to Toronto, where he was employed by a leading bakery.

They have five children, two daughters, Mrs. Harry Stickle of Colborne, and Mrs. Robert Cook, of Toronto; three sons, Morley and Frank of Toronto, and George of Vancouver, B.C.; 12 grandchildren, and 15 great-grandchildren.

The table for the turkey dinner, of which 40 family members partook, was daintily appointed with damask linen, silver services, and the anniversary cake. Mrs. B. Walters, sister-in-law of Mrs. Eckert, poured tea and their four oldest granddaughters served. Mrs. William Stewart of Belleville, Mrs. D. Metcalfe, Miss Marilyn Eckert and Miss Thora Coyle, all of Toronto.

Mr. and Mrs. Eckert were the happy recipients of a tri-light floor lamp, an electric blanket, a platform rocker, hassock and comforter, as well as numerous other useful gifts.

Telegrams conveying congratulations were received from Her Majesty the Queen; from the Prime Minister, John Diefenbaker, and from Haldimand township.

The Christmas Breakfast Menu

by Mary Moore

The question on Christmas morning is where does broken fast fit in?

For the majority of acquiescent adults if they have had their eye-opener orange juice and coffee — they can wait until the excitement of opening gifts subsides.

Dinner Menus

But mother has to be on the alert because all the morning confusion she has to produce a special breakfast because of the excitement of the day and extra demands on her energy. Simultaneously she has to be sure dinner plans are going forward by the clock.

I think an orange juice breakfast might be ideal. You could go ahead and serve frozen squeezed orange juice and make coffee to drink while the presents are being opened.

But the night before set rolls to rise. Then in the morning they are baking, some shirred eggs could go in the oven — and during the last 10 minutes you could push in a broiler pan full of varied fancy meats for grill.

CHRISTMAS BREAKFAST MENU

Before - gift - opening: fresh orange juice and coffee; After - gifts - opening: Shirred Eggs; Mixed Grill: Bacon, Chicken Livers and Veal Kidneys; Homemade Glazed Orange Rolls; Sweet Butter; Lemon Marmalade; Milk for the Children; Coffee.

Note: Grilled tomato slices scorched, drained, canned pear halves or pineapple slices are all good accompaniments to add to the mixed grilled meats. Choose the one (or more) that will be most poulin for your crowd. Add to broiler pan when meats are started.

SHIRRED EGGS

Butter a casserole generously and break 2 eggs at a time, onto a saucer, then slip each into place in the casserole. Sprinkle with salt and a little freshly ground pepper, and pour 2 tablespoons cream in evenly. Over this sprinkle a dusting of grated cheese. Bake at 375 deg. for about 15 minutes. (Same temperature as Orange Rolls below).

GLAZED ORANGE ROLLS

Scald one cup milk and stir in ¼ cup lightly packed brown sugar, 2 teaspoons salt and ½ cup shortening. Cool to lukewarm. In the meantime measure into a bowl ½ cup lukewarm water, stir in 2 teaspoons sugar, sprinkle with the contents of 2 packages yeast. Let stand 10 minutes. Then stir well, stir in the milk mixture and add 1 well beaten egg. Stir in mixture of 1½ cups whole wheat flour and 1 cup sifted all-purpose flour. Beat well for 2 minutes or until batter is smooth and elastic. Scrape down sides of bowl. Cover with damp cloth. Let rise in warm place until doubled in bulk — about 40 minutes. Stir down batter. Meanwhile make Orange Syrup. One half cup brown sugar and four tablespoons each orange rind and juice. Blend and butter. Spoon 1 tablespoon of the Orange Syrup into the bottom of well-greased muffin pans and then fill muffin pans ⅔ full with batter. Let rise. Bake at 375 deg. Fahr. for 10 to 25 minutes or until done.

Bakelite Co. Plays Host To Children

The Masonic Temple here rang with laughter last Saturday afternoon, as the Bakelite Company, Ltd., gave a party for the annual Christmas party for the children of its employees. In all approximately 200 were present, including 164 children, and it was evident that the parents were getting as much fun out of the occasion as were their offspring.

The party opened at 2 p.m. and lasted for three hours. The vice-president of the company Mr. Phil Jeffery, opened proceedings with a speech of welcome. Refreshments were then served to the children and their parents, after which cartoon films were shown. Then came the big event of the afternoon, the arrival of Santa, with a gift for every child. In addition to the gifts, each child received a three-pound bag of candy and nuts, plus oranges and apples.

Quilting was the order of the day. One quilt was finished.

THE FAMILY COUNCIL

EDITOR'S NOTE: The Family Council consists of a judge, a psychiatrist, three clergymen, a newspaper editor, a women's editor and two writers. Each article is a summary of a case history. The Council reports on problems that have been dealt with by responsible agencies and counsellors.

Cheryl is 20. She would take the job my brother offers.

Joe D. — I don't need favors from him.

Cheryl D. — My husband and I are in our late 60's and in good health. My husband's firm retired him a year ago and we have been having some problems ever since.

Joe always enjoyed his hobbies in his spare time, but since he has been retired he seems to get bored with them. He hangs around the house all day and gets in my way, telling me what to do and what to do. Sometimes we visit the children he becomes restless and irritable.

My brother has a small business and is willing to let my husband help out. The work would not be much, but at least it would get him out a few hours a day. I think this is the solution to his problem, but he refuses to take the job.

Joe D. — I don't need handouts from anyone. My retirement pension plus a little extra from investments we can get along. Cheryl's brother told me I really couldn't be out a few hours a day, but he is willing to take me in as a favor to her. I'm not a kid and I don't want to be sent off to kindergarten.

When I worked I was in an executive position and I can handle plenty of responsibility. Cheryl's brother thinks I'm fit only for odd jobs. He wouldn't give me a chance to do anything else, even though I have ideas that c o u l d improve his business.

I had always looked forward to giving more time to my hobbies but I must admit they haven't held my interest.

The Council: Right now J o e seems to be suffering from a severe case of self-pity brought on by poorpreparation for h i s retirement.

Joe apparently leaned too heavily on hobbies that h a d never become very important to him. As a relaxation from work they may have been satisfying, but as full-time activity they seem trivial. If he had given a little more thought to the matter, Joe might have realized that a hobby may feel like kindergarten work unless it becomes so fascinating and significant that it takes over the person, makes demands on him, sets him challenges which call for his best efforts.

Joe, like many men in a similar position, could not imagine what it would be like to have all the responsibilities taken f r o m him, to have nobody and nothing really needing his attention.

It is a difficult situation to find, but failing into the depths of self-pity will only make things worse. People tend to see us as we see ourselves and Joe's feeling that he is useless and discarded is reflected off of o d d jobs." He should accept the offer only if he is willing to p u t himself into whatever is required of him and to make the most of it. If his ideas for the business are good ones, the brother-in-law probably will recognize it eventually and one may find himself on the threshold of a new career.

If the brother-in-law act doesn't work out, Joe should pick himself up and look for another opportunity, never losing his belief that whatever work he can do is valuable to someone.

BIG ADDITION

NEW GLASGOW, N.S (CP)—A nurses' residence with 163 beds will open next June at the Aberdeen hospital here.

'TWAS TWO DAYS BEFORE CHRISTMAS . . .

When all over town
People hurried and scurried
Some wearing a frown.

Soon the stockings would hang
By the chimney with care
But what to put in them?
We feel such despair.

The children were nestled
All snug in their beds,
What to buy? Where to shop?
Buzzes through our poor heads.

Mum with her list
And Dad just confused,
Had just settled down
Not too enthused.

When out of his chair,
Dad rose with a clatter.
Mother, surprised, said,
"What is the matter?"

The light from the lamp
Lit the floor up below,
Where Dad dropped the "Intell"
His face all aglow.

Then to my wondering eyes did appear
An ad in the paper that made it . . .
all clear.
As rapir as eagles our ideas all came,
We whistled and shouted as we checked off each name.

"WATCHES AND DIAMONDS—
EARRINGS AND BEADS—
CHINA AND SILVER—
ALL JEWELLERY NEEDS."

We had what we needed to fill up our socks

Top male athlete in Canada for 1958 as selected by the country's sport editors and broadcasters is Maurice Richard (left.) The 37-year-old right-winger with Montreal Canadiens of the National Hockey League is in his 16th season but still plays with the friskiness of a sophomore. He scored his 600th goal this season. Second place in the Canadian Press poll went to Ron Howell (lower right), 23-year-old Canadian-born halfback with the Big Four champion Hamilton Tiger-Cats. Yvon Durelle (upper right), the Baie Ste. Anne, N.B., boxer who came close to upsetting light-heavyweight champion Archie Moore in their title bout at Montreal, December 10, was third. (CP Photo).

Canadiens' Maurice Richard Named Male Athlete of 1958; Howell, Durelle Next in Line

By JACK SULLIVAN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO (CP) — Maurice Richard, the phenomenon of skates who plays hockey with the friskiness of a sophomore after 16 turbulent big-league seasons, is Canada's outstanding male athlete of 1958. He also won the honor in 1957.

The 37-year-old right - winger with Montreal Canadiens of the National Hockey League received the accolade from the country's sports editors and broadcasters in the 24th annual Canadian Press year-end poll announced today. He won it without a fight, in a manner alien to the flaming Rocket.

Thirty - four athletes were nominated by the voters, asked to name the three individual male performers, in order of preference. Votes were computed on a 3-2-1 basis and the Rocket was hoisted to the top with 149 points.

PEOPLE'S CHOICE

There was little doubt that Richard, one of the most controversial hockey players in history, was their man. Two football players, a boxer and a golfer provided only feeble resistance.

Ron Howell 23-year-old Canadian - born halfback with the Big Four champion Hamilton Tiger-Cats, was second ahead of Yvon Durelle, hard - punching battler from Baie Ste. Anne, N.B., who scared world light - heavyweight champion Archie Moore almost out of his wits before losing on an 11th-round knockout at Montreal Dec. 10.

Jackie Parker, gimpy-legged triple-threat backfielder with Edmonton Eskimos of the Western Interprovincial Football Union, was fourth after a battle with Vancouver's Stan Leonard, probably the greatest golfer Canada has known.

Richard collected his points on 37 first-place ballots, 16 seconds and 10 thirds. Howell, who graduated to pro football from Hamilton high school ranks three years ago, polled 89 points and Durelle 72.

Parker's point - total was 60, just one more than the 44-year-old Leonard, who hit the biggest jackpot of his career by winning the $40,000 Tournament of Champions at Las Vegas, Nev., last summer.

Included in the list of football, hockey, baseball and tennis players, golfers, curlers and track and field athletes, was Jean Beliveau, a Richard teammate who managed nine points on two first-place choices, one second and one third. Beliveau was the outstanding athlete in 1956.

LED TO CUP

He defied the odds, returned to lineup after nearly three months of idleness and his spirit drove Canadiens to a thrilling Stanley Cup title. Again, as it has been in his long, suspense-filled career, Richard provided the spark that gave Montreal the cup.

Richard got his 600th NHL goal at New York against the Rangers a month ago, a milestone that may never be reached again.

Durelle, fourth choice of the voters in the 1957 poll, gained international prominence two weeks ago when he twice came within seconds of lifting the light-heavyweight title from Moore. Down in the first round he hammered Moore to the floor for eight counts. Moore went down in the fifth for a six count.

DEFENCEMAN FINED

CHICOUTIMI, Que. (CP)—Defenceman Jacques Young of Chicoutimi Saguenens of the Quebec Hockey League has been fined $100 for an attack on referee Alex Barilko, the club was advised Monday by president Byron Higginson. Young was alleged to have struck the referee during a game in Quebec City Dec. 7. He was first ordered suspended but the suspension, protested by the club, was held in abeyance until Young appeared before Higginson in Montreal.

Durelle Manager Says Fight Now History

MONCTON, N.B. (CP)—Chris Shaban, manager of Canadian and British Empire light-heavyweight champion Yvon Durelle, says all the talk about so-called long count following the Archie Moore-Durelle, title fight in Montreal, Dec. 10 should be forgotten.

"The fight is history now," said Shaban, "and charges of a long count only sound like an alibi."

The grocer - fight manager added:

"Referee Jack Sharkey had a tough fight to handle. Everybody in the Montreal Forum was excited and caught by surprise when Yvon decked Moore in the first round.

"I'll go along with what Moore said afterwards that there were two champions in the ring."

REFEREE CRITICIZED

Durelle was quoted in Toronto last week as saying that while Moore was down and Sharkey made two nine-counts, the timekeeper counted off "13 or 14 seconds" on each knockdown.

"I really don't think that Yvon paid much attention if the count was long or not," said Shaban. "He was more concerned with going to a neutral corner."

For a return bout, Shaban said he'd prefer the ball park in Montreal, "sometime in June or July."

He added: "I don't know anything about Toronto and the CNE Exhibition in September. We'll go where the most money can be made."

Giant Fans Gobble Box Reserved Seats

NEW YORK (AP) — Hardy pro football fans Monday quickly gobbled up all reserved and box seats for Sunday's National Football League championship game between Baltimore Colts and New York Giants.

Immune to freezing weather and icy blasts, the fans bought $10 and $7.50 tickets with such zeal the Giants decided to sell the bleachers and standing room space at Yankee Stadium in advance.

With about 50,000 seats already spoken for, the Giants announced an advance sale of 12,000 bleacher tickets at $4 each and 5,000 standing admissions at $5. Originally these were not to have gone on sale until Sunday morning.

Baltimore's frenzied fans were allotted 15,000 of the box and reserved seats although they wanted twice as many.

Based on a potential capacity of 70,000 plus, compared with the 55,263 who watched last year's championship game at Detroit, the gate should set a record. Counting the $200,000 television fee, the pool last year was $393,000. The players get 70 per cent of the net after taxes, rental and operating expenses have been deducted.

BALL PLAYER ARRESTED

MANITOWA, Fla. (AP)—A professional baseball player was arrested Monday in connection with the theft of $1,800 from a department store here last Thursday night. Sheriff Roy Robertson arrested Don Urquhart, 27, once a promising rookie for Pittsburgh. Last season he pitched for Salt Lake City in the Pacific Coast League. He and Durrell Weeks, 27, both of Bonifay, Fla., were charged with breaking and entering a department store.

May Institute Three-Year Game Seasons

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario is pondering a radical departure in its hunting laws — setting open seasons for three-year periods.

The lands and forests department said Monday study is being given to the possibility of setting deer, moose and upland game seasons for the longer term instead of the present practice of declaring open dates a year at a time.

The statement said Lands Minister Spooner believes the move, "presumably on an experimental basis, would be of great assistance and convenience to the hunting public."

It would permit prospective hunters to plan vacations well in advance and be helpful to resort operators and outfitters.

The measure would not affect seasons on ducks, geese and other migratory birds, set on a year-to-year basis by the federal government.

AWARD FOR DOG

TORONTO (CP) — Valentine Lake, six-year-old 95-pound black Labrador retriever owned by Edmonton oil contractor Bill Bizzard, has been named Canadian retriever of the year for the second straight year, it was announced Monday. This year, he appeared in 30 Canadian trials and one in the U.S. and officials say he has the victory in the bag although his total points haven't been added up.

Petes Break Losing Streak, Whip Marlies

TORONTO (CP) — The Wayne Connelly - Bill Mahoney - Larry Keenan line is a tough problem for any OHA Junior A defence.

Monday night Peterborough Petes' powerful trio collected 11 points as Petes stopped Toronto Marlboros 5-4 to break a four-game losing streak.

Mahoney scored two goals and assisted on three. Connelly got two goals and two assists and Babcock helped on a pair. Wayne Boddy and Chuck Hamilton scored singles.

The win left Petes in third place with 26 points, three behind Toronto St. Michael's. Marlboros lost a chance to take over fifth place from Barrie Flyers.

Marlboros took an early lead on first Murchie's goal but Peterborough scored three times in six minutes for a first period lead. Jack Martin and Jim Pappin fired one each for Marlboros in the second, with Mahoney getting his pair for Petes in the same period.

Marlboros' Sonny Osborne fired the lone last-period goal.

Bing to Play Catholic Priest In Movie 'Say One for Me'

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Bing Crosby has ended a two-year absence from the screen by donning priest's robes again.

He is starting a 20th Century-Fox for the first time in his long film career. Producer - director Frank Tashlin has him playing a Roman Catholic priest with Debbie Reynolds and Robert Wagner in "Say One For Me".

"He's a pretty hep character," Bing explained about the role as he relaxed in his dressing room. "His church is in Manhattan's fifth Street and Broadway in New York, so his flock is largely show people.

"When he came to the parish, he had to acquaint himself with show talk so he could communicate with his parishioners. He also has an early morning mass for the people in shows can attend."

ON THE BEAM

Mostly familiar with part of his sermon, which urged his listeners to drop in at his "late, late show."

The role harks back to Bing's successes in "Going My Way" (1944) and „Bells of St. Mary's" (1945). He reminisced: ...

"It was Leo McCarey's idea that I could play—a Catholic priest, and he was encouraged by Buddy Desylva, who was then head of Paramount. When Leo mentioned it to me, I thought he was nuts. All he had was the barest outline of his idea for "Going My Way."

"But I went along with it. We had a great time shooting the picture. Leo always spent most of the morning at the piano—he's a frustrated song writer. When we decided what he wanted to shoot, he would tell us and we'd go ahead."

"Going My Way" was the smash picture of the year and netted Bing an Oscar. McCarey then directed him and Ingrid Bergman in "Bells", which was even a greater box office success.

CHURCH MORE LIBERAL

After a 13-year lapse, Bing feels that the church is more liberal in what it will permit the movie makers to screen.

"I think they've loosened up on a lot of things," he remarked. "For instance, I saw Helen Hayes in a television play the other night that portrayed the confessional. I had never seen that done before.

"In his picture, the priest takes off his clerical garb and technical advisor on the previous goes to a night club in civilian clothes."

Watching over such details is Mgr. John Devlin, who also was Crosby priest portrayals.

COMING TO THE BELLE — Russ Tamblyn, playing the title role in "Tom Thumb", screen version, in color, by the famed brothers Grimm Fairy Tale, seeks the advice of the Fairest Queen, played by lovely English actress June Thorburn. Screen magic has reduced Tamblyn to the five-inch hero of the George Pal production for MGM combining live action, animated cartoon characters, songs and dances, due for presentation at the Belle Theatre in the New Year's holiday season.

Argos Sign Baylor Guard

TORONTO (CP) — Charley Horton, 220-pound guard from Baylor University and second choice of Detroit Lions of the National Football League, has notified Lions he will sign with Toronto Argonauts instead.

Lew Hayman, managing director of Argos, commented: "All I can say is that Mr. Horton said he would come with us."

Rated "an extremely aggressive player," Horton had been reluctant to sign a contract at this early date because of his amateur status in track and baseball.

Two other Argo imports, Bobby Jack Oliver and Larry Cowart, already are with Argos.

Argos say they also would like to pick off another Baylor star, fullback Larry Hickman a 230-pounder who also can punt. Paul Dickson, a Baylor tackle, is also on the Argo negotiation list.

Private Concern May Operate BC Lions Club

VANCOUVER (CP) — A proposal to operate the British Columbia Lions, now publicly owned, as a private company was made Monday at a press conference.

The plan is by former B.C. Lions Football Corporation Limited, backed by Don Matheson, former president of the Lions, Nat Bailey, Vancouver sportsman, and Fred Dietrich, a former Lions vice - president plus Frank Griffiths, chartered accountant, and two so - called mystery men.

The plan would give these men 51 per-cent ownership of the Western Interprovincial Football Union club, and the 3,500 present club members would own the remaining 49.0 per cent, sharing to that extent in any profits or losses.

It would give the existing members their present equity in the Lions' $200,000 surplus. A $20 membership is thus valued at roughly $60.

Shares in the new company would sell at $25 and Matheson and Co., under the proposal, would put up $110,000 of their own money.

Bailey reported that a poll of 000 members showed 48 or 49 per cent of the Lions' membership favored private enterprise.

Another press conference will be held today when the "mystery" men will be named.

It is planned to put the proposal before the Lions annual meeting here Jan. 7.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

The McFarlands would do well to mark, learn and inwardly digest the pertinent remarks made to them by Canadian Amateur Hockey Association officials, president Bob Lebel of Chambly, Quebec, and secretary George Dudley, of Midland, Ontario.

Both gentlemen came forth with some highly informative data regarding play, people and conditions the Macs will confront with while in Europe.

Some worthwhile tips were given the players by the speakers and all of them should be tacked away, but not too far, for future reference. Mr. Lebel also recalled some amusing incidents that occurred during the world tournament in Oslo a year ago.

Included was one that said tournament officials at the final game between Russia and Canada warned all and sundry that fans would not be allowed to invade the ice at the conclusion of the game.

"When I heard that," Mr. Lebel said, "I called the referee over and told him that regardless of official edicts I would be the first one over the boards. If Canada won, just watch me. And that is the way it happened. The siren had scarcely died away before I was over the top and in the middle of the victorious Russians. And that is what I expect to do again this year."

In more solemn vein, the CAHA president warned the Macs to be careful what they say and do when coming in contact with various conditions over there.

"You will see strange characters and things that might tickle your sense of humor. Whatever you do, do not laugh or comment at what you see on the spot. In the privacy of your hotel you can do as you wish, but always remember these people are not responsible for their conditions, and will not relish being the butt of visitors' jokes."

Forget about politics, he said, "You will find the greater majority of people behind the iron curtain fine sports. They love athletics, especially hockey, and furthermore, they love to win, but they don't let that get in their way. They love to exchange gifts, so you had better go prepared."

He added that the gift exchange is a feature of every game. Some like one up on their respective hostelliers and exchange trinkets with one another. The CAHA will provide Canada buttons for the McFarlands, which, as was the case last year, will be greatly treasured by opposing teams.

And, if there are any gourmets on the Macs' roster, they had better forget their highfalutin' recipes and roosters-under-glass for they are going to get a lot when faced with European food.

"It is fairly good, but not what you find in Canadian hotels and restaurants," Mr. Lebel said. (This recalls the story that Montreal Packers told on their return from Moscow. They said the steaks were rarer—no pun intended—than a western observer in the politburo, and even if the Russians had them they would not know to cook them.)

"I hope you fellows like pork chops, ham and spare ribs, because pork is the principal meat in Czechoslovakia," he said.

Accommodations will be good, perhaps at times disappointing, he added. "Mainly during your travel to various countries for the pre-tournament games, you will live in second-class hotels. But if conditions are like these in Oslo last year, you will get first class accommodation in Prague during the tournament play."

"It won't be like what happened to a hockey team that toured Japan a few years ago," Mr. Lebel told the Macs. "After the first game had been played the team went to the club house to shower and change.

"The first man to find the showers," which were located at the other end of the clubhouse, was not gone a minute. He dashed back to his mates, full of excitement, yelling, 'Hey we're in the wrong place. There's women in those showers'."

They were in the right clubhouse all right. It was just a matter of Japanese courtesy to foreign athletes that a geisha girl was placed in each shower for the purpose of washing the athletes' backs and otherwise assisting them with their post-game ablutions.

This won't happen in Czechoslovakia, or the other European spots where the Macs stay, but it might not be a bad idea for them to stow their Bikinis in their duffle bags.

Giants May Have New Trick To Halter Baltimore Colts

NEW YORK (AP)—What new trick will New York Giants come up with against Baltimore Colts in the National Football League championship game next Sunday?

That's what this suddenly prosperous football club—a 9-and-3 record—asked today, while the fans still were buzzing about the razzle-dazzle doublewing lateral that produced the only touchdown in last Sunday's 10-9—New York triumph over Cleveland Browns for the eastern division title.

If the Giants had a special play to throw at coach Weeb Ewbank's Colts next week, they weren't saying. It's a safe bet they weren't saying. It's a safe bet in private.

TWO MAY SIT OUT

Two Giants who will not participate in workouts until late in the week are Rosey Grier and Sam Huff. They suffered painful injuries last week but don't bet against their appearing in the lineup against the Colts.

Grier, a massive defensive tackle, is on crutches as a result of a leg injury. Huff, who did a great hawking job on Jimmy Brown — the Browns' fullback star who was held to eight yards in seven rushes—may have a charley horse. He says he's scheduled to be taken today.

Jim Lee Howell reported that Jack Stroud, who missed the last three games, probably will be ready for action at offensive tackle.

Frank Gifford, who led the ground gainers with 85 yards Sunday, was limping as a result of an injury to his left knee but he is expected to be in shape to start. So will Alex Webster, who played last week despite two badly bruised knees.

Old Maestro Richard Sparked Canadiens' Fire-Power

Habs Scored 13 Goals in 3 Rocket Nabbing Six Points; Geoffrion Held Scoring Lead

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Canadiens' blistering fire-power really made itself during the week.

Canadiens scored 13 goals in three games and the Habitant stars helped themselves to a sumptuous points-feast.

The old master, Maurice Richard, easily did himself proud. National Hockey League statistics released today show the Rocket picked up six points on two goals and four assists to jump from sixth place in the points-race into a tie for third.

Right winger Bernie Geoffrion, who took over the lead from New York Rangers' Andy Bathgate last week, held it with a three-point week—one goal and two assists.

Geoffrion now has amassed 42 points, made up of 18 goals and 24 assists, three points more than Bathgate, who managed two assists as Rangers won both their games last week.

BOTH LEAD CATEGORIES

Geoffrion has 24 assists, three more than Canadiens' Henri Richard, his closest rival, and despite his one-point week Bathgate's 19 goals at the best in the league.

But Montreal left winger Dickie Moore, who shares third place with teammate Jean Beliveau, is hot on Bathgate's heels. He notched five points during the week and three of them were goals, to give him a total of 18 this season.

He and the 37-year-old rocket each have 34 points. Richard, who got two goals and assisted on four on the game, has 14 goals and 20 assists.

Wings lost both their week games, one by a shut-out, and neither Gordie Howe nor Norm Ullman, his centre, could buy so much as an assist.

HOWE DROPS

The pointless week dropped Howe from third place into fifth and knocked Ullman from fourth-place tie into seventh.

Howe has 14 goals and 18 assists for 32 points and Ullman 12 goals and 17 assists for 29.

In between them is Henri Richard who had a four-point week on one goal and three assists to move up one rung from seventh to sixth with 30 points on his nine goals and 21 assists.

The other Hab star with a big week was Jean Beliveau. He played in only two of Montreal's three games but collected three points to tie him to seventh spot with Ullman and Eddie Litzenberger of Chicago Black Hawks.

Beliveau's 29 points are made up of 12 goals and 17 assists, while Litzenberger had 13 goals and 26 assists.

PLANTE IMPROVES AVERAGE

Jacques Plante, the Canadiens' "happy wanderer," had just about his best week this season in nets and seems to have a firm hold on the fourth consecutive Vezina Trophy — awarded to the goaltender who allows the fewest goals.

Plante got his fifth shutout this season and allowed only two goals in three games to reduce his goals-against average to 2.10 from 2.25.

Rangers' Lorne Worsley allowed only one goal in two games and now sports a 2.75 average, reduced from 3.00.

Plante's closest competitor, Terry Sawchuk of Detroit, saw his star pucks past him in two games and his average rose from 2.47 to 2.50.

"He won't eat a turkey. The big meanie is too chicken!"

Bill Veeck May Buy Part Of White Sox

CHICAGO (AP) — Bill Veeck, baseball's wandering merchant, is negotiating to buy into Chicago White Sox.

The former owner of Cleveland Indians and St. Louis Browns said Monday night there have been some discussions" between himself and Mrs. Dorothy Rigney, largest stockholder of the White Sox.

Mrs. Rigney, wife of co-vice-president John Rigney and sister of co-president Chuck Comiskey, confirmed sale of her stock shares may be imminent.

Veeck has been out of baseball since the Browns were transferred to Baltimore in 1954. He bought the Indians in 1946 at the age of 32 and won a world championship in 1948. He and his partners sold out in 1949.

Veeck unsuccessfully tried to buy Detroit Tigers in 1956 and Cleveland last summer.

Mrs. Rigney's brother, Chuck, has been eager to gain control of the club since the death in 1954 his mother, Mrs. Grace Comiskey, in 1956. He was surprised when informed of the negotiations.

"Two months ago Dorothy and I started negotiations for purchasing her end of the business," he said. "She made a public statement at that time and said if she sold she would give me the opportunity to buy."

Toronto Puts Johnny Bower On Waivers

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Maple Leafs, struggling to get out of the National Hockey League basement, placed goalie Johnny Bower on waivers Monday and tapped veteran Ed Chadwick to take his place.

The club was reported dickering with shoulder goalkeeper said to be Gerry McNeil, now with the American Hockey League Rochester Americans and formerly of Montreal Canadiens.

Chadwick may be back in the nets, where he played for Leafs last year and the year before, when Toronto meets the Red Wings at Detroit Christmas night.

Maple Leafs general manager George Imlach would not confirm this.

"I'll have to see how Chadwick goes in practice the next two days," he said. "We simply have to get better goaltending; we have to get scoring as we have—not even for one more game.

LEAVES CHANCE

"I've been patient with Bower but what am I supposed to do? He couldn't get his experience? He's 35 now."

The record book lists Bower as 35.

The Leafs got him from Cleveland Barons last spring but Johnny wasn't enthusiastic about playing in the NHL. He negotiated a two-year contract including a clause believed to give Bower no-trade-or-sale rights on him.

Thus, if the Barons insist on buying Bower back they'll have to bear the cost inherent in the contract with Toronto and Imlach said they might not want to do this.

Irish Have New Head Coach, Kuharich Takes Over Club

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP)—Joe Kuharich, Notre Dame's newly-appointed football coach, begins setting up house today.

Kuharich, who Monday officially succeeded the ousted Terry Brennan, returns to his native South Bend and alma mater to meet with university officials and the press.

Kuharich might disclose some of his plans for the 1959 season but it is doubtful he will name his staff at so early a date.

The present Notre Dame staff of assistants coaches Bernie Crimmins, Hugh Devore, Bill Fischer, Bill Walsh, Bernie Wiesehan and Wes Fesler hope and be retained.

SIXTH FOUR-YEAR PACT

Kuharich, a 41-year-old former Irish guard, signed a four-year contract—longest ever given at Notre Dame.

"I am flattered and proud that they decided to give me the opportunity," said Kuharich. "It always has been Notre Dame's great hope that I could return to Notre Dame."

In 1951, he guided the University of San Francisco to an undefeated season, then signed to head Chicago Cardinals of the National League.

He left collegiate ranks with a 36-44 record in seven seasons.

After a 4-8 season with the Cardinals in 1953 he left the club following a flareup with managing director Walter Wolfner.

Kuharich returned to the pro ranks in 1954 and piloted Washington to a 3-8-1 season. The following year he was named professional coach of the year when Washington finished with an 8-4 record.

FEATHERED SKID

Redskins have been slipping ever since. They were 6-6 in 1956, 4-8 in 1957 and 4-7-1 this season. Nevertheless, Redskin owner George Preston Marshall bought the rights of Kuharich to sign him to a five-year contract last year.

Marshall released Kuharich of his commitments and immediately signed Mike Nixon as head coach. Nixon had been Washington's backfield coach.

Brennan, meanwhile, is looking for a job at the age of 30.

He says he's interested in coaching if the right opportunity comes along. His qualifications include five years of experience at Notre Dame where his teams won 32 games and lost 18 for a .640 percentage.

Upsurging Juniors Win 3 in Row With 9-2 Victory Over Kingston

By GARRY ALEXANDER

Belleville's "New-Look" Lambert-Hurd Transport Junior Hockey Kingston Johnson Motors here Sunday night in the "B" fixture here last night with probably the best performance turned in by a Belleville Junior club in years.

The victory was their third in succession, and all by comfortable margins, after having won only one of their first six starts. Belleville now holds down undisputed possession of third place with a four won five lost record, Kingston and Peterborough prefixed for the top with eight and two marks while Prince Edward Co. is fourth with three wins.

A meeting was held previous to last night's game at which time Tom Foster and Jim Foster's were admitted to the Central Ontario grouping for the remainder of the schedule, replacing the defunct Trenton team, which folded because of lack of support on the weekend. Port Hope will take over with Trenton's record win-mine loss record. A number of changes will be made in the schedule since Port Hope home games will be played on Wednesdays rather than on Saturdays when the Trenton games were scheduled. It is understood several Trenton players will be kept with the other group teams.

Last night's fixture saw the Bay of Quinte outplay Kingston in every phase of the game, Belleville took a 2-0 lead in the opening heat, made it 5-2 by the second intermission and coasted away by scoring four without a reply in the third.

"Red" Cain tended goal for Kingston, replacing regular goalers Vern Gore and Ted Hurst, had on several goals after pulling off some fine saves early in the game. However the majority of Belleville's goals were well-screened and were no fault of the custom goalie.

The game developed into a hard - hitting affair but was kept well under control by referees Vern Gore and Ted Hurst. Kingston drew the odd one of 13 minor penalties while Bill Foster of Belleville and Kingston's Doug Senior drew majors for fighting in the third period.

Ronnie Hull sparked the winners with two goals and one assist. Dennis Kerruish also had three points with one goal and two helpers while Bill Foster, Gary Rowbotham, Gary Gover and Ralph Plane each had one and one. Jack Elliott and Barry Titterson also scored with Bucky Elster earning two assists.

Dennis O'Donnell was credited with both Kingston goals, one coming while his team was playing a man short and the other deflecting in off his body. The goals came at 12.55 and 19.59 of the second period after the homesiers had built a 5-0 lead. Fred Curran had the only assist.

Dennis Kerruish with a high, hard drive after taking a pass at 6.27 of the second, Ron Hull picked up a loose puck and scored while Ralph Plane blinked the light with a backhander for the 3-0 score before Kingston broke the egg. In the third Rowbotham got a goal when the elbe bounced off a goalpost and the goalie's skate. Titterson sank a goal one from the blueline, Foster scored while lying on his stomach and Hull completed the scoring from a scramble.

Best Forward Pass Catcher Has Bad Eyes, Back, Limp

By GEORGE BOWEN

BALTIMORE (AP)—One of the best forward pass catchers in the National Football League has poor eyes, a weak back and a limp.

That's Raymond Berry of Baltimore Colts, a sell-evade leader in his field and a man of idiosyncrasy.

New York Giants will have to worry about stopping Berry in their championship game Sunday.

Berry has been at the top of the league's pass receivers for the last two seasons. Last year his 800 yards gained was the most and this year his 56 catches led th.. loop along with Pete Retzlaff of Philadelphia Eagles.

Berry also has put on the best one-game performance of the last two years.

He did it last season by catching 13 throws for 294 yards against Washington and this year he snagged 10 for 146 yards and two touchdowns against Detroit Lions.

When Berry was drafted 20th by the Colts after graduation from Southern Methodist in 1954, he was considered only a so-so end among the stars of the NFL.

He was blossomed by dint of ceaseless practice.

He brings his own portable backstop with him to practice. This saves time and steps in retrieving footballs he has thrown at him as long as someone is willing to do the pegging.

Berry deliberately has them thrown to him high, low and to the side until he has become adept at making the most difficult catch appear easy.

His unusual characteristics start with his first name. He insists you call him by the full name, not the nickname Ray.

He walks around squeezing a plastic known as "silly putty" to strengthen his hands. He carries a scale even on road trips to be sure his weight stays at 185 pounds.

Berry studied nutrition and eats a diet high in proteins such as salmon, liver, steak and peanut butter for energy. A raw carrot a day is included.

Berry is so nearsighted he says: "If I didn't know that the first letter on those eye charts was an 'e' I wouldn't have any idea what to say when they give me a test."

He wears contact lenses while playing.

Berry also wears a special harness for a back ailment and mud cleats on one shoe because one leg is shorter than the other.

Tough Weekend Looms Ahead For McFarlands

The McFarlands had better have their turkey and other Christmas fatiners well-digested by Friday, for fish-day starts a tough weekend for the Allan Cuppers.

They tee off against the strengthened Kingston Merchants here Friday night, then take on the Whitby Dunlops in the world champions back-yard Saturday night, and on Sunday trek to Hull where a revamped Hull-Ottawa Canadiens team waits for battle.

The manager-less Merchants look dangerous a revamping and it appears to have brought results. The Gagnon-led Kingston club has won its last two starts, both of them over the Hull-Ottawa Canadiens and with its sparkling team, they should be tough nuts to crack here Friday night.

Playing coach Gagnon has additional defensive strength in Rags Ragian, formerly of Mees, and Rags has looked good in both starts with his new club. Partridge has been shifted back to the defence and waivers have been asked on Gendron and McNiff. It is unlikely any team in the Eastern League will pick them up.

Connie Broden, who played with the Whitby Dunlops in the world tournament last year, played his first game with Hull-Ottawa against Kingston on Sunday last. The former pro has been given permission to play with the Hull team for at least one trip around the circuit.

After that, who knows, he may be sporting a McFarland uniform.

'Skins' Appoint Mike Nixon Head Coach

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three years shy of his self-imposed deadline, Mike Nixon has made it as a football head coach.

Nixon was promoted Monday to chief coach of Washington Redskins, succeeding Joe Kuharich, who is moving on to Notre Dame.

The 47-year-old Nixon has been in the National Football League for 15 years as player and assistant coach. In his college days he starred as a halfback with the hard-nosed Pitt teams of Jock Sutherland.

Nixon has harbored an ambition to become a head coach, to run the whole show. Recently he said: "I don't have much time left. I'm sure I'll have to get a shot before I'm 50."

He got the chance Monday from Redskins owner George Preston Marshall.

Marshall said Nixon was the only man he considered to replace Kuharich. No information was given out on salary or other terms.

Inkspots Edge Public Works By 6-5 Score

The Ontario Intelligencer hockey team goalie "Robber" McCann reported for work today looking like a Swiss cheese.

He was the target for the Public Works team sharpshooters who raised 41 lumps on the McCann carcase when he got in the way of their shots. He blinked his eyes five times, thus missing seeing the puck go by him into the net.

At that, Don Wood's "inkspots" gave the Public Works the works by a 6-5 score.

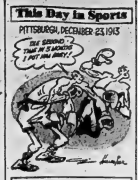
The Works' passing plays dazzled the Inkspots to the point where they looked like they were watching a tennis match. But they managed to intercept most of the passes by an excellent ground attack, making yards several times while flat on their tummies.

Don Wood, the Inkspots captain who cannot stop once he gets started, outraced his interference on two occasions, going the entire 100 yards to score two goals. Mervin Thompson got one, as did Paul Prince and Harvey Bridger, while Ron High dipsy-doodled a hula dance in front of the Works' goalie before he poked in the winner.

Rocky Davis, who masterminds the "Works," scored two, as did Larry Rowbotham. Donnie Mains got the other, while "Robber" McCann was watching the blonds in the third row back.

Quebec Hockey

MONTREAL (CP)—Like good wine, Jacques Locas of Chicoutimi Saguenens seems to improve with age.



Six goals in the last week brought his production to almost a goal a game, a pace that would eclipse the Quebec Hockey League record at the season's end.

Official league statistics released Monday showed the 32-year-old veteran of 10 QHL seasons with 25 goals in 27 games. The league record is 34 goals, set in 1940 by Billy Dartnell of the defunct Ottawa Senators.

Locas has 30 points, good for third place in the point parade.

Greig Hicks, a 15 - pound centre, collected three assists in Chicoutimi's three games during the week to retain the lead with 12 goals and 29 assists. Six points back is Yugoslavian - born Stan Smrke with 19 goals and 16 assists.

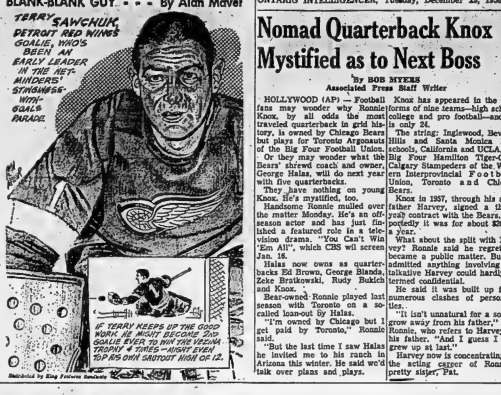
Giants Will Experiment in Spring Training

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — San Francisco Giants plan further experimenting with a combination of veteran shortstop Daryl Spencer at second base and rookie Andre Rodgers at short.

That was apparent Monday as the club announced its spring training plans with Spencer and Rodgers due to get more work in the second base combination.



It also could mean the Giants have failed in their bid to trade for a second baseman, one of their sims.

The veteran Spencer worked at second base in some of the 1958 spring drills but started the season at short. Rodgers was sent to Phoenix for more seasoning, coming up for a few games near the end of the season.

The Giants announced Monday that 10 players will report to a Sun ner Mesa Feb. 12 for conditioning. Another 10 will come in Feb. 17 for a week of special work with manager Bill Rigney while the full camp assembles Feb. 22 with formal practice the next day.

The Giants also announced only 29 spring training games will be played next year, eight fo 10 less than in previous years. The earlier start of the season, April 10, was one reason.

Nomad Quarterback Knox Mystified as to Next Boss

By BOB MYERS
Associated Press Staff Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Football fans may wonder why Ronnie Knox, by all odds the most traveled quarterback in grid history, is owned by Chicago Bears' pla plays for Toronto Argonauts of the Big Four Football Union. Or they may wonder what the Bears' shrewd coach and owner, George Halas, will do next year with five quarterbacks.

They have nothing on young Knox. He's mystified, too.

Handsome Ronnie mulled over the matter Monday. He's an off-season actor and has just finished a featured role in a television drama, "You Can't Win 'Em All", which CBS will screen Jan. 16.

Halas now owns as quarterbacks Ed Brown, George Blanda, Zeke Bratkowski, Rusty Bukich and Knox.

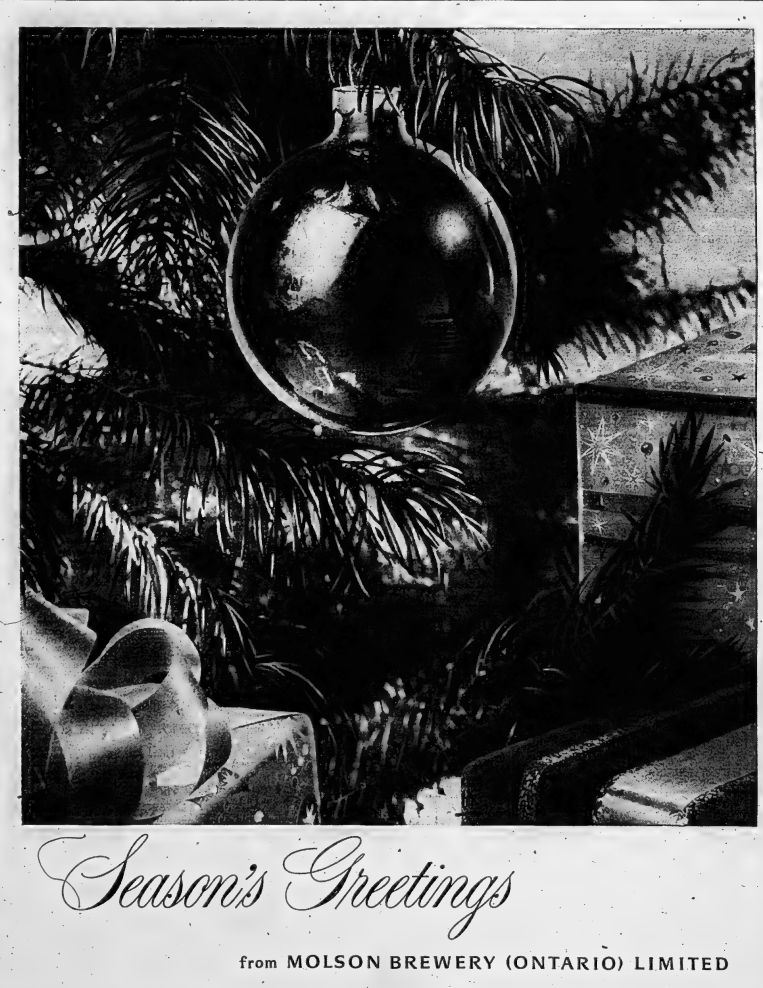
Bear-owned Ronnie played last season with Toronto on a so-called loan-out by Halas.

"I'm owned by Chicago but I get paid by Toronto," Ronnie said.

"But the last time I saw Halas he invited me to his ranch in Arizona this winter. He said we'd talk over plans and plays.

Knox has appeared in the uniforms of nine teams—high school, college and pro football—and he is only 24.

The string: Inglewood, Beverly Hills and Santa Monica high schools, California and UCLA, the Big Four Hamilton Tiger-Cats, Calgary Stampeders of the Western Interprovincial Football Union, Toronto and Chicago Bears.



Knox in 1957, through his stepfather Harvey, signed a three-year contract with the Bears. Reportedly it was for about $20,000 a year.

What about the split with Harvey? Ronnie said he regrets it became a public matter. But he admitted anything involving the talkative Harvey could hardly be termed confidential.

He said it was built up from numerous clashes of personalities.

"It isn't unnatural for a son to grow away from his father," said Ronnie, who refers to Harvey as his father. "And I guess I just grew up at last."

Harvey now is concentrating on the acting career of Ronnie's pretty sister, Pat.

CITY BLESSED

a mother's anxious question about the future.

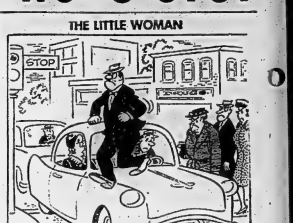
Thousands of men, women and children are streaming into West Berlin from East and West Germany for annual reunions of families split by the Iron Curtain.

"This may be our last reunion," said an East German woman.

When the Soviet ultimatum runs out, the Russians say they intend to end the four - power status of Berlin. Then West Berlin might close the East Berlin border and block East Germans from travelling to West Berlin.

West Berliners, surrounded by Communist troops, have defiantly and overwhelmingly rejected the Soviet bid to convert their metropolis into a defenceless "free city."

POTENTIAL ALLIES



Showing their personal feeling, West Berliners have invited thousands of American, British and French soldiers into their homes for Christmas meals and drinks.

The Allied garrisons, constituting the Western powers' right to be entertaining thousands of German refugees and orphaned children.

Christmas will have some brighter moments this year in East Berlin also. Amid the bombscarred buildings and ruins, new shops have opened, boasting expensive but presentable wares—clothes, some of them imported from Czechoslovakia.

There is more food in the shops. The traditional Christmas goose, a luxury for many years, can be bought reasonably by the average family.

THE LITTLE WOMAN

"I think you're over the white line again."

POPE JOHN

tiff denounced the persecution of Catholics in China in a speech a year ago at a ceremony at which he created new cardinals.

"What has been happening for years in the immense territories beyond the Iron Curtain is too well known to need extensive illustration.

"There is nothing military-like or violent in our attitudes as men of faith, but it is necessary to be watchful in the night which is becoming denser.

"We must be aware of the snares laid by those who are enemies of God even more than the enemies and we must prepare ourselves for the defence of the Christian principles in order to be the bulwark of true justice, now and always."

CONSTRUCTIVE CHRISTMAS

"May this be a constructive Christmas.

"May all those who are listening to this voice through the waves of the air, who are listening to the bells calling for union and prayer in homage to the humble intentions for the sanctification on the new year in that it may become for all the world a Year of justice, of blessing, of goodness and of peace."

During Sunday morning service Rev. Roy Rickard performed the rite of baptism for Donna Lynn, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hart; also Kenneth Lorne and Wendy Lee, infant daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Scott Bain were baptized.

On Thursday evening a number of young people of Centenary United Church enjoyed a party rlee, calling at the homes along the way where they sang carols, which were greatly appreciated. They returned to the church hall where members of the W.A. had prepared a hot supper for them.

24 Ships' Crews Face Christmas On St. Lawrence

MONTREAL (CP) The crews of 25 foreign-owned freighters face a bleak and cheerless Christmas on the ice-filled waters of the St. Lawrence River.

Twelve of the 24 were still riding at anchor in Montreal harbor, awaiting the arrival today of the icebreaker N. B. McLean from Quebec City. Eleven others are anchored at Trois-Rivieres, 90 miles east of Montreal.

The first tank for the two ships will be to free the Transatlantic, stuck fast in mid-channel off the eastern end of Montreal Island, and getting dangerously low on fuel.

Five more freighters were held in the ice which forms quickly on the shallow, slow - moving waters of Lake St. Peter, 60 miles east of Montreal.

These are waiting for assistance from the icebreaker D'Iberville, ordered down from Quebec City Monday when ice formed in the bay over the water prevented her from continuing the task of cutting a channel through the narrows near Quebec Bridge, 100 miles from the trapped ships.

FIVE AT QUEBEC

In addition to the 19 ocean-bound ships still stuck in the ice, five more were at Quebec City waiting for the ice to break. The icebreaker Labrador to escort them the 650 miles to the ocean, and another, the British-owned Beaverlodge, anchored at Trois-Rivieres, until better visibility let her continue.

The task of freeing the ships is complicated by below - normal temperatures which cause fog to form over the relatively warm waters.

No navigation is possible at night since all navigation lights were removed at the close of the normal shipping season.

Montreal Harbor's water level rose 18 inches on Monday, but officials say another 18-inch rise could send water pouring into low - lying communities on the south shore of the St. Lawrence opposite Montreal.

Astrological Forecast

By CARROLL RIGHTER

Wednesday, December 24

Aries (March 21 to April 19) — Leave yourself plenty of spare time today for the unexpected dropping in of friends bearing pretty gifts or an opportunity to further your career. Call your friends and wish them well. Be famous and charming, poised and lovely.

Taurus (April 20 to May 20) — Let your home be the main centre of activity today. Co-operate with members of the tribe, and you will be generously benefited. Also, read your paper and be alive to all the opportunities that are about you. Progress.

Gemini (May 21 to June 21) — Get into the active world of business. You will be able to buy just exactly what it is you have been shopping for in vain for so long. Get into the full Christmas spirit and be a blessing to all, a friend to whomever you meet.

Moon Children (June 22 to July 21) — Silently go about being charitable to the unfortunate, befriend a true Moon Child. Excellent then for a few contented hours with the choice few you love the most. P. M. have visions with truly enlightened minds.

Leo (July 22 to Aug. 21) — Strangely, this is the best day to get together with associates and friends to work out some very fine business deals . Then be ready for party throwing or attending. Some marvelous things will happen for you. Be gay and the true Lion.

Virgo (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) — Be out and about as much as you can today for best results. "I serve" is your motto. No better or more appropriate time exists than now to express yourself to the full. Your charitable deeds will win you many hearts. Blessings.

Libra (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) — The perfect day to step out of the dull routine existence and be with the most influential and charming people possible. Go to a swanky place where you find out there is more to life than just work.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) — An opportunity to consult with influential person and get backing from him or her for your most cherished aims should be welcomed, but be sure you assist your benefactor in some tangible way, too. Be grateful.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) — Fine day to impress others with your understanding of big business, affairs of state, and your eagerness to join with them in carrying through with ideas. Read your paper, other periodicals for latest trends and information. Grow.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) — Doing your best and most efficient work is the surest thing on the agenda today. Do very little talking and listen to good ideas of others and learn instead of trying to teach. Tonight, have fun romantically. Be gay.

Aquarius (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) — A perfect day to get started on all the joyous affairs of the happy holiday season. Be affectionate and get everything in delightful order for tomorrow. Entertain tonight as is the family custom, or be entertained by others you love.

Pisces (Feb. 20 to March 20) — Be sure your house in town or lodge is just perfect for tonight's reception and tomorrow's big dinner. Express tangibly your high regard and love for members of family now. Grow in stature and you will undoubtedly receive wonderful gifts.

If your child is born today . . . The fine child born today will have the great faculty of taking what is antiquated and commonplace and by adding a touch here and there make it seem like the most modern of inventions or modes. A good education is a must here, and don't neglect the all-important trades, either. A combined course will do wonders, but lack of education could produce a tragic figure on the road of life. Appreciate your wonderful youngster.

NOT FUSSY

TORQUAY, England (CP) — A full-page advertisement by a racecourse bookie appears in the parish magazine for St. John's church here. Facing it between other advertisements is the editorial note: "It would be greatly appreciated if readers would kindly support our advertisers as much as possible."

OTHER USES

COLDREED, Eng. (CP) — Residents of this Kent village in the 1930-40 years collected more than $2,000 toward a community hall. Now they have decided they don't need one, and the money is being used to help beautify the village.

British Columbia Appears On Verge of Greatest Era Of Development in History

By W. L. JONES
Canadian Press Staff Writer

VANCOUVER (CP) — They're starting to fashion the keys to unlock the industrial treasure chest of British Columbia's northland and to tap the great power potential of her mighty rivers.

They're not sure yet the keys will fit—surveys are under way. The huge projects would take years and there is controversy about how the development should be done. But generally speaking, B.C. appears on the verge of the greatest era of development in her 97 years as a province.

As a result of plans being made by the multi-million-dollar interests of Swedish industrialist Axel Wenner-Gren and backed by the provincial government, a $1,000,000,000 industrial empire could emerge in the north. Envisaged are pulp mills, mining, a high-speed monorail railway and perhaps even a steel industry.

VAST POWER PROJECTS

In conjunction with this, the Wenner-Gren interests say that 8,000,000 horsepower of electrical energy could be developed on the northern Peace River since, not to mention federal - provincial plans to harness the might of the Columbia.

Apart from these massive plans, which are expected to harden in 1959, the Pacific province will be in for a good share of lesser projects.

The B.C. Electric, giant private-enterprise power source, has announced a $35,000,000 expansion program for the year. More than 90 per cent of it will be devoted to new electrical facilities. The largest outlay will be $22,000,000 for the second stage of a $56,000,000 hydro development at Bridge River to provide an additional 345,000 horsepower before 1961.

A large-scale thermal power plant, to cost $7,000,000, is under construction for the BCE at Port Mann, 15 miles east of Vancouver. It will have a capacity of 134,000 horsepower, the generators fed by natural gas in the same manner as a jet engine. The first two units of a four-unit plant are near completion.

The publicly-owned B.C. Power Commission also will expand its facilities. Work will go on at the giant Kitimat development of the Aluminum Company of Canada where a mountain has been turned into a powerhouse that will eventually generate 1,000,000 horsepower.

PGE EXTENSION

During 1958 the provincially owned Pacific Great Eastern Railway, now a modern diesel road, completed a $63,000,000 extension of 265 miles northeast from Prince George to Fort St. John. The line, begun as a seven-mile private road in 1912, became Canada's third largest railway with 790 miles of track.

Premier Bennett has predicted that "in our time" the PGE will extend into the Yukon and Alaska. An American congressional committee now is studying a possible rail route to Alaska from the Canadian line.

With Alaska now a U.S. state, B.C. pressures are expected to be renewed for "corridors" through the Alaska panhandle to give the B.C. northland outlets to tidewater on the coast.

The proposed Wenner-Gren development overshadows other developments. The 75 - year - old Swedish industrialist — millionaire pit has posted a $500,000 bond with the provincial government and undertaken a $5,000,000 survey of 40,000 square miles of the Rocky Mountain trench, a huge geological fault running through B.C. to the Yukon.

Under the agreement the Wenner-Gren interests will start a railway—perhaps a high - speed single-track monorail some 200 miles in length—by April 1960. It has agreed to build a 1,000,000-tons-a-day pulp mill of timber is available in the region. Wenner-Gren said he won't pocket a nickel of profit but turn any profits into a charitable foundation.

CALLED LAND GRAB

Political opponents of Mr. Bennett have attacked the proposal as a land grab. They have criticized the proposal in the same way they criticized the premier's 1958 proposal to have the giant Kaiser interests in the U.S. develop the Columbia River. That project was stopped by federal legislation giving the federal government jurisdiction over the Columbia as an international river.

Recently the newly - formed Peace River Power Company Limited, a Wenner-Gren subsidiary, announced preliminary surveys showed it financially and technically possible to generate 8,000,000 horsepower on the Peace River.

The federal government appears, however, to favor Columbia development. Acting Prime Minister Howard Green recently announced Ottawa is going ahead with Columbia development plans and added its postponement in favor of "some other power scheme" might sink the Columbia project for a long time.

Premier Bennett has said his government is ready to go to work on the Columbia project as soon as Ottawa can settle with the U.S. the question of downstream benefits. B.C. is demanding 50 per cent of the benefits of any Canadian development of the river.

Meanwhile, he is supporting the Peace River proposals, saying this gives the government a stronger hand in bargaining with the U.S. which needs Columbia River power.

5 Million Citizens Go On Hospital Insurance Jan. 1

Quebec and P.E.I. Have Not Yet Signed Up

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario enters Canada's $430,000,000 national hospital insurance scheme Jan. 1.

"Our program will take care of the catastrophic incidence of sickness," says Premier Frost.

Expected to cost $210,000,000 in 1959, the Ontario program provides free coverage during January and February for the 5,200,000 residents and their 1,300,000 partial premiums in advance.

Ontario's plan starts at the same time as similar programs in Nova Scotia and New Brunswick. P.E.I. and Quebec previews started last July 1. Quebec and Prince Edward Island have not yet signed up.

Total cost to the federal government is estimated at 160,000,000 for 1959.

ONTARIO SHARES COST

Ontario, the federal government is expected to pay $70,000,000 of the $210,000,000 cost. Premiums are expected to yield more than $75,000,000 and the municipalities will contribute about $65,000,000. However, about $20,000,000 of the province's share is to come from funds now earmarked for annual hospital grants.

Ontario's 1959 budget is anticipated over 91 per cent of the 5,623,000 persons receiving free hospital treatment under private insurance. Registration was compulsory for persons working for a firm employing 25 or more. About 1,200,000 others enrolled voluntarily.

They are signed up early paid March premiums, with January and February coverage free. This developed into a negotiation delaying benefits until the start of the third month following the month in which application is made. Thus, anyone enrolling in January won't be covered until March 1.

HOSPITAL RATE UP

Another incentive has been an increase in hospital rates. Hospital authorities say the new rates are all-inclusive, designed to stabilize financing by using a flat rate instead of adding extras on an individual basis. The new rates for semi-private and ward are $17 a day compared to the old $8 or $9.50.

Under the insurance plan, monthly premiums of $2.10 for single persons and $5.25 for families provide standard ward care in any of the province's 226 hospitals—$5 of them general hospitals, 18 Red Cross outposts, 15 mental, 13 tuberculosis, 13 chronic and four convalescent.

The insurance doesn't cover fees for doctors, anaesthetists or ambulances. But it covers everything else, including nursing, x-rays, drugs, operating rooms, laboratory work and emergency treatment for accidents or sudden illnesses.

WHILE NECESSARY

Patients can stay in hospital as long as medically necessary but Dr. R. W. Ian Urquhart, chairman of the Ontario Hospital Services Commission, offers a warning:

"This doesn't mean that we're going to build hospitals for hospitals for the rest of their lives. Doctors and hospitals

ATLAS MISSILE BLAZES BACK TO EARTH IN MINUTES

4,000-Mile Flight Over Ocean Success

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The air force has shot an Atlas missile on a successful 4,000-mile flight across the Atlantic just six days after its predecessor became the world's first U.S. satellite.

The latest Atlas triumph—the third big one in a row—was announced some four hours after the blastoff of the 80-foot war rocket late Tuesday night.

There was no official word from the launching site, but Colonel John Powers said at air force ballistic missile division headquarters in Inglewood, Calif., that preliminary reports showed the Atlas test ran smoothly.

AFTER OTHER SHOTS

The Atlas now in orbit is signalling President Eisenhower's Peace on Earth message to the world.

Powers said efforts were being made to recover the nose cone of the rocket after a blazing re-entry from space, but it was not known how successful the recovery operation this would be forthcoming.

Tuesday night's launching marked the first appearance of a new Atlas intercontinental ballistic missile called the "C series." The missile featured some special modifications, most of them classified, which should result in lightening the Atlas payload by about 100 pounds.

LOOKED GOOD AT FIRST

The first Atlas C shot appeared to be highly successful. As the 120-ton gleaming rocket climbed, an eerie white glow was cast over the launching area.

As the rocket moved streaked out of sight, the Atlas satellite was making its 48th sweep around the globe in an orbit that is expected to last several more weeks.

The military rarely reports the exact type of missile about which failed such as this one.

Prior to the launch there were unconfirmed reports that another missile attempt would be made or that something else was aboard. Neither of these reports could be confirmed, however.

OTTAWA (CP) — Eric Nullmeyer will eat his Christmas dinner in jail — for the 26th consecutive year.

The 47-year-old native of Norway, pleaded guilty Tuesday to waving a hunting knife in a downtown restaurant. He admitted taking the hunting knife from some other artists' packed car.

Looking over Nullmeyer's record, the magistrate noted he had eaten Christmas dinner in jail 25 consecutive years.

"The least we can do is give you your Christmas dinner. One month in jail."

"Thank you, sir. Merry Christmas to you," rasped Eric.

"Merry Christmas to you," said Magistrate Sauve.

World's Christians Prepare For Services, Family Feasts

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Religious services in Christian communities throughout the world today commemorated the eve of the day almost 2,000 years ago when the Prince of Peace was born in Bethlehem.

Thousands of pilgrims gathered in Bethlehem to offer prayers for peace in a world which lives in the shadow of war. Many millions more made the short pilgrimage to their community centres or worship for Christmas Eve services.

The theme of "peace on earth, goodwill to men" was repeated in thousands of churches.

For many it was a day of irritation beyond that usually caused by the last-minute rush to the stores.

New Yorkers still were without city newspapers as a two-week old strike of deliverymen continued. Thousands of soldiers expected for plane space made scarce by the strikes by two airline services that day, Christmas Mexico. Many switched to crowded trains or buses. Most more couldn't get home for the annual reunion.

In Bethlehem, the schedule of Christmas Eve ran from noon through midnight services.

Between 4,000 and 5,000 foreign tourists crowded into the bleak little hilltop town 10 miles south of Jerusalem where Christ was born.

There were another 1,727 Christians from Israel, mostly Arabs received Israeli permission to cross the Palestine war truce line in Jerusalem to attend Bethlehem services. About 200 foreign diplomats, clergymen and others from Israel also were given permission to visit shrines across the line in Jordan.

Pilgrims gathered in the Holy Land which swelled the pilgrimage were refused in the Gaza Strip between Israel and Egypt. Non-Christians from India took part of the ground floor of the plane that border while United Nations Emergency Force troops from western nations enjoyed the religious holidays.

UN Secretary - General Dag Hammarskjold and the UNEF commander, Indian Gen. E. L. M. Burns, joined the troops at Gaza where they were decorating 20 lighted Christmas trees.

DAMAGED HURON MAY MAKE PORT FOR CHRISTMAS

Destroyer Saguenay Reaches Leaking Ship

HALIFAX (CP) — The damaged Canadian destroyer Huron pounded through heavy Atlantic swells today in an attempt to make home port by Christmas.

The destroyer Saguenay reached the leaking vessel late Tuesday night about 400 miles off the coast. Despite 35-mile-an-hour winds and rough seas, the ships were reported proceeding at 12 knots.

A navy spokesman said the frigate Buckingham was expected to reach the two ships early today.

It looks like they may make it by Christmas Day," he said. The Huron was from the Mediterranean with a skeleton crew of 150, Huron sprang a leak Tuesday when she encountered gales and heavy seas southeast of Newfoundland.

BIBLICAL EXCHANGE

The navy's Atlantic Command headquarters sent an official message to the Huron: "Trials 30, verse 20 — Philippians 2, verse 13."

The Bible passage reads: "And though the Lord gave you the bread of adversity and the water of affliction, yet shall see thy teachers, and thine eyes shall see thy beloved, as ye have always obeyed, not as in my presence only, but way much more in my absence, work out your own salvation with fear and trembling."

Within an hour the Huron radioed the reply: "Job 4, verse 3."

The reference reads:

"Thy words have upholden him that was falling, and thou hast strengthened the feeble knees."

WINDS SUBSIDE

Weather moderated and winds subsided to 20 miles an hour Tuesday afternoon. The spokesman said he did not know whether the Huron was towing the Saguenay William Howe, son of former Prime Minister Mackenzie Howe of Port Arthur, had been able to send-down a diver to investigate the damage.

RCAF bombers from Greenwood, N.S., were also over the Huron until the Saguenay arrived.

It was believed Huron had sprung a plate near her bow. Water filled the forward compartment but the rest of the ship was dry. The spokesman said the vessel was in immediate danger and no men were injured.

Eight Persons Killed in Crash Of Airliner

BOURNEMOUTH, Eng. (Reuters)—Eight persons were killed and three injured when a British European airliner crashed near here on a training flight today.

A police spokesman in this south coast resort town 100 miles from London confirmed the toll. The Viscount-type passenger airliner, now on regular service with British European, was expected. The low Tuesday night was 29 below.

Big Dam On Nile May Be Finished By West Germans

Firms Awaiting Decision Of Bonn Govt. on Plan

CAIRO (AP) — Reliable West German informants said Tuesday the West German government has not yet taken an official stand to provide insurance guarantees to German firms which made an offer to contribute to building the Aswan High Dam.

The informants said that right now the whole question is hanging but predicted that Bonn would make its position known sometime today.

A foreign office spokesman said in Bonn Monday West German industrial group had offered to contribute 200,000,000 marks ($48,000,000) for the project.

He added the German government is considering whether or not to provide guarantees to German firms through the government - operated insurance plan called the Hermes scheme, which pledges to pick up any losses suffered by German firms making foreign investments.

West German and Egyptian chambers of commerce sources said German firms which made offers are represented by Otto Kahn by German industrialist Rudolf Staerker. The 71 - year - old industrialist Staerker has been interested in the dam for many years. They said he spent a lot of time and money time making an on-the-spot-study of the project.

Staerker is the Cairo representative of the West German firms of Dortmunder Union of Brueckenbau and Hochtief of Frankfurt-am-Main, Egypt's official news agency reported as being interested in the project.

The morning papers prominently displayed the story on their front pages. The daily Al Ahram, however, quoting U.A.R. official sources, said the West German offer would be used to finance the dam's second stage, adding that the first stage of the project would be financed by 400,000,000 rubles loaned by the U.A.R. to the Soviet Union for this purpose. The first stage is expected to be completed in four years.

Three Dakotas From Trenton Joining Search

TRENTON, Ont. (CP) — Three Dakota aircraft from the RCAF base here prepared to take off soon today to join the search for missing aircraft in Northern Ontario for a small civilian plane missing with two men aboard since Tuesday afternoon.

The small blue and white plane left Hearst Tuesday afternoon on a 30-minute flight to Geraldton for three hours in the air. Aboard were Jean-Paul Gagne, 24, and owner Ronald Marrier, both of Hearst.

RCAF personnel have been sent to Hearst to help with the ground search. Air force spokesman Corporal Meades.

The weather office reports lightest snow is falling in the area 140 miles northwest of Timmins, and light to moderate winds are expected. The low Tuesday night was 29 below.

Christmas Comes Every Day for 21 Children of the Leakes of Nazko

Written for The Canadian Press
By RON POWELL

QUESNEL, B. C. (CP)—Christmas comes every day for the children of Nazko and their 21 children.

Two couples, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Leake and Mr. and Mrs. Bill Leake, have used Christian principles and a genuine love for children to form two of the happiest and most unusual households in the Cariboo cattle country.

Clarence and Elsie Leake have four children, two still at home, and 10 foster children. Bill and Francis Leake have four children of their own, three at home, five welfare children and one little boarder.

The children range from five to 18 years. Most of them living in the two ranch homes came to the Nazko district, isolated 70 miles west of here, as problem children who just couldn't be handled in other homes.

Issue of Firemen On CPR Diesels Again Raised

MONTREAL (CP) — The issue of firemen-less diesels on CPR yard and freight diesel locomotives already the cause of two bitter strikes and prolonged negotiations — has been raised once again by the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen (BLF).

The question, though settled by an agreement which ended a 10-week strike last May, was also opened again Tuesday night when Conciliation Commissioner J. E. Gamble, announced he has asked the federal labor department to appoint a conciliation board to adjudicate a contract dispute between the union and CPR.

If the board is appointed, Mr. Gamble said, the union intends to bring up the issue of whether the helpers are needed on diesel engines operating in the yards or on freight trains.

TWICE STOPPED WORK

The union suspended CPR operations to a halt for nine days in January, 1957, over the same question and later interfered back to work when the federal government appointed a commission headed by Supreme Court Justice Ivor L. Kellock to study the problem.

In May, the enginemen went out again and ended the strike 10 days later when an agreement based on the commission report was signed. The firemen are not necessary on freight and yard diesels. The railway agreed to keep on all those employed at the time in that capacity, allowing them to move to other jobs through normal promotion channels.

But the union says it bowed to this proposal only because of federal threats to end the strike by legislation, and in negotiations for a new contract it replaces that which expired May 31, it tried, in vain, to raise the issue again.

ALSO ON RAILS

The union also is demanding an 18-per-cent wage increase, which, if granted, would be applied in October pending settlement of a wage dispute. It is also in a railway and its 130,000 non-operating employees—since settled — but the issue is not involved and has not resumed.

The BLF is also involved in a dispute over firemen. It has asked for sole authority to run diesels on all passenger trains and the question now is before a conciliation board.

Today's Chuckle

THE WEATHER

TORONTO (CP) Synopsis — Colder with snow flurries in late Tuesday and early today resuling a white Christmas for almost all sections of the province. Variable cloud and sunshine are forecast for both today and Thursday with temperatures remaining a little below their seasonal values. No major storms is instanted for over the holiday but some snowflurries may be expected, particularly along the shores of the Great Lakes.

7 Die, 12 Hurt As Bus Collides With Two Trucks

PULASKI, Tenn. (AP) — Seven persons were killed and 12 injured when a Greyhound bus collided Tuesday night with two trucks while trying to speed on a wet, fog-shrouded hill at twilight.

Flames burst out in the bus minutes after it crashed into a gully seven miles south of here, but a majority of the estimated 23 passengers aroused out of were rescued before the fire reached them.

Three of the dead were badly burned. The others apparently were thrown from the bus.

The bus driver, who had received an award for 13 years of safe driving last summer, was among the dead. He was Samuel Pearces, 30, of Murfreesboro, Tenn.

Twelve persons, including one of the truck drivers, were treated at hospital. Six were released after treatment and two were sent to a Nashville hospital for more critical condition.

SLOW CRASH OCCURRED

Officers pieced together this account of the crash:

The 90-passengers, semi-trailer bus, bound from Birmingham to Cincinnati, was passing a coal truck in the fog when a south-bound semi-trailer truck loomed ahead.

The bus whipped back toward the right lane, hooked bumpers with the coal truck and then crashed almost head-on into the tractor-trailer, dragging the coal truck with it.

This impact broke the bus loose from the coal truck. The bus careened 75 yards farther, crashed to a stop upright in the ditch, catching fire. The tractor-trailer remained almost at the point of impact.

The coal truck stopped, its brakes locked.

The collision opened a hole in the left side of the bus through which some of the passengers escaped.

Police Drag Rhee's Foes From Assembly

SEOUL (AP) President Syngman Rhee's Liberal party used strong-armed police today to drive stalwarts of the new Democratic party from the South Korean National Assembly chamber.

Today speaker Lee Ki Poong called for 300 stalwarts—some of them judo experts, and the police attacked.

Then the Liberal majority pushed through a controversial bill which, if it becomes charge will adversely affect civil rights and press freedom.

11 Children Found in Cold Shack Treated for Frostbite, Malnutrition

MONTREAL (CP) — Eleven children ranging in ages from nine months to 13 years were taken to hospital Tuesday night suffering frostbite and malnutrition after they were found huddled with their mother and crippled grandmother in an unheated shack.

Mayor James Guerin of suburban Cote St. Catherine said the family had apparently been abandoned. A bottle of frozen milk was the only food found in the shack, at a St. Lawrence Seaway construction site.

Mr. Gurin said he found the family while making his annual Christmas rounds with clothing and food for the poor. Hospital officials said none of the children was in serious condition, but that they and the two women had probably gone without solid food for a considerable time.

The children were said to be in better condition than the children, two girls and nine boys,

Municipal Winter Work Plan In Full Swing Across Canada

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government already is committed to contribute $3,900,000 to help municipalities provide winter work for unemployed.

Under the winter works plan, announced Dec. 1, the money will be matched by provincial and municipal funds to provide winter jobs for 587 provincially-approved projects for federal assistance.

The labor department has approved 381 projects, with an aggregate cost of $27,000,000. The rest are being processed. The approved projects are expected to provide for 9,400 man - years of work.

Officials administering the program, in which all 10 provinces are taking part, said they expect many more projects to be submitted when municipal councils take over in the new year.

Municipalities in Quebec and Prince Edward Island, which decided only a few days ago to enter the program, have not yet submitted any projects for federal aid.

A breakdown by provinces on projects approved gives Newfoundland and Labrador 15, New Brunswick 31, Ontario 223, Manitoba 11, Saskatchewan 41, Alberta 27 and British Columbia 40.

The program, scheduled to end April 30 next year, is contingent by further incentives by five provincial governments. Manitoba will pay 30 per cent of the payroll costs, leaving its municipal share with only 20 per cent. In Ontario, Prince Edward Island, Saskatchewan and Alberta the 25 per cent. Alberta has offered to arrange the financing of the municipalities' shares.

Icebreakers May Reach Trapped Vessels Today

MONTREAL (CP) — Old river hands are predicting that if the weather holds, Christmas Day will be the day the ice-breakers Lamointe and N.B. McLean punch their way through the ice-choked jam and into Montreal harbor.

But for the 250 deep-sea mariners aboard the 11 vessels trapped in the harbor by the downstream jam, the Christmas season would be more welcome some other day.

The men on the foreign vessels are thousands of miles from home, but Christmas shore leave in this ordinarily lively seaport would have compensations. If the icebreakers arrive, they will work on duty manoeuvring the ships downstream.

"We can't afford to sit around," said an officer of one of the freighters. "If the icebreakers clear a channel, we'll have to sail. We can't risk being frozen in here all winter."

The Lamointe and McLean ground away at the ice Tuesday, aided by temperatures in the 20s, and are to go at it again today.

The icebreakers must approach the harbor with caution. The waters of Montreal harbor have swollen to the 32-foot, five-inch level. The level of water is about 15 feet higher than the river level at Sorel, 60 miles downriver. If the icebreakers release too much water at once, the river would rise rapidly, causing shore ice to break away with the possibility of forming impenetrable jams.

Plenty of Snow Around to Make White Christmas

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Santa Claus and his reindeer probably will not find much fresh snow in their tour of Canada this Christmas Eve. But they should find their sleds travelling over a blanket of white which remains over wide areas of the country.

Mild weather with milder temperatures in the west, and a heavy man says there should be plenty of snow around to make it a truly white Christmas in most parts of Canada, which warmed up a bit Tuesday after a cold spell, was due for new winter-like temperatures.

Trains and planes were running full schedules in the Christmas holiday period. Icebreakers were to close today until Monday, giving folks a four-day fling.

Colder air returned to Ontario, but no record lows were expected.

Such frigid Northern Ontario communities as Timmins, Kapuskasing and Moosonee faced temperatures of around five below zero today. A drop to about 25 below was forecast for tonight.

Montreal was in for a reading of 15 above today, dropping to five overnight. The weather in the Maritimes will remain mainly fine and cold today. Little change was indicated for Christmas Day.

Maj. Greenwood, S.A. Vocal Group Kiwanis Guests

Members of the Belleville Kiwanis Club were installed with Christmas spirit Tuesday when they had as guests for the annual Christmas meeting, Major Victor Greenwood and seven members of the vocal group of the Belleville Salvation Army Citadel Corps.

The Salvation Army vocal and instrumental group sang and played several well known Christmas carols and West Indian Negro spirituals. They were heartily received and highly commended for their "musical salute to Christmas". The program was under the direction of Major Greenwood, who gave an inspiring sermonette based on the story of the Nativity, in which he emphasized the real meaning of Christmas.

Members of the S.A. vocal group participating in the program were George Ellarby, Jack Hatfield, Ken Leasek, Bob Leasek, Arthur Fudge, Herbert Wood and Martin Cooper.

They were introduced by Major Greenwood and thanked by Bob Frederick, who also paid tribute to the Citadel Corps for its efforts in providing Christmas for those who, if not for them, might not have any Christmas.

President Charles Lush added his appreciation and appreciation to Major Greenwood and members of the vocal group. "The Salvation Army is a part of the Christmas observance in the Kiwanis Club," he stated, in noting members of the Citadel Corps have been participants in the annual Kiwanis Christmas meeting for several years.

Prior to the program, carol singing by Kiwanians was led by Joe MacKay with Mrs. Grace Calvert providing accompaniment on the piano.

President Lush, Gerry Whitsett announced the possibility of a conference of the presidents and committee chairmen for division 6A to be held in Belleville some time in February.

The long distance guest at Tuesday's meeting was Earle Boyd of Greenly, Indiana, a frequent visitor to the club.

Father's Christmas Thoughts About His Son in Prison

OTTAWA (CP) — What are a father's thoughts at Christmas about his son in prison?

"Each time I walk past the gates to start the early morning shift I wish I tell myself.

If it was my fault that placed you behind bars by seven years, I should remain while he goes free."

Those two words taken from an article in the December issue of the inmate newspaper publication of the federal penitentiary at Kingston, the K.P. Telescope.

Anonymously written, it appears mainly consists of the reflections, following a pre-Christmas visit to the penitentiary, of a father whose son is serving time for robbery.

VISIT TO A STRANGER

"I do not visit the boy I called my son, but a stranger", he writes. "I come to see my failure.

"Why is my son a convict? Was I to blame? Was there one thing or was there a multitude of things that I had done wrong that brought this all about? If so someone should answer me.

"There have been nights when I lay awake trying to understand and understanding only that I could not.

At another point he says:

"Each year for the past I have limped my visits to have one clean Christmas with him.

"Yesterday, in the cold room with its pathetic attempts at decor, I waited until a door opened and a younger stranger walked in.

LITTLE TO SAY

"In his eyes there was still the eager, hopeful gladness I remembered, but otherwise he was a stranger and there was little to say about.

"For the 20th time in four years I made excuses for his mother. How can I tell him that I cannot bring her here, that what she writes is the picture of what he was—not what he is becoming?

"Each Christmas his mother puts aside another year. She counts the days and the months and the years the same as he does.

"All she lives for is the Christmas when he will return. I have yet to meet a time for his release, so my son, my son, will never return."

Holloway St. United Church Scene of Carol Pageant

A very successful Christmas carol pageant of the Nativity was presented on Sunday evening at Holloway Street United Church by the church school and by the junior and senior choirs.

The program, which was presented in a packed church, commenced with a concert duet by Barry and Brent Daniels entitled "The Holy City".

The two choirs entered the church and proceeded to the chancel carrying lighted candles and singing the first Christmas hymn "Silent Night".

As a prelude to the pageant proper Miss Judith Robertson rendered a solo, "Come to the Stable With Jesus".

The pageant was in four scenes portraying different parts of the Christmas Story and was presented on a special platform erected in front of the chancel sanctuary.

The first scene entitled "Mary The Mother" opened with the entry of the angels heralding the birth of the Christ Child. The angels were played by Sally Craig, Judy Carlisle, Gail Murch Ivey, Lynn Austin, Margaret Lewis, Kathy May, Diana Desmond, Carol Parliament, Janet Parliament and Jane Robertson.

The angels were followed by the reader dressed in the garb of a temple priest and portrayed by Steve Wilson. It was his part to narrate the lines, from the scriptures appropriate to the scene. He was accompanied by two monitors, Jane Ketcheson and Bonnie Hobbs.

"Mary" and "Joseph" were next to enter during the singing of "Softly Mary" by Audrey Elgie and Jim Chumbley. Mary read the line solo "Lullaby Baby Little Son" whilst the choirs sang "Lullaby Jesus". Then came the "Good Christian Men Rejoice", "Come, Softly Come and Worship" and "Away in a Manger".

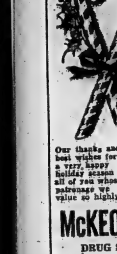
The second scene entitled "The Shepherds Find the Child" brought on first an old shepherd in the person of Ingolf Peterson who then bought on the other shepherds Judy Bonisteel, Jane Tilker, Richard Hughes, Victor Skurat and Trevor Wilson.

The shepherds then commenced with a solo by Mary in the person of Audrey Elgie entitled "A Child Thou Art". This was followed by the choirs singing the following carols — "High in the Heavens", "The Holly and the Ivy", "Bring a Torch Jeanette, Isabella", "See the Dear Little Jesus", "The Coventry Carol" and singing of "The First Noel".

For the third scene entitled "The Kings. Their Gifts", the kings were represented by Barbara Kempfer, Peter Lewis and Gary Wardle. Each king was preceded by a page who carried the king's gift to the manger, the pages were Gordon Bateman, Alan Jackson and Bill Lowther. Music for this scene comprised "When the Saviour Christ Was Born", "I Saw Three Ships Come Sailing In", and "Old Os and Ass, Stood Holy One".

Before the fourth scene the congregation were invited to present their gifts to the Lord represented by the offering which was received by the 1959 communicants class during the singing of the well known carol "As With Gladness Men of Old".

The gifts were carried to the manger during the fourth scene by Those participating in this scene were Sandra Bateman, Marilyn Towlsend, Barbara Jones, Claire Wilson, Marcia Townsend, Rodney Elgie and Harold Townsend. Dale Vader and Donald Parliament. A "Modern Day Nativity" by Mary Harwood.



The music for this scene was "What Shall I Give to the Child in the Manger" and "High in the Heavens".

The program concluded by the reader, Steve Wilson, pronouncing the benediction after which the choir received carrying lighted candles and singing "I Bring To All Ye Faithful".

Much credit for a very fine performance should be given to those who preformed and also to those behind the scenes such as the pageant directors, Clifford Vernier who accompanied on the musical selections at the organ and Alfred Hughes. They were assisted in their tasks by Mrs. C. Vader, Mrs. D. Reid and Ronald Jones. Mrs. W. Townsend was production manager and to her goes the credit for the fact everything dovetailed perfectly and went on without a hitch.

Mrs. D. Harwood was responsible for the realistic costumes and makeup. Ronald Jones took care of the special lighting. Ushers for the evening were ten girls from the Junior Church School.

Following the pageant, refreshments were served by the performers by the Evening Group of the W.A.

Our thanks and best wishes for a very happy holiday season to all of you whose patronage is of value so highly.

CHRISTMAS

The Lady Dorcas bag worked wonders. It consists of generous amounts of love and understanding, coupled with giving the children their share of responsibility and keeping them busy.

Each of the girls has a cow to milk and there are two Shetland ponies that have to be fed and watered. They all take turns at doing the dishes and they each have their own rooms and must make their beds.

The family has been caught up in the excitement and confusion of preparing for Christmas.

WORK AT ODD JOBS

The children earn money earned throughout the year at odd jobs and watching they must learn to buy gifts for their parents have to turn made articles and there is a gift for each child.

There will be the usual Christmas dinner with the trimmings to make the smiles a little brighter.

Leslie and Roger have also years ago when Clarence Leake of his home came to the Maitland Valley for a brief visit with a friend and remained as rancher.

After two years Clarence got in touch with Miss Ethel Dunn, wife Francis and talked them into coming out.

Clarence and Elsie had four boys and no girls, so they decided to apply for a welfare child.

NO PROBLEMS

The girl had a young brother who also needed a home so Bill and Francis decided to take both into their household. After this arrangement was made application both families grew by leaps and bounds.

There was no problem in working our own children in with the foster children. Francis says:

"No, we haven't got one age in the bunch. They are all within normal growth."

And home is two houses nestled in the Nicola Valley where there is laughter, singing, music and goodwill every day of the year.

TV IN RUSSIA

Christmas brought no relaxation of tension in Germany, where the Communist East German regime said 17,000,000 were expected to be lighted this year. Residents of West Berlin were required to celebrate the holiday but wondered if this would be their last Christmas because of Soviet efforts to force the Western powers out of the city. 110 miles behind the Iron Curtain.

The people of Russia's European satellites went to church as the West did. But in Poland, Christmas Eve '81 was just another work day. Those whose faith has survived the Communist government's long campaign against religion celebrated their holidays by the old Russian calendar, and Christmas for them comes Jan. 7.

Westerners in Moscow planned to attend midnight mass and services at their embassies Thursday.

EVEN-DAY SILENCE

Guns were silent around the Communist islands off the coast of Red China of the world's only sites of a shooting war. But the silence was in accordance with the Communist decree of no shelling the Quemoys on even days of the month. The Chinese Nationalist commander-in - chief ordered his troops not to fire back on Christmas Day, but there was no indication that the Communists would observe it on an odd-numbered or shelling day.

Quinte Seniors Play 'Old Boys' On Saturday

The Quinte Secondary School "Old Boys" basketballers will meet see how they stack up against the school's current senior squad at an exhibition game scheduled for the school gym on Saturday evening at 8.30.

The "Old Boys" squad will include a few former court luminaries as Ted Batchelor, Jim Green and Bill Dickey.

The present senior squad feels the "oldtimers" have not got what it takes, so it looks like a good basketball game in the making.

The game is an annual affair and creates a lot of interest, schoolboy director Jack Sisson says.

ernment's new scheme will be responsible for the success of this plan—the people of the province will have to treat it fairly and not take advantage of it."

Ontario has had to increase hospital beds by 75 per cent in the last 10 years and there have been cases where patients have to wait months for a bed.

Government authorities hope to ease the pressure with a record of hospital construction and homemaking plan for families hit by illness.

The program, being established outside the hospital scheme, calls for 50-50 cost sharing between municipalities and the province.

Dr. Urquhart says "not too many" will be "swept" in by the political operations as a result of the insurance program.

It means creation of a new government agency with the emergency and operating expense of about $2,750,000 a year.

Although the province will take over all insurance for standard ward care, private patients and indigent patients, amount to $8,349,000 last year, their care could continue to be paid directly by the provincial government and municipalities set by the board, subject to increases in provincial grants to municipalities.

Orders to deal with the federal government calls for Ottawa to pay 45 per cent of the cost of operating general, chronic and convalescent hospitals.

But the federal offer doesn't include mental and TB hospitals. Because Ontario has written its insurance benefits the federal contribution there would be only one-third of the total cost.

Ontario already pays nearly all the cost of operating mental and TB hospitals. Mental hospitals cost the province nearly $25,000,000 this year and sanitoriums grants totalled $2,000,000. This would be transferred to the hospital program.

The program will bring an end to maintenance grants to hospitals which have cost Ontario $6,000,000 a year. The provincial government's main responsibility under the plan will be depreciation costs, emergency out-patient services and additional expenses.

Administration is expected to cost from one to about $11,000,000.

Outside of the scheme's financial structure will be federal and provincial capital grants for construction of hospitals and nurses' residences. The grants, worth up to $6,000,000 a year from each government, have been doubled to $2,000 a bed for south of the 60 and a square foot for other areas.

Some wearing a frown.

Soon the stockings would hang
By the chimney with care
But what to put in them? .
We feel such despair.

The children were nestled
All snug in their beds,
What to buy, what to shop?
Buzzes through our poor heads.

Mum with her list
And Dad just confused,
Had just settled down
Not for enthused.

When out of his chair,
Dad rose with a clatter.
Mother, surprised, said,
"What is the matter?"

The light from the lamp
Lit the floor up below,
Where Dad dropped the "Intell"
His face all aglow.

Then to my wondering eyes did appear
An ad in a paper that made it
all clear.
As rapir as eagles our ideas all came.
We whistled and shouted as we checked off each name.

EARRINGS AND BEADS—
CHINA AND SILVER—
ALL JEWELLERY NEEDS."

"The Night Before Christmas"

'Twas the night before Christmas when all through the house,
Not a creature was stirring, not even a mouse,
The stockings were hung by the chimney with care,
In hopes that Saint Nichola soon would be there.

The children were nestled all snug in their beds,
While visions of sugarplums danced in their heads,
And mamma in her 'kerchief and I in my cap,
Had just settled down for a long winter's nap.

When out on the lawn there arose such a clatter,
I sprang from my bed to see what was the matter.
Away to the window I flew like a flash,
Tore open the shutters and threw up the sash.

The moon on the breast of the new-fallen snow,
Gave a lustre of midday to objects below,
When, what to my wondering eyes should appear,
But a miniature sleigh, and eight tiny reindeer,
With a little old driver, so lively and quick,
I knew in a moment it must be St. Nick.

More rapid than eagles his coursers they came,
And he whistled and shouted, and called them by name:
"Now, Dasher! now, Dancer! now, Prancer! and Vixen!
On Comet! On, Cupid! On, Donner! and Blitzen!

To the top of the porch, to the top of the wall!
Now, dash away, dash away, dash away all".
As dry leaves that before the wild hurricane fly,
When they meet with an obstacle, mount to the sky,
So up to the house-top the coursers they flew
With a sleigh full of toys, and St. Nicholas too.

And then in a twinkle, I heard on the roof,
The prancing and pawing of each little hoof.
As I drew in my head, and was turning around,
Down the chimney St. Nicholas came with a bound.

He was dressed all in fur, from his head to his foot,
And his clothes were all tarnished with ashes and soot;
A bundle of toys he had flung on his back.
And he looked like a peddler just opening his pack.
His eyes how they twinkled! His dimples how merry,
His cheeks were like roses, his nose like a cherry.
His droll little mouth was drawn up like a bow,
And the beard on his chin was as white as the snow.

The stump of his pipe he held tight in his teeth,
And the smoke, it encircled his head like a wreath.
He had a broad face and a little round belly,
That shook when he laughed, like a bowl full of jelly,

He was chubby and plump, a right jolly old elf.
And I laughed when I saw him, in spite of myself.
A wink of his eye, and a twist of his head,
Soon gave me to know I had nothing to dread;

He spoke not a word, but when straight to his work,
And filled all the stockings; then turned with a jerk,
And laying his finger aside of his nose,
And giving a nod, up the chimney he rose,

He sprang to his sleigh, to his team gave a whistle,
And away they all flew like the down on a thistle.
But I heard him exclaim as he drove out of sight,
"Happy Christmas to all and to all a good night."

West Europeans Interested in Russian Proposal

LONDON (Reuters)—West European diplomats today displayed major interest in a new Soviet proposal for East-West talks on disarmament.

The Soviet news agency Tass said Tuesday night that Russia would be willing to attend such talks if the West did not insist that German reunification should be discussed first.

Tass noted that a final statement issued at the conclusion of a meeting of NATO leaders in Paris last week had called the settlement of the European security problem with a previous settlement of the German question.

NO OBSTACLES

It said if this is NATO's plower is not abandoned "there will be no unsurmountable obstacles for a successful settlement of European security.

Diplomatic quarters in London said the Kremlin may be opening the way for genuine negotiations. It was also pointed out that in 1955 the West suggested German reunification and European security should be tackled simultaneously.

The West did not, however, insist on settling the German question as a prerequisite for negotiating on European security.

Last week's NATO statement said a solution for the German problem "linked with European security arrangements and an agreement on controlled disarmament" remained essential.

GERMAN REACTION

In Bonn, West German government officials said the Soviet statement made the possibility of "calm and reasonable talks."

It was pointed out that chief government spokesman Felix von Eckardt held a press conference last Friday the Western powers were prepared to talk about Germany. Especially security and disarmament "with pre-conditions."

No Room in the Inn

How often at Christmas lips have formed this phrase, "No room in the inn." What infinite comfort it has brought to countless thousands; to many who have experienced loneliness, hunger, fear and despondency. During the strife-torn years, refugee mothers trudging the battle scarred roads of Europe, carrying young children, seeking shelter from the enemy, must have found some small measure of comfort in the phrase "No room in the inn". They must have found solace in the thought that the mother of the Blessed Babe also travelled a dark, steep path and at the end of it found only the poorest shelter for herself and her holy Child.

God in His infinite wisdom has exemplified for us in the humble birth of His Son the divine philosophy that the great shining attributes of the spirit are born and nurtured in the soil of lowly places.

So sometimes, like the inn keeper of old, say, "No room in the inn" and close the door firmly on the weary traveller? In so many southern states one sees heartbreaking signs - "White women only" - "Colored use side door." Reading these, one wonders if the story of the manger has any meaning. On that first Christmas night in the public stable which gave shelter only to the poor and the outcast, a mixed group worshipped. Here was no class distinction, no racial discrimination, no worldly barrier. Here were no signs erected, "colored use side door."

There was no room in the inn for Abraham Lincoln, for Booker T. Washington, for David Livingstone, for Mary McLeod Bethune. Had they experienced from birth the warmth and welcome of the inn, they might have passed the dimly lit manger door and the world would have lost the rich fruition of their lives.

In our city there are many open doors. We are thinking today of one particular door which has been the entrance to love and compassion. At least a dozen aged folk have travelled by it and found the door of the inn closed against them, have been admitted through this portal. Our social workers have a name for these children. They are called problem children. They are outcasts. Through this door were outstretched the arms of a sweet, motherly woman. She drew the children in to her home and heart. Then she connected her life story with their problems children. In the vernacular of the colored race she explained her success: "Ah jest knows how to reach. That's how I was raised up. They was bound to turn out good." In her own life had been the bitter experience of the closed door of the inn.

Let us open our hearts this year. Let us count the gifts on the tree, for we shall find that the greatest of these years, and let our hearts to take root and grow each month of the coming year. Let us plant first the most priceless gift the Christ child gave us two thousand years ago, the gift of love. Let us plant the roots firmly and deeply for the degrades of prejudice, for those who despitefully use us, for the scoffer, for the slanderer, for those who deal in hatred, for the poor in spirit, for the outcast. We will experience a miracle. We will find that love and kindness, as they lay in the tiny pink hands of a holy babe will spread in our hearts and leaf and blossom so abundantly that there will be no room for other seeds. By its fragrance we will recognize it to be the open door of a manger and will be glad - "There is no room in the inn."

There was just one entrance to the manger. There were no signs erected,- "Use side door" for the women of Samaria, for the Mary Magdalenes, for the poor and the outcast. The tiny guest of the manger knew no wisdom and caste" and, ignorant of creed, reached into the human heart and left in the message of our creation of unity in the image of God and our equality of love and understanding.

From the manger to the cross the path was illumined not by the garish, flashing lights of the inn, but by the warm soft flicker of a stable lamp and the silver rays of a pure, white star. Christ's ministry is not the philosophy of the material comforts of the inn but the philosophy of the humble stable. Around the simple cradle the awe-struck faces of the shepherds bent in worship while the unsentimental wise men felt the great, forgiving and love only reigned supreme. Color and creed were forgotten.

We pray that with the dawn of another Christmas, this indifferent, scoffing, doubting world may be brought on its knees around the crude cot of the Christ child. Would to God that hatred, malice, jealousy and fear may be shelved in the material comforts of the inn but the philosophy of the humble stable. Around the simple cradle the awe-struck faces of the shepherds bent in worship while the unsentimental wise men felt the great, forgiving and love only reigned supreme. Color and creed were forgotten.

This Christmas, we pray that God in His mercy, place in our hands the glowing torch to light the sides of the road, so that we may see the wounded, the sick and the sorrowing and, in compassion, gather them in our arms and bear them to the open door and place them at the foot of the Christ child.

No room in the inn - but the manger door
Holds so much more
Than a lighted fire - a laugh and a song,
For you who have travelled the path so long.

No room in the inn - There's the baby cry,
A star lit sky,
The glory and awe on a mother's face,
The worship and love in a holy place.

No room in the inn - so enter this way,
And kneel and pray
In a manger dim by a tiny bed
And rise, refreshed by the living bread.

A CHRISTMAS THOUGHT

By EDGAR A. GUEST

I'd like to climb your chimney
That dear old Santa seldom tries,
On Christmas Eve and come to you
Like kindly words and children's song.
And steal your burdens all
And laughter that shall last for away long.
And leave you glad this
And eyes that dance with love
Christmas Day.
for you.
I'd like to carry in my pack
Then, having made each wish
Each big and little joy you come true, lack
I would go chuckling on my
And fill your stocking with the way.

Who Named These Towns?

By Austin F. Cross in the Ottawa Citizen

How Stat Jim Mills has been made public relations officer in Ottawa for the Canadian National Railways is a puzzle like to see him solve a railway mystery, which his three predecessors failed to do.

In the CNR folder at page 731, yes, will find that Jim learned the train runs three times a week from Macklin to Hemaruka in southeast Saskatchewan. The stations are named for writers and broadcasters. Jim who named them?

I have written speculatively before on this theme, I have challenged the brightest of the railway's PR men, but not from Hawkins, Bill Gilbert nor B I I Howard did I get an answer.

Mile 7.3 offers Ryerson, presumably Egerton Ryerson, early Ontario educationist. Mile 149 is Parkman, after Francis, the historian. Mile 167 is Robert W. Service, who died only recently after a famous life as a sourdough. Next At Mile 190 you get Cowper (William) the English poet.

Mile 254 is Carlyle, additional point Carlyle, also on the CPR and named for the Sage of Ecclefechan.

On through (William) Wordsworth, Collier (a publisher of Dyer's) at 83.1 are for the Quaker poet, Whittier. Cullen Bryant.

The once — a week freight, No. 6, crawls into Blewett, at 89.3 miles, and that is the end of the Poet's Corner of the CNR; however, there is a Archibald Lampman, poet and civil servant.

We get a poet in two parts next, for Collier at 97.1 and Dyer and Dyer at 81

Faith With Works

by Mary Moore

You know what happens to faith without works . . .? When I asked a blessing on my flight the Lord supplied the faith; TCA supplied the works

Because I was graciously permitted to visit the galley and cockpit, I will never forget the smooth operation in both departments on the Super Constellation on the Atlantic crossing over indeed the Turbo-Prop Viscount that brought us to Montreal.

Dinner Menus

by Mary Moore

WEDNESDAY

(Christmas Eve — light supper in anticipation of Midnight Snack)

Clam Chowder; Melba Toast; Carrot Curls; Grapefruit Halves; Christmas Cookies; Tea.

The teamwork was perfect and happy and the behind-the-scenes co-ordination so unobtrusive that the passengers did not seem to have a clue about the 100 per cent efficiency of the whole flight.

On the Viscount the passengers seemed to be more like commuters making a Sunday afternoon hop between Toronto and Montreal.

Then we boarded the mighty bird that was to take me to Marianne.

Visiting royalty was never treated better; My corsage was refrigerated without request. I was be-pillowed and be-blanketed and wined and dined and pampered until I was so spoiled it was difficult to snap back into picking up my slippers at Marianne's house!

I have to describe our first dinner aboard: A charming Englishman, returning from a business stop from the British West Indies was my across-the-aisle dinner companion and we had delightful dinner conversation.

Menu: Consomme with sherry; Gespe Salmon is Aspic; Filet Mignon (piping hot!); Chateau Potatoes; Vichy Carrots; Buttered Green Beans (all lovely and hot); Waldorf Salad; Crape Jacques (ice cream on chocolate wafer base with whipped cream topped with chopped, candied ginger and Creme de Menthe poured over all); assorted Cheese Tray! Basket of Fresh Fruits; Coffee. Home was never like this!!!

Then my English gentleman called for one of those 'little red pills.' So not to be outdone, I called for a 'little red pill' too. The idea is to induce sleep with their stretched out straight. He slept like a log, but what with my watch up five hours to 4 a.m. and my anticipation of seeing my-loved ones, I went into a doze, but kept one eye on the sky watching for that last sliver of the moon, and saw it rise!

Then when it was a quarter way up the sky, my unbelieving eyes saw a dull rosy streak appear and then grow and glow and brighten over the entire horizon. Then it was only from the edges of the plane's wings and nudged by the majestic sun broke above the Atlantic.

All at once I had everything: the bright slice of moon directly above; that bright, blinding, rising sun and below me an Atlantic liner — her sterm rosily aglow.

I wanted to spend the rest of my life amid—such splendor. Now I know why Mary spoke one of my Sunday School girls want to be aisline stewardesses — although I doubt that they do.

To heap this overflowing measure, laden with three crown donated by my Scottish companion, I had time to telephone from the London Skyport, my niece Beverley. You may remember that she is doing postgraduate work in the British Eye Hospital, but right now is recovering from an appendectomy and has been ordered a month's rest. I persuaded her to come to Canada for Christmas, with her Australian husband whom many of us have never seen. Just then the steward tapped on the window of the telephone booth and I had to hang up. I had two tuppenies left from my three half crowns and pushed them in the Christmas cheer box. I was the last passenger aboard.

Just one and one-quarter hours to go to Dusseldorf for which we had a new crew. The First Officer turned out to be Fergie Kyle, only son of my dear friend Charlotte. Captain Holland and Fergie, busy and all as they were, answered obvious questions of a landlubber, but before I could say "how long now before we land in Dusseldorf," they were calling "Fasten your seat belts," and we came down as smoothly as a fall.

I had to laugh for while I was the first passenger to alight I could not see Marianne. Herbie came dashing with Gary on his shoulder. You see the plane was ahead of time and Marianne was waiting in the car until the last minute with sleeping Garry.

But when she realized that the incoming plane was really TCA, did not take her long to come flying with Davey tucked under my arm. I am afraid that knocked her Paris hat askew — I hugged her. Oh happy day!!!

When I say Merry Christmas to you on this Christmas Eve— it is with a full heart and joy not? For now I shall read to my precious little grandchildren, "Twas the Night Before Christmas."

May your hearts too, be full of love and joy.

Sofia Lee and a Merry Christmas from your devoted friend Mary.

AT CHRISTMAS TIME . . . A PRAYER FOR PEACE

"May the Joy and Hope of long ago
Be yours a Christmas Day,
And Peace, like a benediction,
Go with you on your way."

HOLIDAY COURTESY. . . ANSWER INVITATIONS AT ONCE

When you receive an invitation to a party to be given during the holidays, do, please, reply at once. Make this your special rule-of-courtesy. This is particularly important, of course, when the number of guests is a consideration . . . a dinner or luncheon, a tea party or a cocktail party, a bridge or other game-party, a buffet party. Don't make the excuse to yourself that you're too busy to answer an invitation . . . remember that your hostess does not consider herself giving a holiday party and to remember to invite you.

WIDOW SIGNED CARDS "MERRILY"

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am a widow of a year, having lost my husband in a terrible auto tragedy. I have a 17-year-old son. I have been signing our Christmas cards (for example): Ruth Smith and Philip. But now I'm wondering if this form is correct. Is it, Mrs. Beeckman? — Reader

Yes, dear lady, the form y o u used in signing your Christmas cards was indeed correct. The a is, when the names of a parent and child are handwritten on greeting cards, the parent's name comes first, and in most cases it is wise to add the parent's surname. So you did just right. (And may I, please, send y o u my most sincere thoughts of understanding and my prayers and blessings for this Christmas-time?)

Mrs. S. F. — It is true that we have tried to keep some separation between Tom and our children. But we have had good reason.

I am not blaming Tom — it is not his fault, but his mother has always put him up to making trouble for us. She is a vindictive woman and although she is more or less happily remarried, she has never forgiven my husband for the breakup of their marriage.

Tom has been spoiled and is quite wild. His language is awful and he drinks entirely too much. My impression of his wife is that she is a suitable partner for such a man. He is all sugar to Susan, but she has never seen him at his worst. He only invites her to his home because he knows it worries us. I have explained this to Susan, but it has no effect — other than to make her take a tantrum.

The Council: Loving their children as they do, most parents don't recognize how rejected youngsters often feel. Preoccupied with present problems, the parents tend to forget or minimize their own youthful feelings of this nature.

When a girl of Susan's age complains of being "nobody" in the home, it is a feeling mightily distressed and it doesn't make much difference to her that her feelings are probably not justified by the objective situation.

We judge that Susan has fixed her feelings on this older half-brother partly because she is looking for a father substitute and partly because she feels that, like herself, Tom has been rejected. She feels that their is a real kind of sympathy between them and the more her parents criticize him, the more she feels drawn toward him.

We suggest that these parents cease their criticism of Tom. He is her brother and Susan will be happier if she is allowed to love him without incurring their disapproval.

However, if the parents feel that a visit to Tom's home would be a good idea they should simply refuse permission a n d keep the explanations to a minimum. They should permit her an occasional daytime visit, if possible, and they should invite Tom and his wife to their home. They should do their utmost to avoid discussing during such visits.

It would be a good idea for Susan's father to talk to her a bit about his unhappy marriage and to explain that Tom has been to a great extent a victim of circumstances beyond his own control. He should also try to absolve himself in this matter. His daughter will respect him for accepting his own responsibility for the unhappiness of Tom's growing years. Susan will be closer to her father if he talks to her about these things and she will not have to seek father substitutes.

"Rex doesn't like it. See what's wrong!"

May your Christmas shine brightly with good cheer and good fellowship ...abounding in all the happy sights and sounds of this festive season. That's our sincere wish to you and yours, as we sing out "Merry Christmas!"

This - - - and That

By HARRIET STEVENS

Our thoughts for this Christmas message have been derailed. We had just sat down to our typewriter when a radio in another room gave out the wonderful news to a Belleville home that the lady of the house had won a wonderful jackpot in Christmas. Congratulations are in store for the grand Christmas surprise that has come to this local family.

T and T cannot bring to its readers a luxurious cash pot but T and T can bring to each and every one of you its humble greeting. This we do sincerely and we would like to leave our greeting with a pinch of gratitude which, it is our earnest hope, will raise meaning to a loaf beyond the scope of mere words. T and T wishes to express at this season of thankfulness its deep appreciation for the countless messages of encouragement and help we have received since last Christmas. We thank you all from the bottom of our hearts and our receipt-book girl is the simple understanding to do our best until next Christmas.

We know a story of a platoon in the last world war. An officer and his sergeant suggested to the men, some thirty odd, that they set aside most of their gift parcels in a common pile. The response was almost one hundred per cent. One private received more gifts than any other two or three including both the originators of the idea. However, there were boys who left no family or loved ones in Canada. When Christmas day arrived, the parcels collected a were opened as a common Canadian Christmas tree. There was enough for every man in the platoon to have some cigarets, a piece of cake, a share of whatever turned up in the common collection. No man was entirely left out because a small part of the generosity of the fortunate became the transient but nevertheless worthwhile spirit of sharing. It is simple story, a true story, and T and T tells it to illustrate its feelings towards all those who have shared generously of their kindness with this column throughout 1958. You have given us the responsible gift of opportunity. Thank you and a Merry Christmas.

Three Wise Men Historical Puzzle, Relics at Cologne

Biblically we know very little about the Wise Men who came from the East bearing gifts to the Christ Child and, having adorned Him as the King of the Jews, returned to their own country.

It is generally accepted that there were three Wise Men because of the three specifically mentioned gifts; church tradition has identified these as Melchoir, Caspar, and Balthasar; Melchoir, King of Arabia, brought a casket of gold; Caspar, king of Tarsus, brought myrrh; and Balthasar, king of Ethiopia, brought frankincense. These gifts are considered symbolic of what Jesus was to become — gold for a king, frankincense for a high priest, and myrrh for a great physician. Collectively, the Wise Men received the gifts of charity and spiritual wealth, perfect faith, truth and meekness.

When they returned to their own country, the three Kings reputedly sold their possessions and went about preaching the Christ-King. Legend continues, that they were martyred in India for their faith.

The bodies of the Wise Men, transferred to Constantinople in the fourth century — by the Empress Helena, mother of Constantine — were enshrined at Milan for a while after the first Crusade. Frederick Barbarossa authorized removal of the relics to Cologne where they remain to this day deposited within the magnificent Cathedral of Cologne.

My Daily Prayer

Author Unknown

This coming year I'd like to be a friend to everyone;
I'd like to feel each day well spent at setting of the sun;
I'd like to know that I have done
at least one kindly deed,
Before I lay me down to sleep
that I have given heed—
To some one's cry for sympathy, or friendship or that I
Have made the day seem brighter to some chance passer-by,
And that the world is better still in just some little way
Because I've tried to live the very best I could each day.

I'd like to be a ray of light
when skies are overcast,
I'd like to help some one who failed to blot out all the past,
To start again despite the storms, and find the skies are blue,
To know that in this good old world there's lots that's fine and true,
I'd like to be the kind of person
everyone will love,
And make the world seem just a little more like heaven above;
I'd like in all my dealings to be true and just and fair,
That God will help me do these things shall be my daily prayer."

History of the Christmas Tree

Some historians trace the lighted Christmas tree back to Martin Luther, who lived from 1483 to 1546. The story is that while strolling, through the countryside one Christmas Eve under a brilliant starlit sky, his thoughts turned to the nativity of the Christ Child. Luther was impressed with the beauty of the heavens and the wintry landscape. He observed the snow-flecked evergreen trees sparkling in the moonlight. Returning home, he related the experience to his family and attempted to reproduce the outdoor scene. To a small evergreen tree he attached lighted candles to simulate the reflections of the starlit heaven — the heaven that looked down over Bethlehem on the first Christmas Eve.

This would date the first lighted Christmas tree prior to 1546. However, the use of candles apparently did not at once become firmly established as a decoration because mention of the Christmas tree custom in Strasbourg a century later does not refer to lights. At first, lights on a tree were considered ridiculous or "child's play." Until about 1700 the Christmas tree custom appears to have been confined to the Rhine River district. From 1700 on, when lights were accepted as part of the decorations, the Christmas tree was well on its way to becoming a tradition in Germany. During the American Revolution, the tradition of the Christmas tree crossed the Atlantic with the Hessian soldiers. A description of Christmas festivities at Fort Dearborn, Ill., in 1804, mentions a Christmas tree. However, the practice did not gain much headway on this side of the Atlantic until about the middle of the nineteenth century when, after a year of controversy and doubt, it became an established custom in Cleveland, Ohio.

Finland is credited with having accepted the custom about 1800, Denmark 1810, Sweden 1830, and Norway about 1848. From these Scandinavian countries the customs spread to England and France about 1840. Records show that about 35,000 Christmas trees were sold in Paris in 1890.

At first, the trimmings, if any, consisted mostly of tufts of cotton and strings of popcorn and cranberries. Other decorations were flowers, replicas of food-stuffs, paper ornaments and the like. Such trimmings have long since been replaced by factory-made, highly colored ornaments, tinsel, strings of electric lights and various novelties.

The traditional use of evergreen trees during the Christmas season provides a time when all Canadians are brought into close contact with the fragrance and freshness of the forest. Christmas trees probably add more to mark the period of "peace on earth—good will toward men" than any other product of the soil. Indoors and outdoors, Christmas trees have become essential for decorative purposes in the homes, in parks and on streets, in churches and in business houses. Christmas would seem barren without them. The spreading branches serve most fittingly, too, as a delightful hiding place for Santa Claus' presents for children and adults.

The Christmas tree is a symbol of a living Christmas spirit.

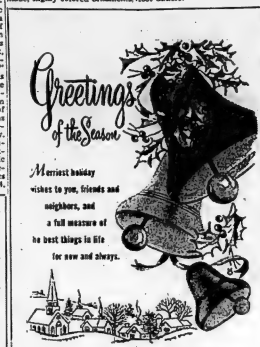
EXTINCT ELK

The Irish elk, which has been extinct for centuries in Europe, stood about six feet high with 11-foot antlers.

Red, Green Decorations

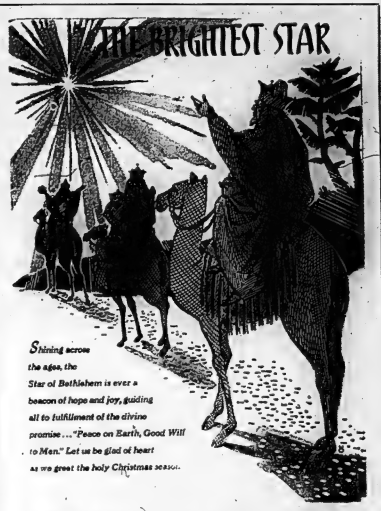
The use of green at Christmas time is understandable when it is recalled that the idea of decking churches, houses, shops, etc., centres around the use of evergreen. This custom antedates the Christian era and apparently is a survival of the Roman Saturnalia when inhabitants of Rome ornamented their temples and dwellings with green boughs.

Red, which is regarded as the most cheerful of all colors, is said to react most quickly on the optic nerve. Decorations available at the winter solstice include holly, the berries of which are red.



MIRACLE PLAYS STILL HELD

Among more tradition-observing communities of the world, old-time miracle plays are still performed, often in the form of elaborate dance, in solemn but lavish settings against the colorful background of tropical foliage.



At this festive season, we look back upon a year of meeting old friends and making new ones. To all go our hearty thanks and happiest greetings. May each and every one of you have the merriest holiday ever.

The sharp wind lashed furiously about Larry's bold and shoulders, flirting momentarily with the idea of sending his brown fedora spiraling down the street, but he sensed its capricious tendencies and held the brim of his hat tightly between his forefinger and thumb as he ran toward his car parked on the opposite corner.

It would be the last time he'd beat that particular path, he thought grimly. It was Christmas Eve and everybody was in a gay mood. Everybody, that is, except Larry. He had been reasonably happy until that morning when the whole world seemed to have crashed about him. Opening the door of the car, he slid in behind the wheel and started towards home.

The face of Silas Henning, until fifteen minutes ago his boss, came to his mind and again he heard the words that he dreaded to repeat to Rosine: "I know you're not happy in your work, Larry, and it's not fair to either of us when you don't put your best efforts into what you're doing. I think, therefore, that you'd better go elsewhere for a job. Today's as good a day as any to sever connections."

Fired on Christmas Eve! Of course, what Henning had said was true. Larry wasn't happy being a bookkeeper at Morrison's appliance shop. He had always yearned to be a writer, and wrote numerous short stories during his spare time.

When Rosine told him of their expected second child, he had taken the job at Morrison's through sheer desperation. No longer could they live on their savings. He considered the job as temporary, but it had lasted seven months with still no prospects of entering the field he desired. Henning had seemed sympathetic, although he had cooled suddenly the past week. Perhaps in his daydreaming he had been inaccurate in his figures. At least Henning spared him any embarrassment if that were the case, but he could have waited until after the holidays to fire him. "And Bob Cratchit thought he worked for Scrooge," he mumbled, pulling up before his house.

His feet dragged as he trudged toward the door. He mustn't tell her tonight, he decided. He loved her with all the ardor of carrying off an art until the day after Christmas. Opening the door, he let himself in as unobtrusively as possible. Rosine was on a step ladder in the living room, decorative tree in hand, while Chuckie, aged five, sat on the floor, agog at the proceedings.

"Hello, darling," his wife called out gaily. He tried to equal the heartiness in her voice as he replied, then kissed Chuckie and started for the kitchen.

"There's a letter for you on the radio," Rosine said.

"From whom?" His heart leaped hopefully at her words and he hurried toward the radio. He picked up the letter at the same time she answered, "Truth Magazine."

It was from Truth. His hand trembled as he opened it. "Dear Mr. Shannon," he read aloud. "Our mutual friend, Silas Henning, recently submitted one of your articles for our consideration. We believe it shows promise and since we were given a splendid recommendation by Mr. Henning, we are writing to ask you if you would be interested in a job in our editorial department. If so, call for an interview this week."

The telephone was ringing, but for a moment, Larry and Rosine merely stood as though mute, staring at each other. Larry became conscious of the bell first and picked up the receiver. It was Mr. Henning, laughing heartily. "Bet I had you worried, eh, Larry?"

"Mr. Henning! I don't know . . . how did you . . ." Larry was tongue-tied. Rosine walked to his side, putting one arm gently about his shoulder.

"I found that article you wrote on your son and the atomic age and sent it in to Asherton," Henning explained. "He's a good friend of mine and editor of Truth. Well, I won't hold you, Larry. Just wanted to wish you a Merry Christmas."

"Merry Christmas, Mr. Henning," Larry said as the telephone clicked at the other end. "Merry Christmas — and thanks for the best one I've ever had."

Christmas Elf Concerned With Well-Being of Cattle

Jule-Nisse was not exactly a Danish version of Santa Claus. He was an elfish little old man who lived in the silo and was primarily concerned with the well-being of the cattle, keeping them quiet and contented, caring for them if the stablehands neglected their duties.

Nisse's name and association with Christmas probably stems from his legendary tenancy of houses where peace and contentment prevailed. 'Tis said he either avoided homes where contention ruled or played all sorts of gremlin-like tricks upon the occupants thereof.

Danish youngsters, mindful of Nisse's long memory and watchful eye, put themselves upon their good behavious as Christmas approaches.

As the holiday season glides merrily in, we would like to take the opportunity to express our appreciation to all the good people who have helped make this year such a wonderful one for us. Thank you . . . and best wishes for loads of Yuletide happiness!

REUNION AT CHRISTMAS

By HELEN PETRONE

Janet opened the door to her apartment, thinking as she did so that it had been only a week since Craig and she had shared this apartment they called their "ivory tower," named that because of its odd shape. It had been a storage room until the housing shortage became prevalent. Then old Mrs. Boet, feeling sympathetic toward the plight of Janet and Craig Morris, newly married and homeless, had cleared it out, partitioned it off into two small rooms and rented it to them.

That was just 13 months ago, Janet remembered, dropping her gloves on the table and lighting the lamp with the same gesture. They had been married only three weeks, just long enough to realize they were imposing on Craig's family who were crowded for quarters themselves.

Just a week ago they had the quarrel that had sent Craig from the apartment. It had been a blow to his pride from the day of their wedding that Janet should continue working. She enjoyed her position in the advertising firm where she had risen from a clerk to copy writer in just two years. Since she left the house after Craig in the morning and returned before him at night, she never felt her working interfered in any way with her household duties. But friends had spoiled everything with their snide remarks about "poor Janet still working," and it was more than Craig could bear. "They think I can't support you!" he'd storm at her, but the more he pleaded the more adamant she had become. And now he was gone.

The whole thing seemed so unimportant now. She glanced at the telephone, half-inclined to call him home, but her own recalcitrant nature refused to allow such a move. She turned on the radio instead and pretended the tears that welled in her eyes at the strains of "Silent Night," were merely tears of weariness after the preparation of the office party that morning. Deliberately she opened the dresser drawer to put away last night's ironing. Her souvenirs of home loomed temptingly before her. Lifting the cover, she stared at the items she had collected: Craig's class ring, exchanged for a diamond after their graduation from college; a pressed orchid, one of those she had carried at her wedding; various cards, Christmas, anniversary, birthday, Valentine. She picked up a small gift card and read again. "To my dear wife, Ruth, on our first Christmas." It was the card with the watch he had given her last year.

Trembling, she closed the box and turned quickly from the dresser. She had been a fool, she decided. Without Craig, Christmas would never hold the same meaning for her as it once had. She didn't dare to look at the door for there was nothing of value anyone could steal from her. Even her $100 Christmas bonus twirled on the table went unnoticed. The one thing she must not lose was happiness and that was no longer in her home with Craig gone.

She hurried into her coat as she started breathlessly down the 3½ flights of stairs. Tears coursed down her cheeks and she prayed with frantic zest that she was not too late. As she reached the last flight of stairs she crashed into a figure who was hurrying up, as oblivious of his surroundings as she. She teetered at the impact, but the man quickly regained his balance and caught her before she could fall. "Janet," he cried.

She looked at him almost in disbelief. Then, throwing her arms around him she gave full vent to her tears. "Oh, Craig darling I was just coming for you."

He kissed her and held her tightly. "Janet, I've been such a fool. I didn't realize until last night what an awful thing pride can be. Will you ever forgive me?"

She sighed. "There's nothing to forgive, Craig. I was the one who was wrong. I'm going to quit my job right away."

"No, you mustn't. I don't want to deprive you of any happiness and if you want to work, I'm not going to stop you."

She laughed shakily. "We'll argue that out later, shall we?"

Arm in arm they climbed up the stairs.

CHRISTMAS EVE IN OLDTIME FINLAND

The Christmas Eve bath was quite a tradition in Finland before the advent of modern plumbing.

The oldtime Finnish bathroom was usually a three-room affair: one room was used for steaming and scrubbing, one for dressing, and one for dressing.

The hut was warmed by a stone oven, heated for hours before the scheduled bath, and the "bathroom" was really steaming. After bathing came the rub-down and the switching of the body with birch twigs to increase the circulation, topped off by a roll in the snow, supposedly to whet the appetite for Christmas Eve supper.

For supper there was usually stockfish and prune tarts to be enjoyed, plus the traditional barley porridge in which cream and sugar and almonds were mixed.

After supper the boys and men matched their strength, while the girls—garbed in the men's work clothes—blackened their faces and stole away to visit other homes incognito and "see Christmas." The girls never spoke nor accepted food, but went from house to house merely to watch the festivities.

And when the evening's festivities were over, the smaller children made their beds in the clean straw spread on the floor in commemoration of the Christ Child.

It Takes Know-How To Burn a Yule Log

The yule log is a tradition of Christmas, but due to central heating and gas stoves it is becoming a lost tradition in this country. Few city dwellers have open grates or desire a log fire. And those living in the country find coal more efficient and less trouble.

However, for those who have a place to burn the yule log and want one, tradition says it should be oak, ash, olive, apple or pine. Further, the fire on which it is placed should be kindled from a brand saved from last year's log, and that it should not be allowed to go out during the night.

For those determined to have the yule log, the voice of experience says get hold of all the wood you can. Some kinds burn better than others, but reject none these days.

Ash is highly praised by some and can be used without being seasoned. It burns quickly, but throws off great heat. Poplar, on the other hand, should be seasoned or it will smark badly.

Elm is condemned as undesirable, but can be used. It is slow to get burning, but lasts a long time and brightens up when it gets going. A few logs of birch, pine or fir will help it along.

Beech and oak are among the best logs. Beech is especially good, having a pleasing aroma and a steady glow. Oak has the outstanding merit of burning slowly.

If none of these are available, wood from all kinds of fruit trees are prime favorites for the yule log because of their pleasant smell when burning.

Tom Larkin opened the kitchen door. His wife looked up with a hopeful smile as he entered. He just shook his head.

"No mail at all?" she said as she went on fixing dinner.

"Oh, there were a couple of ads and a bill from the seed company." He hung his hat on a hook and crossed to the pump. His while hair was damp around his face when he straightened up again.

"It's just not like Bill," she sighed.

"Bill's got an unforgivin' streak, always did have, even when he was a little feller." Pa's old briar gave off a pungent odor as he lit it.

"But this is different, Tom," she said, putting a pan of biscuits in the oven, "tomorrow is Christmas. It's a long way to the coast. Maybe he wrote but didn't mail it in time."

"Ma," his tired old voice was filled with bitterness, "there's no need to stick pins in yourself by hopin'. Christmas or no Christmas . . . that boy is still mad."

The old lady's eyes shone with faith. "He might stay mad all year long but when Christmas comes . . . he'll write. I know. I'm his Ma."

"Don't forget," Tom said as he blew smoke at the ceiling. His eyes wrinkled at the corners, "I'm his father."

"Dinner's ready, Pa," she said, filled with a deep longing and sought to keep the tears out of her voice.

"I c'n understand that boy still bein' mad at me, but why does he have to take it out on you?"

"You're wrong, Tom," Ma replied as she tilted her head and smiled. "The day after Christmas, first delivery, we'll get a letter. You'll see."

"Not from him," he shook his head grimly.

"You're forgettin' Judy," she reminded him as they sat down. "She's a good daughter-in-law."

"Oh, I'm not blamin' her," replying as he covered his biscuits with gravy, "Judy's a fine girl. It's his bull headed pride."

She got up and taking the coffee pot off the cook stove filled his cup. They ate on in silence. Finally he pushed his plate back.

"You aren't eatin' much," he scolded.

"I'm just not hungry, Pa."

"I see," he stood up. "I'm goin' out and turn the heater on in the hen house. It'll be cold tonight." His old shoulders slumped forward as he went outside. She shook her head and started picking up the dishes. Her ming sank back into the past. To the days when Christmas was alive with the excitement and laughter of young voices. She could see Pa striding into the living room bearing a large evergreen on his shoulder. Behind him there was always a highly excited little boy, bearing an axe. She wondered if the little boy ever thought of it.

Pa came back on the porch. She smiled as he kicked his feet against the threshold. It's a wonder, she thought, that there is any threshold left after all these years. He came into the kitchen, dumping an arm load of kindling in the box behind the range.

"Snowin', Pa?"

He shook his head and took off his wraps, replying, "Stopped."

She hung the dish towels up to dry. He pulled a rocker in from the living room and sat down.

"Everything all right in the barn?" Ma asked as she threw a few lumps of coal on the fire.

"Sure," Pa said. A sad smile crossed his lips. "What's the use pretendin', Ma? We're both feelin' blue."

She sat down at the old kitchen table and started peeling apples, uttered, "I know it."

"Gonna bake me a pie?" he asked.

She nodded. "Apple was always Billy's favorite, too."

"Now, Ma, what's the use of . . ." he stopped as they heard a car drive up to the yard. Must be Jim Rogers. Said today that new calf of his was sick." He opened the kitchen door and peered out into the night. She could see him catch his breath as he watched a man and woman get out. "Ma, who do you think?" his voice was low.

"I knew," Ma laughed as she laid the paring knife down with a happy smile, "I knew it all the time."

St. Francis Was First To Popularize Custom Of Christmas Carols

St. Francis of Assisi is accredited as having been one of the first to popularize the custom of singing carols at Christmas-time. He taught the faithful simple and tuneful melodies, and the saying goes that, overjoyed by the success attending his presentation of the first Christmas Crib in 1222, he burst into joyous vocal recitation of the good story.

Hymns in honor of the nativity were written as early as the 4th century, but these monotonous church chants neither properly nor musically ante-date our modern "carols. Experimentation with modal and interval-lic relationships during the 15th century, together with the folk songs and minstrelsy of the times, made definite contributions to the traditions and popularity of Christmas music.

Puritan England forbade public performance of carols; so for a while they traveled "underground by word of mouth, and "broad sheets" printed annually served to preserve the texts with a variance of accuracy.

When the restoration of English royalty voided the Roundhead Parliament's abolition of Christmas festivities, residents of colonial Boston placed lighted candles in their windows to welcome the Waits who, resuming the Old English tradition, went about the city singing carols on Christmas Eve.

"It came upon the midnight clear
That glorious song of old . . .
The world in solemn stillness lay
To hear the angels sing."

Star of Bethlehem

After three centuries of detective work, science has come up with a startling new theory to explain the Star of Bethlehem.

Latest evidence, says Bleachman's magazine, suggests that the Star that led the Wise Men to the Saviour's birthplace was probably a "supernova" — a star exploding with such atomic violence that it grew 100 million times brighter than our sun.

But, writes Fred Bodworth, the Star of Bethlehem was declining in the Bible as a star—and not as a moon or a sun—a fact which leads astronomers to believe that the explosion actually took place 3,000 years before the birth of Christ.

"This," says the author, "gives the Nativity story a new and stirring element of drama and wonder. For many persons the contemplation of a Supernova Bethlehem is as moving and as humbling as the Nativity miracle itself."

Historical writings viewed against the finding of modern astronomy indicate that Christ was born not in Dec. 25, 1 A.D. as is often supposed — but in the spring between 4 B.C. and 7 B.C. Early Christians may have originally observed Christ's birthday on the correct spring date, Bosworth speculates, but because of Roman persecution, switched their Christmas to coincide with the great Roman festival of Saturnalia which marked the winter solstice around Dec. 21.

World's Christmas Legends Numerous

Multitudinous legends claim innumerable origins for the Christmas tree. One better known legend concerns an early Christian missionary, sometimes identified as St. Wilfred, who once came upon a group of Druids preparing to make a human sacrifice under a large oak.

He had the oak cut down and, as it fell, a young fir tree sprang up in its place. The missionary seized the evidence and made the fir tree a symbol of the new faith; henceforth, the tribesmen were to set this symbol of immortality in the halls of their lodges at Christmastime and surround it with feasting and love and the laughter of children.

The legend of the Faithful Pine which sheltered the Holy family during the flight to Egypt is less well known perhaps, but so very charming and touched by the mysticism appropriate to the Nativity theme.

With Herod's soldiers in pursuit, Mary simply had to rest awhile and sought shelter within the hollow trunk of a huge fir tree. As the soldiers approached, the tree bent its branches to conceal the huddled little group. When the danger had passed, the baby Jesus blessed the old tree. And if you cut a pine cone lengthwise at Christmastime, you can still see the imprint of His little hand.

Now has legend overlooked the bright baubles which bedeck our modern Christmas trees. The first Christmas tree was really an apple tree, according to legends collected by Florence B. Robinson. And, although the fir tree long since has supplanted its predecessor for Christmas use, the popular tinsel bauble of today is the representative of the fruit which for the early Christians symbolized the fall of man in the Garden of Eden and his redemption by the birth of the Saviour.

A drizzling rain seeped through Mike Duncan's threadbare coat and soaked him to the skin. Snow had preceded the rain that afternoon and the going was pretty tough. He wearily trudged along, endeavoring to keep out of the way of reckless herds of last-minute shoppers who thought of him only as a bar to their progress.

Ordinarily Duncan would not have thought of his wet skin, his tattered clothes, or even his empty stomach. They were all part of life on the road — but this night was different. It was Christmas Eve.

It must have been the holiday season — why else would someone thrust a fifty-cent piece into his hand and then vanish into the shadows? He could only murmur a grateful, "Thank you, sir, and a Merry Christmas to you," before the donor disappeared into the swirling crowd.

Duncan reached into his left pocket, pulled out two dimes and five pennies, laid them with the half-dollar in the palm of his other hand and stared at his entire fortune in seventy-five cents.

He smiled sardonically when it occurred to him presently that the building in front of which he stood was the United States Mint. He turned south with a laugh that had a hysterical ring to it, jingled his handful of coins. His mirth attracted the cop who had been standing on the corner watching him. The officer said to him in a brogue so thick that it could have been cut with a knife, "Move on, blaist ye!" Mike wandered off down a deserted side street, clinking his money.

After about an hour of aimless roaming through endless alleys, he found himself directly opposite a brightly decorated restaurant. He crossed over and from sheer curiosity looked in the window.

There were only two patrons inside — an elderly man and woman seated at a front table who were avidly devouring with much relish a whole roast turkey with all the side dishes.

Duncan's mouth began to water — his stomach seemed hollow — he felt his legs go weak and his ever-present hunger was getting the best of him. Suddenly he remembered the seventy-five cents. He thought, quickly. A bed for the night at a flophouse would cost fifteen cents — that would leave him sixty. He decided to go in and order a roast turkey sandwich. He gave his hat a few deft pats and opened the door. He hung his battered hat and coat where he could grab them in case of an emergency, and made himself comfortable at a table in a corner. Duncan knew that his appearance was none too prepossessing and that a waiter would not dash up to some one from whom he could not get a tip. After a while a vinegar-faced man deigned to come to him.

"What'll you have?" he asked, stifling a yawn.

"A hot roast turkey sandwich," replied Duncan.

"On toast or rye bread?"

"Rye."

"Anything else?"

Duncan shook his head, "No, nothing else."

"Are you sure that's all you want?"

"Yes, that's it. Just a roast turkey sandwich."

The waiter returned with the order, placed it before him, shook his head wonderingly and withdrew. Duncan virtually devoured the sandwich in three mouthfuls, then beckoned the waiter. "Check, please" he said.

"Check?"

"Yes, the check." Duncan raised his eyebrows.

"But there is no check."

"No check? What do you mean—no check?"

"There are none tonight. This is Christmas Eve. Didn't you see the sign in the window? Customers can order anything they want. It's on the house. You're the only guy who didn't order the whole darned menu. Well, Merry Christmas," he added.

Duncan's jaw dropped. His gaze fell on the half-dollar, two hair.

"Are you sure that's all you want?"

We're joining Santa in sending best wishes for a very happy holiday to everyone, everywhere!

Tradition of Poppy

The poppy loaf, traditionally a part of Christmas Eve supper in Lithuania, is a small loaf made of bread dough and baked hard in a bread pan. When cool, the loaves are dipped in a solution made of water and sugar and ground poppy seed which is also used as a traditional holiday beverage.

Tradition prescribes that the poppy seed should be ground in an iron kettle using an axe handle as a mallet, and no Lithuanian would think of grinding seeds for the Christmas poppy-loaves by any other method.

Roundabout . .

By DOUG PHIPPEN

The past weeks have been busy for all of us. Few, however, cannot help but realize that something is in the air besides a certain nippiness. Christmas, with all its trimmings has been on us ever since the first holly appeared in an advertisement or since the first little notice appeared stating that there were only umpteen days left in which to spend your money on the fine array of merchandise which has been displayed by local merchants.

Much has certainly been going on. Parties have been going on at a greater pace than at any other time of the year, but people still seem to be able to carry on. Much good work has been done by many people for other people. We notice that every night there has been a group entertaining the residents at the Hastings County Home. We also noticed that a person can hardly move in the upper storey of No. 2 Fire Hall due to the number of toys gathered there for the past few days. If you thought you saw more firemen out today than ever before, you're right. They have been distributing over four thousand toys to kiddies who, we feel, will enjoy them more than anyone else because they were unexpected.

East Hill has certainly been putting on a beautiful display every evening with colored lights, decorations, and Christmas trees showing in great abundance on people's front lawns. These outdoor arrangements are well worth viewing if you have a few minutes to drive around the town. We presume that West Zilli has an equally attractive display, but we haven't had the chance of getting around there as much as we'd like.

The nice thing about these decorations, and some are most beautiful and ingenious in their design, is that people do this voluntarily for the enjoyment of others. The other day some person suggested that awards be offered for the best display. We hope not. We feel these displays are at their best when organized at the amateur level.

We see that Bellville's Santa Claus parade was televised over Kingston's station a couple of Saturdays ago. It is nice to know that more people were able to enjoy the fine job which Gerald Vance, the parade committee, some of our artistically-minded citizens, and our firemen did on producing this year's parade. A very nice way in which Belleville can say Merry Christmas to all of our neighbors.

A few local residents received a very nice Christmas present yesterday at Citizens' Court—their Canadian Citizenship. We wish them the compliments of the season and hope that there will be many more of them.

Christmas strikes us as being one of the most remarkable celebrations of the year. Although it is supposed to mark the birth of Christ, actually it is composed of many things which had their origin in some other religion or some heathen race. The giving of gifts was a feature of the Roman Saturnalia, which feast, incidentally, was adopted by the Christian church in Rome as Christmas. The hanging of the mistletoe was a rite of the ancient Druids. The use of the Christmas tree is actually the old German "Tannenbaum" and the use of lights and candles is a part of the Jewish feast of the Hanukkah. Our season of rejoicing at this time is quite polygenetic in nature.

Meanwhile, we might interject a word or two of caution for those who will be out celebrating tonight and tomorrow. To the best of our knowledge the only place where alcohol should be applied on a motorized vehicle is in the radiator, not to the nut holding the wheel. Now, hear this, Newt: Don't eat too much turkey, it can be fattening. But no matter what you do we hope you enjoy it.

Merry Christmas to all, especially to those who don't believe in Santa Claus!

The Greatest Present of All

It came upon the midnight clear,
That glorious song of old.

Through the centuries man has held his greatest celebrations and feasts at the time we now call Christmas. It was not always called Christmas because this period in the year had been used by man for thousands of years before Christ appeared on this earth as a period of feasting. It was, perhaps, a convenience that, with Christ's exact birth date being unknown, it was decided to celebrate it on the twenty-fifth of December. This was a matter of simply choosing the day on which most groups were holding their feasts in recognizance of the Saviour's coming.

Of angels bending near the earth,
To touch their harps of gold.

However, the birth of the Christ-child was no mere convenience. It was an event of both humility and dignity, of both simplicity and greatness. It was marked, we are told, by both heaven and earth. The firmament provided the Star of Bethlehem to mark the greatness, earth provided three kings to mark the dignity of the occasion. Jesus provided the humility and simplicity. Born in a manger in a manner common to all men, His greatness was to be recognized in His life and His deeds, not in the magnificence of His introduction to the world.

Peace on the earth, good will to men,
From Heaven's Almighty King.

The nature of God's gift to man perhaps deserves more consideration than it is usually accorded during the course of our annual festivities. The end has become obscured by the means. If we believe in our professed religion, and we find that basically there are very few differences between the ends in the various religions—only the means differ, we must accept the fact that Christ was placed amongst us to guide us to "peace on the earth" and "good will to men." In His life there was no room for cynicism, prejudice, intolerance, or sophistication. His life, meant to be our example, was one of good deeds, compassion, forgiveness, and understanding. No strings were attached to His gift. It is there for any and all of us.

The world in solemn stillness lay,
To hear the angels sing.

It is meet and fitting to take some time during this season, busy though we may be, to pause and think quietly on what it is we are celebrating. Is our attitude one of thankfulness? We feel that it should be, that it should be a time to thank those about us for their part and share in our life. However, there are two sides to every situation. There is the side of giving, which we place much emphasis upon during this season, and this side we consider to be quite important. But there is another side, which we feel to be more important, that is the side of accepting. We feel that more of us should accept the greatest gift which was ever offered us. Then the song of the angels could be truly heard.

"It is more blessed to give than to receive." We dispute this not. But first one has to accept something before the joy and meaning of giving can be fully appreciated.

Christmas Treats

Playing Tag with Santa

NATURALLY, there isn't room on Santa's pack for all the travel stickers he collects. But we can have some fun speculating on a few. A tag for each of the following countries is affixed above:

Italy	Japan	Holland	Peru
England	France	Norway	Egypt

How quickly can you identify them?

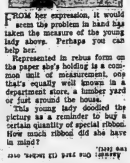
Trophy Keeps St. Nick Stepping

SANTA deserves a vacation right after Christmas, of course, but chances are he wastes no time lining up plans for the year ahead.

A curious trophy that inspires St. Nick to keep plugging the year 'round is shown at left. Engraved on its surface is the answer to this riddle:

What is it that's filled every morning and emptied every night, except once a year when it's filled all night and emptied in the morning?

To draw the objects outline, draw a line from dot to dot along the entire outer edge. Begin at any dot and end at the dot at which you began.



Jumbled Jingle

ELEVEN spelling each word of the following jingle are slightly jumbled. Place them in their proper order and you'll be able to read the poem. The first word is "It."

Ti ryrah lorde Satays het rhies,
Eht thres pimth thid sles eare;
Uth ewryd, silk runnesn lebdr,
pedrel,
Dne vesle tsh tyrom rsi.
A hlicl dask—nad yrtul lyak—
Nar nedrew yej tarplon,

Taking Her Measure

FROM her expression, it would seem the problem in hand has taken the measure of the young lady above. Perhaps you can help her.

Represented in reins form on the paper she's holding is a common unit of measurement, one that's equally well known in a department store, a lumber yard or just around the house.

This young lady doodled the picture as a reminder to buy a certain quantity of special ribbon. How much ribbon did she have in mind?

Problem of the 21 Xmas Trees

WHEN Jennings had cut all the Christmas trees for which he had orders this year, there were 21 left in his field placed as diagrammed above. By drawing eight straight lines, each tree can be placed in a separate enclosure.

Can you draw the lines correctly? There are to be exactly eight. Solution shown elsewhere on this page.

Christmas Quiz

NOW, your Christmas is in the air, a good time for a test of knowledge of this holiday season. Can you answer seven of the following questions the 1st time correctly?

1. In what other countries is Santa Claus known as (a) Father Christmas, (b) Kris Kringle, (c) Pere Noel?

2. The first three Christmas gifts—those of the Magi—were what three commodities?

3. The initials JHS appear at the Christmas feast symbolizing the three gifts how?

4. The original Christmas tree was not a fir or spruce, but which of these plant types: (a) Palm, (b) Apple?

5. The Christmas time kiss under the mistletoe is a survival of an ancient custom symbolizing what?

6. Santa Claus was a native of what country—Germany, Asia Minor, Italy, Finland?

7. The names of the eight reindeer, as told in "'Twas" from St. Nicholas, are: Dasher, Vixen, Prancer, Comet, Dobder, Dasher, Cupid and ——?

8. Christmas seals originated in which country: Denmark, Spain, Lapland, England?

9. Christmas is observed by some on Jan. 6. Why?

10. The sound of church bells ringing on Dec. 25, 1739, inspired Charles Wesley to write the words of what classic Christmas hymn?

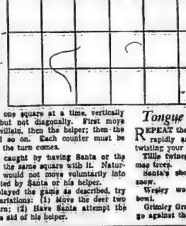
STAR IS A BE-DAZZLER

FIND it difficult to focus your eye on the star above? Everything seems to be moving, doesn't it?

This is a clever optical illusion in which circles are made with diamonds.

Cop this star and paste it to a piece of heavier paper or thin cardboard for a dazzling tree ornament. For further amusement, apply colors.

Find the Combination



AS presently arranged, candle-like bulbs on the tree at right above refuse to light. However, the situation can be remedied by switching bulbs in their sockets so that numbers on each of the three sides of the triangular arrangement total 13.

A duplicate tree with unnumbered bulbs is provided for you. How quickly can you effect the grouping that will light the tree?

Time limit for the problem is three minutes.

THERE'S A CATCH TO THIS ONE

SANTA and his aid are trying to collar Santa's new charger, Frisky, in the diagram at right, but the latter keeps running away.

This diagram will enable you to assist Santa and his helper in their problem. Cut out and mark paper counters of Santa, his friend and the deer. Place them in their respective positions on the diagram.

Counters move one square at a time, vertically or horizontally, but not diagonally. First Santa, then the villain, then the helper; then the villain again and so on. Each counter must be moved each time he comes.

The animal is caught by having Santa or the helper move into the same square with it. Naturally, the animal would not move voluntarily into the square occupied by Santa or his helper.

After you've played the game as described, try these or other variations: (1) Move the deer two squares at a turn; (2) Have Santa attempt the catch without the aid of his helper.

Tongue Twizzlers

REPEAT the following aloud as rapidly as possible without twisting your tongue:

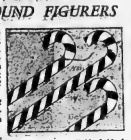
Tillie twines thread for Christmas trees.

Gentley shoog shoe signs of snow.

Wrigley wobbled the wassail bowl.

Grimley Grant's gifts generally go against the grain.

Replica of an Old-Fashioned Lantern

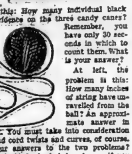


A REPLICA of an old-fashioned lantern, for use on the Christmas tree or elsewhere about the house, can be assembled from a paper container and plate. Components are suspended on a piece of gay ribbon.

Cup and plate, of course, must be of compatible size. A bright foil covering is suggested.

Lid assembly is shown in two steps above.

FOR ROUND FIGURERS



A PAIR of deceptive diagrams appear at right and below. They offer a challenge to the wits as well as a test of one's powers of observation.

A time limit of 30 seconds is imposed for each problem.

At right, above, the question is this: How many individual black stripes are in evidence on the three candy canes?

Remember, you have only 30 seconds in which to count them. What is your answer?

At left, the problem is this: How many inches of string have unraveled from the ball? An approximate answer is sought. You must take into consideration that the unwound cord twists and curves, of course. What are your answers to the two problems? After you have decided, check below to see if you are correct. No fair peeking!

A Knotty Question to Answer

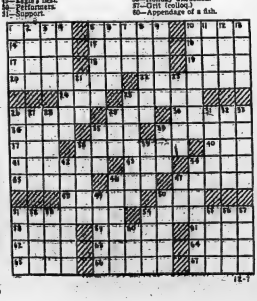
STRETCH a ribbon about 18 inches long beside the edge of a table. Invite a bystander to pick it up, holding one end in each hand, and tie it in a knot without releasing either end. How can he do it?

Find the Pair

TWO of the ornaments on the tree above are duplicates. How quickly can you find them?

Kiddies' Double-Feature Observation Test

SANTA may not be aware of it, but there are seven persons either in this kitchen or than himself in this room, right. How quickly can you find those who are hidden?



As a second test, see if you can find the same seven faces after you have colored the scene with colored pencils or crayons.

This time, you will probably take longer.

After you've tried, give some one else a chance.

Enigmatic Gent

I am a caller at every house where you may enter.
For daily I perambulate along each street.
Take one letter from me and still you will see
I'm the same as before, as I'll always be.
Take two letters from me, or three or four
I'll still be the same as I was before.
In fact, I can tell you that all my letters you may take,
Yet of me nothing else can you make.

As you probably know, enigma is the term given to a riddle in verse form in which the word or object that is the answer is concealed in deliberately mystifying allusions. Can you guess the answer to this one?

RAWDON

Two Public Schools Hold Combined Christmas Concert

RAWDON — A large ever-green tree with myriads of twinkling lights and centred with a miniature Santa Claus along with other Yuletide decorations welcomed a large audience to the combined Christmas concert of the two public schools in Mount Pleasant-Rawdon Church hall on Thursday evening.

The treasurers were Messrs. Archie Bailey and Mac Sharp and the proceeds were equally divided between the two schools.

Approximately 45 children, pupils of the Allan School, S.S. No. 3, Rawdon, and the Williams School, S.S. No. 4, Rawdon, under the direction of their teachers, Mrs. Grace ... Morton and Mrs. Joyce Parr, presented an enjoyable program. The music supervisor, Mrs. Lorne Watson, officiated at the piano and Mr. Kenneth Weaver manipulated the curtain.

The pastor, Rev. W. G. Fletcher, was master of ceremonies and welcomed the large audience.

The combined group sang two chorus selections as opening and closing numbers. They were "Glad Christmas" and "Old Santa Claus."

RECITATIONS GIVEN

Recitations were given by Linda Petts, Jim Scott, Karen Summers, Janet Scott, Donnie Petts and Larry Jaffs. Brenda Campbell gave two tap dance selections with Mrs. Carleton Potts as accompanist. Brenda also was "Snow Flake Suzy" in a chorus of 13 pupils of the Allan School.

Nine juniors of the Williams School presented an exercise, "Christmas Bells," while six juniors from the Allan School sang a chorus on the same theme.

The dialogues were given as follows: the pupils of Williams School presented, "With the Help of the Family," which was humorous, and three boys in Negro costume gave a second dialogue entitled, "Yassuh Boss."

Eleven seniors sang "Ring Out Sweet Bells of Christmas" and eight girls in costume with red sashes and Christmas wreaths, delighted with a drill.

Jim and Janet Scott contributed a vocal duet with their sister, Miss Gail Scott, as accompanist. Carol Sharpe, dressed in costume representing a grandmother, gave a monologue, "The Day After Christmas."

JUNIORS SING

Four juniors of the Williams School sang, "The Naked Doll," while 10 juniors from the Allan school presented a Christmas exercise. Gordon Hoard sang "Santa Claus and His Sleigh." The pupils of the Allan School rendered two dialogues, "Discussing the Subject," emphasized the Golden Rule, "Do unto others as you would like them to do unto you," while six boys gave "Christmas Blessings," and Kalvin Sharp sang "Rudolph the Red Nosed Reindeer" without accompaniment.

The Williams School sang two Christmas songs and six girls demonstrated "Mince Pie for Christmas." A pantomime, "Away In A Manger," brought the program to a close.

A vote of appreciation was tendered the two public school teachers and the music supervisor.

Santa arrived with treats for all children and assisted in distributing the large array of gifts.

The Allan School pupils presented Mrs. Morton with an electric table lamp with black base. The Williams School pupils presented Mrs. Parr with two black wall plaques trimmed with gold.

One of the most successful "Teen Age" dances to be held at the Lions Hall was the Christmas dance held on Saturday night. A good crowd of the youngsters were on hand and danced until midnight to the music of popular records. The committee in charge served refreshments for the benefit of all and it was enjoyed as only youngsters can enjoy food.

The Legion Christmas Party was held in the Legion Hall on the afternoon of December 21st and there were 178 children and their parents present. For entertainment, Mr. R. Batt led the children in the singing of Christmas carols, while he accompanied them on the piano.

Following the carols, Santa Claus arrived at the hall in a great hustle, greeted each child individually, and presented each one with a gift and candies.

Following the presentations, a draw was held for a Christmas cake prepared by the Auxiliary, which was won by William Miller.

The festivities which began at 1.30 lasted until after four o'clock. The committee in charge worked hard to make it an event which will live long in the minds of the children.

Radio

All the resources of radio will be brought into use again this year for the Christmas programmes and deeper meaning to the Christmas message will find its place in millions of Canadian homes. Often great gaps of difference and time will be bridged as the Christmas microphone carries the glider from through history in search of anything and everything which will enhance our festivities.

Always a highlight on Christmas morning is the globe-girdling world-ranging broadcast, to be presented this year by the BBC Commonwealth Broadcast, 1958 Christmas Commonwealth program, and the weekly broadcast "Calling Says:

The Queen's broadcast will be preceded by the traditional feature that links the countries of the Commonwealth and Empire or this year's program is the Christmas story told in the famous line from Tennyson's Ulysses — "to strive, to seek, to find, and not to yield" — and the words that appear on the great memorial to Scott in the Antarctic Captain Scott in the Antarctic. The program is a Christmas greeting to the seekers of new lands, the finders of new knowledge, and the pioneers of the Commonwealth, and it has been written by the Irish author and poet H. A. L. Craig.

STRONG LINK

There is a strong link between the great Antarctic explorers, most of whom have been Irish, and inspired by the "first" of this year's Christmas broadcasts, and the Irish people of the British Commonwealth, and although the program will be a complete more than geographical exploration, the Tennysonian line will be a strong inspiration for the men and women who will be the seekers, the finders, and the undefeated people of the British Commonwealth of Nations.

"To Seekers" will be narrated for the Australian actor Peter Finch. The big-it proceeding the Sovereign's message will begin with a 15-minute program of interlinkin words and music on the theme of pioneers, past and present, in all realms of thought and endeavor. The music has been specially written by William Alwyn, a leading British composer, and will be conducted by Muir Mathieson, of the BBC features department, who has collaborated closely with Alwyn in producing what will be a unique program. It will be spoken by Peter Finch."

Laurence Gilliam, who produced with Alan Burgess, has directed all of the BBC's annual broadcasts to the Commonwealth shows except the first one, 26 years ago.

Having wandered around the world in the morning, listeners will be asked to explore their own country on Christmas afternoon via the Canadian Christmas Almanac, from 12.15-6.00 p.m. It will be a Christmas fourth-dimensional again the main ingredients will be music and actualities from all parts of the Dominion.

During the course of the afternoon there will be musical Christmas greetings from the Happy Gang in Toronto, Mell Cheiton and his orchestra from Montreal, the folk-singer Allan Mills, Bert Whitman and Parker's jazz sextet in Vancouver, the Prairie Schooner, the Belsky Armories school choirs in Newfoundland, Eddie Richards' Oyster Street quintet in Halifax. The Richards group will be familiar to everyone in Canada by the name of the Happy of the Springhill mine disaster, for it provided interludes between reports from the mine-head.

VISIT ST. JOHN

Actualities on Almanac will include a visit to the Saint John waterfront with Ken Hgmer, a visit to the Eskimo Christmas celebration on a farm in northern Saskatchewan with an ITV cosmic research scientist at work, and a conversation with the Saint Bailey.

On Christmas evening the listeners will have opportunities to wander south and north, radio-wise, from Hollywood to the tropics and beyond for an hour-long report on how people in other countries celebrate the day. The show is called Green Christmas and there will be "green yield" — how people in such countries as Argentina, Brazil, Colombia, Ghana, Trinidad in Northern Merseyside, an hour of festivities and entertainment directed from the people of southern Canada to their fellow-countrymen in the north and especially of the vicinity of Whitehorse, only recently linked to the CBC radio network for regular program services; the show will include greetings from Governor-General Vanier, music and messages from Government and CBC officials.

MEDIEVAL MYSTERY PLAYS

Adaptations by George Wood-cock of medieval English and English mystery plays, which gave rise to Christmas pageantry during the history of the world in dramatic form from the fall of Lucifer to the birth of the Saviour, will be presented on CBC Wednesday Night at 9.30 p.m. They to be heard are The Fall of Lucifer, from the cycle of plays that became associated with Coventry, The Fall of Man, from the York cycle, Abraham and Isaac, from the Brome cycle, The Annuncia tion and The Nativity, from the Wakefield cycle. There will be a simple commentary linking the plays, which will be produced by Gerald Newman.

CBC-TV Christmas Schedule Promises Top Entertainment

For most people, the charm be lit from the outside to enthe of Christmas lies in things re hance the ceremony from the membered — timeless delights inner to the timeless depths of the Babe in the manger and thing. Viewers may look for in three wise men who followed the brocade altar frontal, a gift a star, the mulled-ale flavor and of Christmas Carols, which will crackling yule log of the Pick- be used in Westminster Abbey for wick, the turkey with plum- the coronation of Queen Elizabeth in family carols, and all the fantasies of a thousand gaily- wrapped story books. If it can conjure up just a few of these images or such a whiff of the nostalgia they evoke, CBC-TV's Christmas schedule will have more than done its job.

Christmas Eve will be unique for at least one reason, for the CBC itself only. Rev. Brian Strand, assistant supervisor of religious programs and author of many broadcast dramas, will make his television debut when he conducts a Christmas Eve Holy Communion Service at St. John's Convalescent Hospital in Toronto. He has conducted the medicinal service there for a number of years but this will be the first time it has been televised. The stained-glass windows in the hospital chapel will too) will regard the scheduling of Walt Disney's Dumbo at 11 a.m. on Christmas Day as a present. The lovable baby elephant with his enormous flapping ears is the star of Disney's gayest and warmest productions.

At 12.30 Winnipeg will provide a special half-hour Christmas Day variety show, then from 1.30 to 3.00 p.m. for a message from CBC president J. Alphonse Ouimet, and Opera- tion Christmas, a drama in which some flying-saucer men bring a present for the Christmas "peace on earth."

At 3.00 p.m. we will be some people who won't be spending Christmas at home with their families. Typical of these are the men of the Canadian armed forces serving overseas — in the Middle East with "the United Nations" emergency force or on the far north ports. Defence Minister G. R. Pearkes will interview Brigadier-General Wm. Forcet at 1.30, a filmed program of the "Canadian Sky Spotters" will begin to spend Christmas with us. Other segments were filmed at Camp Petawawa and Rafah, headquarters of the Canadian base unit. Other segments were filmed at the Canadian Army Headquarters in Germany where the cameras moves to Christmas in Canada at 2 p.m. which will show some of the ways in which the feast is celebrated in Canada. Viewers will see a Christmas Eve as a remote trading post in Northern Ontario to show how the Christmas-eving customs of the Indians are still carried on. Another segment of the series will take a look-at toys that made children's eyes sparkle in years gone by and compare them with gifts received today. The Christmas Day edition will come from a skiing resort in the Laurentians as check is made on the Christmas Day profits of both Christmas Seals and Christmas Cheer. We will look in on some new arrivals celebrating Christmas in ways unique to the school of their birth. Script for Christmas in Canada is by James Mennie.

TRADITIONAL DINNER

The traditional Yule fire will be the focal point for the Christmas Day edition of Canada Calls, the program gathered around, mounts wa-ering, as Madame Benoit does the traditional French Canadian Christmas dinner menu of boiled stuffed with buckwheat, ham cooked in cider and simmered in the cooking juice, and roast goose. After-dinner conversation will be directed by Jean Don with the aid of columnists Frank Tumpane and Greg Clark.

Last Christmas the Vancouver-ver presented a musical version of the Nativ- ity. The Three Kings proved so popular that it is being done again this year, 5 p.m. The music for the production was written by Vancouver composer Harrison Crabb- berg with words by Joy Coghill.

Another highlight for the younger set will be the film of Wonderful Copenhagen, produced by Lou Bunin, one of Europe's top puppet masters. He has combined live actors and fairy characters to make stories for children more believable. The film's prologue takes viewers to Odense (Hans Christian) Lewis Carroll, the mathematician who told wonderful tales.

As Christmas Day draws to a close, CBC-TV will present the Canadian entertainers get together for a special show with Tommy Hunter, Gisele Mackenzie, Don Gillis, Bob Goulet, Wally Koster, Denny Vaughan, Chuc Gillis, Bobby Vaughan, Paul Kligman and Mary Ellis Kariott Sawyer with Samuel Hersenhorn's orchestra.

CBC-TV has allowed little to the Christmas Day schedule with the exception of the film, which will be shown on Christmas Eve.

Five Special News Programs Listed for Year-End by CBS

By CHARLES MERCER

NEW YORK (AP)—CBS news certainly isn't taking the new year lying down.

The network will offer five special year-end programs in the field of news and special events this coming Sunday and a fourth day later, Jan. 4. The lineup (all times Eastern Standard):

This Sunday (Dec. 28) The Year Gone By at 2:30 p.m. offers a two - hour assessment of arts, sciences and humanities during 1958 by authorities in their fields.

At 4:30 p.m. the network presents The Face of Red China, a filmed hour-long report of what is happening inside the country —the first of its kind to appear on American television. At 10 p.m. CBS correspondents will present their annual analysis of world conditions in Years of Crisis.

The following Sunday, Jan. 4: At 3 p.m. is The Big News of '58, an hour review of the significant news developments of the last year. At 4 p.m. there will be the second annual report on Where We Stand, a program comparing the U.S. and Russia in the areas of arms, economics, and education.

Last year's Where We Stand was a great success in terms of both a large viewing audience and enthusiastic reviews.

An indication of the work involved in such a program is the fact that it cost $160,000 to produce—the equivalent of many entertainment specials.

John Daly, director of news for CBS, said Where We Stand "is the survival of civilization—surely the most important subject in the world."

Astair Proved to Be Santa For Dancer Barrie Chase

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Christmas came a little early for Barrie Chase—Oct. 11.

That was the night she co-starred with Fred Astair on the dancer's first TV spectacular. Fred proved to be her Santa Claus.

The compliments started pouring in as soon as the show went off the air. The first to call was critic John Crosby, who did a rave for the telecast. When the show was repeated on the west coast the phone calls came in from film stars and producers.

The offers started coming. Producers, agents, TV shows sought her services.

OPTION TAKEN UP

They discovered that she was not exactly free. Barrie had played a bit in Mardi Gras and 20th Century-Fox retained an option to sign her for a term contract. This was done immediately. And her name was hastily added to the ads for Mardi Gras.

Barrie was scheduled to do a specialty number in Say One for Me. She was pulled out of it because something bigger was planned for her: She'll be one of the stars of Can-Can.

How does all this leave her?

"Very happy," she said. "And very grateful to Fred. He couldn't have given my career a better send-off."

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

You will have read it and heard it from a thousand and one other sources, so there is no point in this department stressing the fact that tomorrow is one of the greatest days of the year.

It will be, or should be, a great day for thanksgiving for merchants and children for it climaxes a season or so of frenzied business, exchanges not included, for the gentlemen of the counters, and possibly a week or more of excited anticipation on the part of the youngsters, not to mention folks, even as you and I.

It is the day, we are told, when all personal and other animosities should be forgotten, if at least temporarily, and all people join together in the great festive occasion of Christmas.

Any run-of-the-mill turkey will tell you that this holiday-like Thanksgiving is one strictly for the birds, although a lot of them are not around to appreciate it. They won't even appreciate the New Year because they have reached and passed the hash and soup stage by that time.

Christmas morning, the only one of the year when the alarm clock is beaten to the punch, is something a fellow never forgets. There is a special heartwarming kiss from the better half when she unwraps that parcel, being it mink or monkey fur. And you suffer itchy fingers yourself deciding the age of adult experience when you view the package marked "To Dad from ——."

If you are a family man you will be contronted by a grim-faced Matt Dillon, Yancy Derringer, Wild Bill Hickok or a dozen other western lawmen, a man from Mars or an outer space pilot, or perhaps by a happy-faced youniker who wants you to try the new electric train. You needn't tell him how it works since you tried it the night before.

Then later the joy of roasted turkey, plum pudding, and all the trimmings.

Folks will drop in, or maybap you will "do the rounds" where you will quaff a beaker of Christmas cheer.

At night you will retire, tired and happy with the conclusion that this was the best Christmas yet.

It might not be a bad idea to remember to be thankful. Thankful that we live in one of the best countries in the world where most are free to act and worship as they choose. Thankful that we are part and parcel of a land that gives us the opportunity to live in an atmosphere of democracy; that we are part of its vitality and activity, not serfs under a mailed fist or iron heel.

And we might be thankful for what God has given us. We have only to hear or read about the plight of millions in foreign lands where Christmas is not a holiday of joyous festivity and religious celebration, merely another day in hand-to-mouth existence under state supervision that has no heart.

We are lucky in being what we are. Never forget that.

So go ahead and enjoy yourselves. And may all things that are good come your way resolving themselves into a great and glorious

MERRY CHRISTMAS

Harvey's Remarkable String May End This Season

Injuries Factor in Decline Of Habs' Starry Defenceman; Johnson Comes Into Own

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

This may be the season for Doug Harvey to lose his pre-eminent position among National Hockey League defencemen.

For the last four seasons the veteran Montreal Canadiens star has won the Norris Trophy as the league's top rearguard and for the last seven has been a member of the NHL's first all-star team; but that remarkable string may be broken this season.

It's been an unlucky year so far for the husky Montrealer.

First he missed nine games when he injured his ankle in a mid-ice collision and then Thursday, just when he was rounding back into form, a flying puck caught him in the throat during a practice, causing a hemorrhage of the vocal cords that will keep him out of one game at least.

The ankle injury was a bother-some one and there is little doubt it kept Harvey from staying at his peak after he returned to action, but it may be too that at 34 those powerful legs are beginning to feel the strain of more than 10 NHL campaigns.

PLAY FALLING OFF

Certainly his record thus far, even allowing for the games he has missed, is a far cry from his old performances.

In 22 games this season, including a couple in which he was dressed but saw little action, he has scored just once and collected four assists.

Last season after 22 games he had two goals and 11 assists and over the season he made it nine and 32, and for the last six seasons he has never got less than 30 assists.
